EDITORIAL OPINION OF WARREN

Anderson Daily Mail editorially states: "George Warren is going to be very much in the running for United States Senate. His doctrine of State's Rights is proving very popular."

Aiken Standard editorially says: "George Warren of Hampton has been growing in popular favor since his entry into the race for United States Senator."

WARREN SHOULD BE ELECTED.

After hearing the Senatorial candidates in Edgefield on Thursday of last week, we feel that we voice the sentiment of the majority of Edgefield county voters when we say that Hon. George Warren should be promoted to this important post. His speech was a revelation to our people, proving him easily capable of taking most excellent care of himself, and quite able to handle the most astute speaker that might be waiting for him in the Upper House in Washington. Warren is clean and gifted, and entirely worthy of the confidence and full support of all our people. We believe South Carolina is going to vote on August 31st just as we feel Edgefield county will vote—by casting a decidedly significant majority for George Warren.—Edgefield Chronicle.

NATIONWIDE FIGHT AGAINST DISEASE

American Red Cross Will Have Health Centers in All Parts of United States.

The American Red Cross has launched upon a nation wide campaign of fighting disease and physical defect among the American people. A new and unique health institution has come into being as the result of several months' study by the Red Cross Health Service Department at National Headquarters.

Officials in charge of the department predict that before long this new health activity will be in actual operation all over the country, and that the sign—"American Red Cross Health Center"—will become as familiar to the people everywhere as are now the signs of the telegraph companies.

Busy Long Before War.

The interest of the American Red Cross in the fight against disease is not, however, of recent origin. Long before the war the organization began this health service through its medical units in disaster relief work and its department of Town and County Nursing. During the war and following the assistance thousands of American Red Cross officials have been fighting disease in the war-stricken countries. At the same time tens of thousands of local Red Cross officials have been engaged at home fighting disease, notably during the influenza epidemics.

The American Red Cross has determined that all this valuable experience in health service abroad and at home shall not go to waste. So long as there are a half a million people dying yearly in this country from preventable causes, and so long as more than one-third of the American children and young people are victims of physical defects, the Red Cross recognizes the urgent need for continued Red Cross health service at home.

How Organization Works.

The Red Cross Health Center is governed by business principles, applies business methods, and, in its more simple form, can be established and conducted by lay people.

It proceeds upon the demonstrated fact that health is a commodity that can be bought and sold like brooms and soap. Therefore, it establishes itself in a storeroom in the principal business section of the community. It displays its goods in the form of attractive health exhibits in its show window. It advertises constantly and extensively. And it uses every business and social device to attract customers.

The Red Cross Health Center is of service to the sick in that it gives out reliable and complete information about existing clinics, hospitals, sanatoria and other institutions for the sick and the defective; about available nurses, both trained and practical; about when to consult a physician and why to shun the quack; and his nostrums.

Teaching Disease Prevention.

The Red Cross Health Center is, however, of even greater service to the well. It teaches people how to prevent sickness and disease. This is done in many interesting and attractive ways—first of all, by the distribution of popular health literature and through health lectures illustrated with lantern slides or with health motion picture films. Then special exhibits are given, one after the other, on various health subjects. Practical demonstrations are made; also health playlets by children to interest and instruct themselves and their elders. Classes are organized in personal hygiene, home care of the sick, first aid and in food selection and preparation. Health clubs, both for younger and older people, are formed; also Little Mothers' Leagues. Nutrition and growth clinics are conducted for children.

Already more than a hundred of these Red Cross Health Centers are in actual operation throughout the country. Many of them also conduct medical clinics, but the one chief, outstanding feature of the American Red Cross Health Center is its health education service which teaches well people how to keep well.

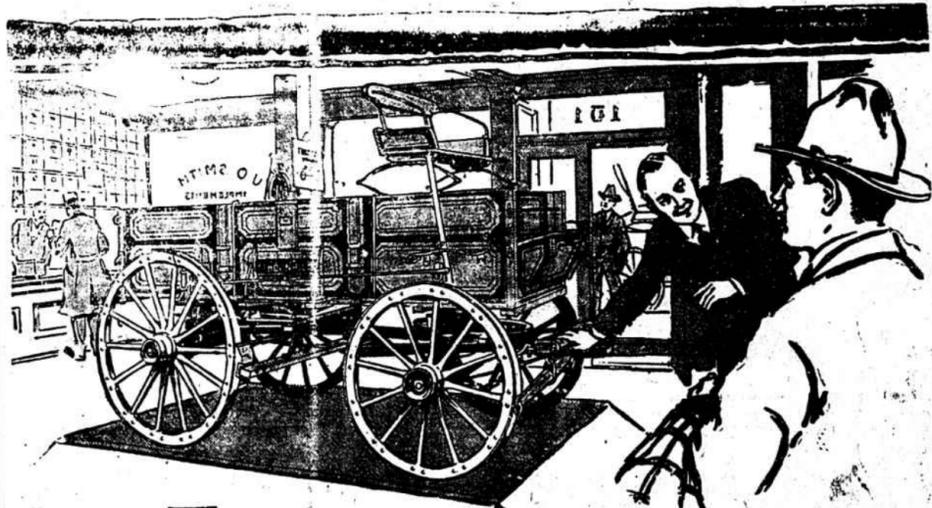

FRENCH PRAISE FOR OUR RED CROSS WORK

Lauding the work accomplished by American philanthropy for war-stricken France, Andre Tardieu, former high commissioner from that nation to the United States, in a recent article widely commented on throughout the French press, says:

"The American Red Cross has accomplished a work which calls for the heartfelt gratitude of every true Frenchman. In 1918 this great relief organization spent in behalf of France nearly 87,000,000 francs, and in 1919 its expenditures on charitable projects in our country attained the tremendous total of 171,000,000. It has recently turned over to the French relief organizations huge stocks of supplies whose value must be counted in the hundreds of thousands of francs.

