THE COTTON PLANT
INSURANCE COMPANY,
69 Liberty Street, New York.
The Original Stock Life Insurance Co. of the United States.
OFFICERS:
WILLIAM WALKER, President.
HENRY J. FURBER, Vice-President JOHN H. BUNLEY, Secretary.
GEORGE L. MONTAGUE, Actuary. E. W. LAMBERT, M. D., Med. Ex.

This company offers the following important advantages to those who desire to insure their lives:
1st. Insurance at Stock Rates, being from 20 to 30 Per Cent. less than the Rates charged by Mutual Companies.
2d. Each Policyholder is regarded as a Stockholder in the extent of one Annual Premium on his Policy, and will share in the Profits of the Company to the same extent as a Stockholder owning an equal amount of the Capital Stock.
3d. The Policyholder's share in the Profits of the Company is non-forfeitable, and he retains a Clause stating its exact Surrender Value.
4th. Before insuring your life, you should consult the Agency of ANY COMPANY.
READ THE FOLLOWING:
A lengthy and expensive report, published in the Standard, and charged by LIFE Insurance Companies, is a gross misstatement of facts, and a grossly unfair and unjustifiable attempt to injure the Cotton Plant Insurance Company. In other words, carefully and prudently managed Companies charging the same rates have been able to reduce to their policyholders from 25 to 30 per cent. the amount charged for premiums.
When LIFE Insurance Companies were first organized, the policyholder's share in the profits was not considered as an element in the calculation of the premiums. These results from a saving in the mortality of the members of a Company owing to the selection of good lives, a gain in interest on the investments of the Company over that assumed in the calculation of its premiums, the profits derivable from the lapsing and surrender of Policies by the members, and from other minor sources.
Experience has shown that there are sources of profit in the practice of the business which would not be admitted of being considered as elements in the calculation of the premiums. These results from a saving in the mortality of the members of a Company owing to the selection of good lives, a gain in interest on the investments of the Company over that assumed in the calculation of its premiums, the profits derivable from the lapsing and surrender of Policies by the members, and from other minor sources.
The plan adopted for such division is as follows: Every person who may hereafter insure with the Universal will, for the purpose of division, be treated as a stockholder to the extent of one Annual Premium on his Policy, and will share in the profits of the Company to precisely the same extent as a Stockholder owning an equal amount of the Capital Stock.
By this system of Insurance, original with the Universal, the policyholder secures the following important advantages:
First. Insurance at the regular "Stock" rates, requiring a primary outlay of about twenty to thirty per cent. less than that charged by Mutual Companies, and which is equivalent to a yearly "dividend" and the value of that amount on mutual rates. This low cost of insurance is worthy of attention. Since its organization this Company has received in premiums from its policyholders the sum of $1,517,000. To effect the same amount of insurance in a Mutual Company would have cost them an initial outlay of $2,000,000. By allowing its policyholders to retain in their own possession this sum of $1,517,000, the Company has virtually paid them a "dividend" of $483,000, and paid it, too, in advance, instead of at the end of one or more years. It is impossible to find any example of a Mutual Company furnishing insurance at so low a cost to returning to its policyholders an equal amount upon similar receipts.
Second. Participation in the legitimate profits of the Company, upon a plan which secures to the policyholders the same treatment as Directors and Stockholders accord to themselves. This system of participation in connection with the low "stock" rates of insurance, most necessarily secure to the policyholders every possible advantage to be derived from prudent and careful management.
The low rates of premium equal economy, and independent of participation, guarantee to the policyholder his insurance at a rate which is not in excess of the cost in well managed mutual companies; while, by the proposed plan of participation in the profits, what may be considered the legitimate profits of the business, the cost will be still further diminished.
Thus by the combined advantages arising from low stock rate and participation in the profits it is confidently believed that the UNIVERSAL LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY offers insurance at its lowest rate, and the value of that amount on mutual rates. These are the existing policyholders who desire to participate in the Profits under the new plan can do so by making application to the Head Office, or to any of the Agents of the Company.
The Company is in a sound financial condition.
Ratio of Assets to Liabilities 136 to 100.

In the Brighter Days to Come.

In the brighter days to come,
Wishful for the dawn,
That shall surround the weary heart
Lies shadows of the tomb.
The sunshine shall brightly fall
Upon life's golden store,
And ere that through our pathway now,
Welcome to us no more.

It is the dream of brighter hours
That cheer our hearts to-day,
Whom wees blushing through the thorns,
Will laden all my way.
And lo! the starry crown he set,
On his unfeeling brow,
Hope rapsers that a diaphanous
Is waiting there for me.

Alas! my many pilgrims here
Are reaching long in vain
For brighter days of happiness
To come to them, and I am here,
They never see how cold and dark
The shadows round them lie,
For though bright stars send us their pure ray
Through the gloomy sky.

