

Ladies' Department.

TOO MANY LOVERS WILL PUZZLE A MAID.
Toussaint had lovers so many, that she hardly knew on which to decide;
They all spoke sincerely, and promised to be all worthy of such a sweet bride.

THE BEAUTIFUL SEAMSTRESS.
Sure sits by the window, sewing all day,
With a quiet and winning grace;
And oft from my chamber over the way,
I gaze on her beautiful face.

Now often I wish she'd lay her work by,
Nor labor so hard all the day—
For I fear it will dim the bonny bright eye
Of my neighbor over the way.

NO WOMAN IS EDUCATED, says Burknapp, who is not equal to the successful management of a family.
Although it does not require so much to rule a household as it does to govern a State, still it requires talent of the same kind.

DAUGHTERS who neglect this part of education are entirely without excuse, and their mothers are still more to blame.
The very apology which is often made for the neglect of it, is the greatest condemnation of those who are growing up in ignorance of those things.

WIT AND HUMOR.
Oh! talk not to me of your charming young misers.
With cheeks like the ruby and teeth like the pearl,
Eyes sparkling with mischief—and lips pouting for kisses,

TO MY CIGAR.
While love lurks beneath each encircling curl,
Though these I admire—still claiming no merit
For candor, my failing, I here will declare;
And oh! blame not, for the vice I inherit.

MARRIED LIFE.—Julius Moser gives the following counsel, from a wife and mother:
"I try to make myself and all around me agreeable. It will not do to leave a man no pains to attract him, or to appear before him with a long face. It is not so difficult as you think, dear child, to be to a husband and to his family, as to appear before him with a long face.

WOMAN was doubtless made to soothe the sorrows of man! For what sound so musical as her soft kind voice, when the heart of man sunk in deep despondency, or overwhelmed with life's bitter cares, draws in upon itself, and feeds upon its griefs, and wraps about it that heavy drapery which shuts it from the outer world?

ASKING TOO MUCH.—A young couple were sitting together in a romantic spot, with birds and flowers about them, when the following dialogue ensued:
"Dear, if the sacrifice of my life would please thee, gladly would I lay it at thy feet."

THE DEVIL YOU HAVE! interrupted Pat—
"Quaker sat down in confusion, but the spirit moving further, the young man mustered courage, and broke ground again.

for her and her little ones all the day?
It may be for a man to be peevish, for it is he who bears the crosses of the world, but who should make him forget them but his own wife!
And she had best for her own sake, for nobody can scold much when the scolding is all on one side."

LADIES BEWARE.
The annexed nine cautions to young ladies are almost as important as the ten commandments laid down in the good book.
We quote them for the benefit of our young and unsophisticated maiden readers, who may not yet have "told" their love; and who will, we trust, pay due attention to the sound advice here given, ere they tie the "silken cord," for better or for worse.

1. Never marry for wealth, never make money an object of marriage.—"Will thou set thine eyes upon that which is not?"
A man's life consisteth not in the things which he possesseth.

2. Never marry a fop, or one who struts about dandy-like in his silk gloves and ruffles, with silvered cane, and rings on his fingers. Beware! there is a trap!

3. Never marry a niggard, a closefisted, mean, sordid wretch, who saves every penny, or spends grudgingly.—Take care, lest he stint you to death.—Beware of the trap.

4. Never marry a stranger, or one whose character is not known or tested. Some females jump right into the fire with their eyes open.

5. Never marry a mope or a drone, one who draws and draggles through life, one foot after another, and lets things take their course.—"Drowsiness sloucheth a man in rags."

6. Never marry a man who treats his mother or sister unkindly or indifferently; such treatment is a sure indication of a mean and wicked heart. And a young man guilty of such meanness, will never make a good husband. Beware! ladies beware!

7. Never, on any account, marry a gambler, a spend-thrift, a Sabbath-breaker, a profane person, one who in the least speaks lightly or carelessly of God, and holy things. Such a man, whatever qualifications he may possess, can never make a true husband.—Beware.