"Fifteen million American boys and girls, banded together in the Junior Red Cross of America, are back of a movement to establish the closest ties between themselves and France's younger generation through the charitable works they have financed and are now carrying out among our little war sufferers.

"The bonds of friendship between France and America is cemented with mutual admiration, respect and gratitude."

Upon These Arguments We Rest Our Case

YOU, the buyers, are the real builders of wagons. You put the final Okay upon the use of certain materials and construction when you buy a wagon containing them—and refuse to buy a wagon that does not. We want to show you how the Thornhill Wagon is built. Upon a plain statement of facts we are willing to rest our case. We believe the Thornhill way would be your way if you should build a wagon.

For spokes and axles tough second growth highland hickory is used. For hubs and felloes the sturdy white oak is preferred. This wood grows upon the mountain side. The ground is hard—the climate severe. It has to fight for life. It has nearly twice the strength of oak and hickory that grows under softer conditions. Outdoors under shelter it remains for three to five years. The cap cries in it, giving it a strength that's kin to steel.

THORNHILL WAGONS

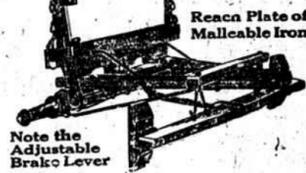

Full Circle Iron Malleable Front Hound Plate

Can't Turn in Turning

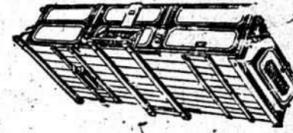

In turning and backing up, with the ordinary circle iron, which is only a half circle, bolsters run off the end of the track and hang. It is difficult to make short turns and back up. The Thornhill full circle iron gives a continuous track on which the bolsters can turn.

Trussed Bolsters and Gears

On the front bolsters of Thornhill wagons are heavy iron plates running along top and bottom—connected by rivets that run clear through the bolster. Strength and lightness are combined. Rear gears are strongly ironed. There are brackets on both top and bottom that extend the full length of the bolsters. Solid trust bars extend the full length of the bolsters—stronger than double the ordinary.

Long Wear Beds

If you examine the beds of Thornhill Wagons closely you will see the superiority of the construction. Bottoms are reinforced over front and rear bolsters. Come in and examine the wagon yourself. We will take pleasure in showing you a Thornhill wagon made of tough highland hickory—with a strength that's kin to steel.

LADY ASTOR MAKES APPEAL TO MEN OF SOUTH ON SUFFRAGE

Washington, Aug. 17.—Lady Astor, formerly Nancy Langhorne, of Virginia, now Great Britain's first woman M. P., has sent an urgent appeal to the men of the South to bring about the ratification of the woman suffrage amendment in Tennessee.

The message comes to the men of the South, particularly those in Tennessee, through Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, president of the National Woman Suffrage association. It reads as follows:

"I want to send a message to the men of the South because I came from the South, and feel that I know and understand it as one can understand the place of one's birth and childhood. I know the strong sense of justice and honor that lives in the hearts of the people. I know their chivalry, too, and it is just because I appreciate that I, as a woman, am anxious that it should be representative of the present and so only of the past—that it should be a progressive chivalry, equal to the needs and aspirations of the women of today, not content to give merely what was demanded of it in the old days.

"I am writing to you from the country of my adoption—a country which has taken the great step and given political responsibility to its women. As it happens, I am one of the women to whom the new opportunity for service has come most directly, and it is partly on that account that I am appealing to you of the South.

"I am at present entrusted by the people of the Sutton division of Plymouth to represent them, men and women alike, in parliament. They are something like 17,000 women others in my constituency, and over 3,000 men, who include a large number of men in the Royal navy. I would indeed feel hard that one could not have the same trust from the men of my home land which has been given to me so generously in the land of my adoption. But the responsibility they have laid on me is only the outcome of the responsibility which they have already placed on all women by giving them the vote. Trusting a woman in parliament cannot be done till you have trusted women at the ballot-box. A democracy which only trusts its men cannot help being a lop-sided democracy. I know the South too well to believe that they will interpret their own constitution of popular government less democratically than this country, from which I write, has interpreted its constitution of limited monarchy.

"The cause of women's political freedom has been won in America where one of the first shots in the campaign was fired. But the forces working against justice and progress are still strong enough to raise technical objections and to delay the full realization of the victory.

"On August 6 the governor of Tennessee will call that legislature into special session to consider the ratification of the federal amendment for women's suffrage. Thirty-five states have given their hand and seal, but one is lacking. Will not the South give that one? So strong is my faith in the South that I feel it almost an impertinence to ask them a question. Remember we are making a new world, and women—mothers—long to have a share in the sort of world in which their children must live. We have moral courage and spiritual vision. Give us the chance to help you. We don't want to be little men, but we do want to be big mothers."
