

Ten Things Do This Month.

1. Get ready for winter; see that everything is snug about the house, the barns and poultry houses.
2. Get the crops in; put the cotton out of the weather; see that the roughage is under shelter or well stacked.
3. Keep the plows going, breaking deep and thoroughly, and keep on sowing rye.
4. Look well to the young stock; feed them liberally, give them dry stables and see that they go into the winter free of lice.
5. Get after the stumps with dynamite or a stump puller; get rid of useless ditches and banks; clean out the patches of bushes and briars that mar the fields.
6. Give the fattening hogs special attention; gradually increase the grain ration; get them ready to kill early in the winter.
7. Clean up the garden after the first frost; put all dead vines, etc., into the compost heap; seed unoccupied land to rye or other hardy crops.
8. Set out fruit trees, shade trees, grape vines, berries, etc; make a lawn if you have not a good one already.
9. If you are not following a rotation of crops, get to work and lay out one suited to your farm and circumstances, and get down to business farming.
10. Arrange for a supply of reading matter for yourself, your wife and the children—we will be glad to help you make out a list if you wish; see that good lights are provided.—Progressive Farmer.

Get Rid of Cotton Anthracnose by Selecting Seed in the Field.

A number of articles have been written from time to time on seed selection as an important factor in controlling anthracnose. There seems to have been some misunderstanding about the kind of bolls from which it is safe to select seed.

When the investigation was first undertaken here we secured results which indicated that it was safe to pick healthy looking bolls for seed from diseased stocks. Experiments conducted for the past three years prove that this is not safe. Last season our worst diseased cotton was where we had planted seed from healthy looking bolls taken from stalks which contained diseased bolls. The same thing is true this season. We are confident now, therefore, that it is necessary that seed be selected only from healthy stalks. We have been able to get rid of anthracnose in one season by carefully selecting seed from stalks which show no sign of disease and which are not near diseased stalks. No seed should be selected from a stalk which has a single diseased boll. After such cotton has been selected for seed it should be ginned on a gin that has not been used to gin diseased cotton or on a gin which has been thoroughly cleaned. If this is done and then the disease-free seed are planted on land which has not been in cotton for one year, anthracnose will be eliminated.

Large Acreage in Oats.

The Advertiser is greatly pleased at the prospect for a very large acreage in oats throughout the county. Hon. W. R. Parks told us a few days ago that farmers around Parksville are moving forward in the matter of sowing grain. A good citizen from Plum Branch made practically the same report. Mr. M. B. Hamilton, a level-headed farmer as there is in the county, said Saturday that he has already sown 65 bushels of oats and will sow it 100 before he stops. Mr. E. M. Nicholson, one of the real progressive among the young farmers of the county, told the writer Saturday that he has put 75 bushels of oats in the ground and that he will sow about 100 bushels. Another best part of it is, Mr. Nicholson said he prepared the land before this year than he has ever done before. Say what you please, the farmers of this county are waking up—many of them have already looked up—and will be independent of the western corn farmers.

The charming wife of a French diplomat had never thoroughly mastered the English language. She was urging an American naval officer to attend a dinner, the invitation to which he had already declined. The lady insisted that he must go, but the young officer said he could not possibly do so, as he had "burned all the bridges behind him."

BEEES ARE QUITE PROFITABLE

As Adjunct to Farm Nothing Pays Well When Properly Cared For Work for Women.

(By MRS. L. TAYLOR, Okla.) As an adjunct to farming I keep bees, when properly cared for, pays so well, considering the small amount of money invested, and the small amount of space required. Last year, two colonies produced 80 pounds per colony of surplus honey, which sold for $20. The bees cost $5, so there is a gain of $15, or 300 per cent. No other stock or crop pays as well.

A bee-keeper not far from here averaged 112 pounds of honey from two colonies. He sold it for 16 cents per pound. This seems like a very good yield, but with improved methods expect to do even better. One man in this community manages to produce $100 each year from his bees, and his farm does not suffer neglect in the least.

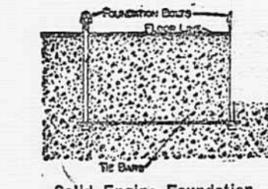

If the men have not time to devote to the bees, the women can look after them. They are generally about the premises and have a better opportunity for watching them.

For gentleness in handling and to gather honey and to keep the bees from stinging, I prefer the Italians. A hive will answer the purpose if should be chaff lined all through for wintering out of doors. A cushion should be placed over the entrance to absorb moisture.

TO MAKE FOUNDATION

Gasoline Machine Will Not Work Unless Placed on Good Substantial Base.

It is unreasonable to expect a line engine to do good work unless it is mounted on a solid foundation. There is nothing better than concrete for this and when placed in position, fastenings should be made as shown in the accompanying illustration, says the Farmer. These fastenings can be made by any blacksmith or in a farm workshop. They are made of the concrete when it is poured, and, of course, be placed so as to engage with the holes in the

the engine. Care should be used not to injure the threads on the ends of the rod, and to this end it is best to keep the nuts on same.

Starting Plants in Houses.

A good way to use tin cans or cigar boxes is to plant cabbage, lettuce, parsley, pepper, radish and tomato seeds in them, about the middle of this month. Place the cans or boxes in the kitchen windows.

Cauliflower, celery and egg plant may also be started in the house.

Bore holes in the sides of these boxes, an inch from the bottom, in order to give ventilation. Start cucumber and squash seeds in strawberry boxes.

Spreading Manure.

Get into the habit of hauling manure to the field every day as it is taken from the barn. The sooner manure is spread in the field the smaller the loss of fertility incurred, and the smaller the amount of labor required to handle it.

Bees and Farm Notes

Asparagus will grow in any good well-drained farm land.

Onion sets should be set out just as early as ground can be worked.

Almost all our common garden vegetables require a somewhat alkaline soil.

Selling all the hay and grain raised on the farm is a sure method of selling the farm.

Young cabbage plants require thorough protection in the hotbed and cold frame.

It is seldom that the very early varieties of potatoes yield so well as those a little later.

Long, straight rows will make easier work with the horse cultivator or wheel hoe later on.

For sandy land the mammoth red clover has proved superior to alsike or the medium red varieties.

Herbic pruning measures are needed to bring many old trees into bearing, but it need not all be done the first year.

There is no danger of an overrich soil for asparagus. In fact this crop can only be grown profitably on very rich land.

Did you ever think how much ground a good ear of corn will plant? It is just that much ground wasted if you plant a poor ear.

It is as idle and useless to expect good crops from inferior seed as it would be to endeavor to breed thoroughbred cattle from scrub stock.

Asparagus roots, properly planted, fertilized and given good culture, will continue to produce large spears for fifteen to twenty years in succession.

Alsike clover is a perennial and can be grown on ground that is too low and moist for the medium red or mammoth; it is grown equally well on high ground.