8. Never marry a sinner, a man who is negligent of his person and dress, and of filthy habits. The external appearance often indicates the state of the mind and heart. With the pure all things are pure.

9. Shun the rake as a snake, a viper, or a demon.

MR. TWOMBLY'S MISTAKE.—Mr. Thos. Twombly had drunk six glasses of brandy and water, when, being a man of discretion, he returned home at the seasonable hour of 1 a. m., and went soberly to bed. Mrs. Thomas Twombly was too well accustomed to the comings and goings of said Thomas, to be much disturbed by the trifling noise he made on retiring; but when she discovered that he had his boots on, she requested him to remove them, or keep his feet out of the bed.

"My dear," said Mr. Twombly, in an apologetic tone, "excuse me! How I came to forget the boots I can't conceive, for I am just as sober as I ever was in my life."

Mr. Twombly sat on the side of the bed and made an effort to pull off his right boot. The attempt was successful, though it brought him to the floor. On regaining his feet, Mr. Twombly thought he saw the door open. As he was sure he shut the door on coming in, he was astonished, and, dark as it was in the room, he couldn't be mistaken, he felt certain. Mr. Twombly staggered towards the door to close it, when to his great surprise, he saw a figure approach from beyond. Twombly stopped; the figure stopped. Twombly advanced again; the figure did the same. Twombly raised his right hand; the figure raised its left.

"Who's there?" roared Twombly, beginning to be frightened. The object made no reply. Twombly raised his boot in a menacing attitude; the figure defied him by shaking a similar object.

"By the Hokey," cried Twombly, "I'll find out who you be, you sneakin' kuss!" He hurled the boot full at the head of the mysterious object, when—crash! went the big looking glass which Twombly had mistaken for the door. Twombly has reformed since, and is an ardent advocate of Temperance Societies; but grows very nervous when looking glasses are mentioned.

MAKE YOURSELF AT HOME.
Old Merry was a candidate for the office of representative in one of the counties of the Old Dominion, and was a man of wealth, and had some considerable pretensions to the etiquette of the class of gentlemen known as the "Old Virginia gentlemen"—in other words, he was a genuine F. V. He was not above the practice of those little attentions to the candidate, now so often stooped to by the candidates for office, especially in a close race. His neighbor-in-law, Billy Dodge, one of the electors of the county, was a plain old farmer, belonging, we suppose, by the rule of ratiocination, to the order of S. F. V. He was, moreover, a man of horse sense, and hearing that his neighbor Merry had become a candidate for the Legislature, and being of different politics, he concluded to kill his new born courtesy, by putting it to the torture of a severe trial. Accordingly, choosing a day when he knew his friend Merry had several visitors at his house, he repaired thither, and halloed at the gate. This soon brought Mr. Merry with your humble servant sort of a smile on his countenance.

He invited him in, and it being very warm weather, asked him to take a seat in the piazza, where many of his male visitors were sitting. He bowed and scraped around him a good deal, hoping to gain his good will, and make him a proselyte to his interests in the election, and insisted that he should make himself comfortable, just as he would at home.

Old Billy put on the most awkward appearance he possibly could, turned about a time or two, then took off his coat and sat down. The attention of Mr. Merry, as may be supposed, did not cease, and presently he asked his neighbor to take a drink of wine, which he did.

"Take a seat, Mr. Dodge, take a seat," said Mr. Merry; "make yourself quite easy, and do just as you would at home."

"Thank you," said Dodge, "I am doing very well, only my shoes are a little uncomfortable, so I believe I'll take 'em off," and sitting the action to the word, off they came. Mr. Merry looked a little astonished, but said nothing. Presently Mr. Dodge divested himself of his jump jacket, as he called it, at the same time observing:

"I hope I don't intrude, but its so uncomfortable."

"Very well sir; since this is the way you lay down your life for me, and as you are already wedded to tobacco, I'll take good care that you are never wedded to me, as it would be bigamy."