If there ever comes to us
The joy which we want,
'Tis that sweet voice that leads us still
To our heavenly home,
It is the angel who comes
A messenger of love,
To brighten the hours of life,
And lead us home above.

Eva, or the Mason's Daughter.
CHAPTER I.

Faster and faster spread the flames, and now the ship was enveloped in a fiery sheet. Men and women rushed madly over the side to seek a quicker but less painful death. The boats, with their crews, had been overloaded and capsized. There were hoarse prayers, and heart-rending cries of misery and distress. Death hovered, vulture like, over his victims; some clung desperately to the vessel's side, some supporting themselves in the water by articles snatched hastily from the burning ship, and with which they leaped wildly into the sea. The Captain sang through his trumpet, "Be heart, and sustain yourself as long as possible. A ship is coming to our relief."

James Durant stood upon the almost deserted deck, with his only child, but four years of age, by his side, and he looked at each other, but neither spoke, and Mrs. Turner did not notice the tent that glistened in her husband's eyes.
The doctor's fears that Eva would not recover rapidly, proved to be well founded; days and weeks of fever succeeded the awakening of life, during which she talked incoherently of "papa" and "poor dead mamma" and of the "burning ship," and of "hunger." She finally awoke to consciousness, and asked many questions as to how she came in that room, and who were those who attended her; but Dr. Hunt forbade her being questioned, till she was stronger.

How interested were all in the little convalescent, whom the elements had cast into the little sea boat to die! The ladies declared that never before did a child possess such lovely eyes, or such beautiful curls; while the gentlemen, seemed not less interested, and brought her gifts of everything that might please her childish fancy.
"My dear little girl," said Dr. Hunt, when Eva was at length able to ride out "will you tell me your name?"
"Eva said the child, "I thought you knew it."
"Yes, I know your name is Eva, but I want to know the rest of your name—your father's name."
"Eva Durant, Mr. Durant is my papa."
"Yes, now I want you to tell me all you can remember about your father and mother."
"Eva's eyes filled with tears. "Oh, sir, my mama died and went to live with the angels, and I do not know where father is. He said if I never saw him again, I should know he had gone to mama."
"Where were you when he told you this?"
"On the ship; and oh, the fire burned me so; and papa held me in his arms until a strange man took me and tied something under my arms, and threw me into the water, and I have not seen papa since. O, sir, can you tell me where he is?"
"No dear child; but perhaps we may yet find him."
"And this was all that Eva's new friends could discover. It was plain that she had come from the ship which had been burned a few weeks before; that she had been cast upon the shore, and had floated upon the shore, but where was her father? Had he been saved; and was he searching for his child? Every possible effort was now made to find him. The circumstances of the case, with the statement of the child, were published fully in the newspapers of the neighboring cities; but the grief-stricken father, believing his child to be lost, had sailed a week before for Europe, and it soon became evident in the minds of Eva's protectors, that he had perished. But the little one still prattled about her "papa," and she would come by-and-by, and those who believed differently would not pain her by contradiction.
The square and compass that had been found upon her clothing was regarded as a powerful appeal from a Mason to his brethren to care for his child. So it came to pass that Eva became, as it were, the special charge of Hiram Lodge, No. 38. Mr. Turner would gladly have taken the entire care of the little waif, and the wealthy Senator W— requested to be allowed to adopt her as his daughter, but the Brethren in Lodge refused to be renewed and protected by the Lodge, and that as Providence had placed her in Brother Turner's house that should be her home.
And so the years went by, and Eva became a healthy, joyous child, flitting here and there, and every where meeting the warmest of welcomes. The Masonic Hall was but a few rods from Mr. Turner's residence, and Eva often went with him as far as the door, and then returned alone, always holding the Tiler, "take good care of Pa Turner and send him home early!"

CHAPTER II.
The six years that followed the death of his wife and the loss of his child, had passed wearily to James Durant. He visited nearly every county in the Old World, seeking among scenes of beauty and grandeur as well as historic interest for the mental rest that could never be found. Once more he turned his steps towards America and sought his Masonic friend, Mr. Wadsworth. Finding that gentleman about setting out with his family on a journey to the Atlantic coast, Mr. Durant accepted the invitation to accompany them to Saratoga and Niagara, then to New York, where, leaving the ladies, Mr. Wadsworth and Mr. Durant wandered from town to town along the coast, enjoying the beauty of the scenery and the quiet hospitality that greeted them, more than the crowded hotels and the fashionable styles of the popular watering places. Fancy and the kind hand of Providence at length led them to the little town of B—, and the second evening after their arrival they visited the Masonic Lodge. A warm welcome was extended to the Brethren from such distant homes, and both were invited to address the Lodge. Mr. Durant said:

"Brethren: I have traveled much and long. I have found masonic sympathy in every part of the globe, and every where is masonry substantially the same. I can hardly tell where I rest. The world seems to be my home, as I remain out a short time in any town or country, but my name is recorded in an English Lodge.
I love my English brethren, for they first brought me from "darkness to light," and I love English soil, for within it sleeps the wife of my youth. But I love American soil also, for here I have found the warmest welcome, the kindest of brethren. And too, my own child is sleeping in American water, even beneath the very waves that wash the shores of your beautiful village.
"Six years have passed since this dear friend and brother robbed himself of his life-preserver that my little Eva might perhaps escape, and we hoped the elements might be kind, and that heaven would send her relief, but she was never heard of more."
The voice of Mr. Durant was quivering with emotion, and unable to speak further, he seated himself.
Glances of surprise and pleasure were cast from one to another among the brethren of Hiram Lodge. No one spoke, however, but all eyes turned upon the Master, Mr. Turner. For a moment he seemed reflecting; then taking a slip of paper from the Secretary, he wrote:
"Mrs. Turner—Do not allow Eva to retire until I return home. I am going to bring a strange gentleman who wishes to see her." And calling the Junior Deacon gave him the note, saying in a low voice, "Take this to Mrs. Turner, immediately."
"Why, Eva," said Mrs. Turner, when she had read the message, "you are to have company. A gentleman at the lodge room wishes to see you."
"Who can it be?"
Eva looked perplexed and thoughtful; suddenly her cheeks flushed, her eyes brightened, and clapping her little hands, she sprang to her feet and exclaimed: "Oh, it must be papa! no one else would wish to see me; no one in the world,"—and before Mrs. Turner comprehended the child's interpretation, she had passed the threshold, and was fitting through the moonlight toward the lodge room.
The Tiler looked amazed when Eva burst into the ante room, her cheeks burning, her eyes flashing, with joy and excitement. "Do not stop me! I am going in," she exclaimed. "Be the inner door was fastened, and the impatient Eva cried with vexation.
"Wait a moment," said the Tiler, who having heard nothing of what had transpired within, was at a loss to account for the strange conduct of the child "wait a moment and I will send your request to Mr. Turner."
"I shall not wait; I do not want to see Mr. Turner; I want to see my papa."
"The child is crazy, that is evident," said the perplexed Tiler to himself; but calling out to the deacon he bade him say that Eva was there, and determined to get into the lodge room.
The deacon went to the East, and delivered his message in a low tone and a moment afterwards moved "th the craft be called from labor to refreshment."
"Now," said Mr. Turner, "tell the Tiler to let her come in."
And Eva did come in, or rather bounded into the hall, more beautiful in her excitement than ever before. She advanced to the center of the hall, and stood beside the altar; half raised upon one tiny foot she scanned rapidly the faces of all. Her eager eyes soon detected the strangers, who were seated beside each other, and for a moment she seemed irresolute, then darting forward with a glad cry she threw her arms about the neck of Mr. Durant, crying, "Oh, papa! my dear papa! you have come home at last! You were not burned in the ship!"
We will not attempt to paint the scene further, but will leave our readers to imagine the joy of the fond father, and also leave them to decide whether the tears that wet the cheeks of the Brethren of Hiram Lodge were caused by sympathy with the happiness of their little charge, or grief that they should lose one whom they all loved.

A SAD RESULT OF HEROISM.—It is perhaps rather late in the day to publish incidents of the Chicago fire, but the Post relates one which deserves more than a local circulation. It is the story of an Indian who had arrived in the city but a few days before the great disaster. As the flames advanced he was standing on the sidewalk of State street. He gazed upon the rushing columns of fire as calmly as if he was contentedly viewing an Apache brother cutting the throat of an Arizona settler. All about him was crackling ruin, but his bronzed face gave no indication of fear. Through the smoke and fire the panic-stricken multitude called upon him to fly, but he stood immovable as a statue and vouchsafed no answer. The curling tongues of flame wrapped him in a blazing garment, and soon he perished—a victim to a mistaken idea of courage. The proprietor of the cigar store who had carefully chiseled out of a pine tree at a cost of $25 is inconsolable.

"Bus-driver to conductor of opposition bus—"I've known yer ever since you was born. I knowed yer mother; she had two on yer at that time. One was a very nice little boy, 'tother was a half idiot—a sort of brown paper feller. The werry nice little boy died werry young, he did."

A Norwiche man is very angry with his wife. He bought an india rubber air bed. She didn't believe it was healthy to sleep on a mattress that was not ventilated, and so, during his absence, punched about fifty holes in it. That husband has lost his faith in woman's ingenuity.
