All Right, Sir—All Right.

DYING WORDS OF BISHOP SOULE.

The veteran brave Draws near to his end— In sight of the grave, As o'er him we bend, "All right," we inquire— "Your prospects all bright?"— Thus answers the sire: "All right, sir—all right!"
"The Master I've served From youth to gray hairs, From duty ne'er swerved For eighty-five years! His service to me Gave ever delight: I find it to be All right, sir—all right!"
"Ye promised that grace My life should attend— That glory the race Should certainly end: Grace largely was given— Now beams on my sight The glory of heaven— All right, sir—all right!"
"'Tis time to lay down My wearisome load, To sit on the throne, And rest me with God: Old comrades, there's rest, With angels of light: With them I'll be blest— All right, sir—all right!"
"Ye promised that grace My life should attend— That glory the race Should certainly end: Grace largely was given— Now beams on my sight The glory of heaven— All right, sir—all right!"
When our time shall come To enter the stream, May we meet our doom Sublimely like him And when in the ford, With naught to afright, Re-echo the word, "All right, sir—all right!"

AGRICULTURAL, & C.

Bolling Meats.

In bolling meats, never put them in cold water, but plump them into that which is bolling briskly. This will coagulate the albumen on the outside, close the pores, and prevent the water from soaking out the rich juices. If salted meats need freshening, let it be previously done with cold water, taking all needed time, with frequent changing of the water, if it is very salty. Tough, cheap pieces of beef can be made tender and palatable as follows; If salt, freshen, as above. Put into the pot with a trifle more water than will be finally needed. Set into the top of this cooking pot a closely fitting tin pail or pan, and fill it with cold water. If this gets boiling hot, dip out some and add cold water from time to time. Boil the meat until it gets so entirely tender that the bones will drop out, even if takes five or ten hours. The steam, and aroma, or flavor of the meat, will be condensed on the bottom of the pan or pail of water, and drop back, and thus be retained. When thoroughly done, remove the cover and slowly simmer down thick enough to jelly when cold. Dip out the meat, remove the bones, place it in a pan, pour over it the boiled liquid, lay over it a large plate or inverted tin platter, and put fifteen to twenty pounds of weight. When cold, it will cut into nice slices, and if lean and fat, or what meat be mixed, it will be beautifully marbled. The juice will jelly and compact it firmly together, and you will have nice juicy meat, good for breakfast, dinner or supper, and so tender that poor teeth can masticate it. Fresh beef, or corned beef, well freshened in cold water, may be used in this way with decided economy, and it is far superior to meat boiled in an open vessel from which the flavor has constantly escaped, as you can perceive by odor all through the house, if Bridget leaves the kitchen door open a minute or two, as she will certainly happen to do.—American Agriculturalist.

Mixed Stock in Pastures.

I noticed, some time ago, a good deal written about keeping mixed stock in pastures. As I have been a keeper of stock from early youth until now, I venture to give my opinion. And first, I have found sheep to do well amongst cattle, but cattle do badly amongst sheep. To prove it, let the farmers take the fodder left by the cattle even when part of it has been trodden under their feet, and if the sheep are not very fully fed, they will see the sheep eat it up very greedily; then let him take what his sheep leaves, and offer it to his cattle, and he will find that they won't taste it if they can get anything else; or let him turn his milk cows in a sheep pasture, and he will find them fail in milk. Cattle do well where horses pasture. In proof of this, every farmer must have seen that cattle will eat the litter of horses, even if fully fed, but horses won't eat what cattle leave, unless compelled to do so. But horses and sheep will do well in some pastures, especially the horses. To prove this, let the farmer turn out the sheep from their yards, turn in his horses, and they will eat up all the sheep have left, even the litter around the racks.—John Johnson.

Manuring.

Some farmers put off the application of their stable and yard manure to wheat, until winter or spring. When this is done they are usually but poorly compensated for their labor. Winter wheat has two periods of growth: the first in autumn, and the second during the following spring and summer. The vigor of the crop, in its second period, generally depends very much on the healthful development of those parts of the roots which are natural to the first or autumn period. If, then, manure is incorporated with the soil at the time of sowing, the impulse given to the wheat plants in autumn is almost certain to continue until the crop is matured—unless some physical cause comes in to prevent it, such as drouth or the depredation of insects. But when manure is spread upon feeble wheat in winter or spring it comes too late. The basis of a good crop is not there. As well might you expect to make a good crop from a stunted calf, as to make a good crop from such a case as this.

PLANTING TOMATOES IN CORN ROWS.—Louisiana Baptist says:

We gathered a new idea last week from one of our best planters in relation to tomatoes. He says that much better tomatoes may be made by setting the plants between the hills of corn in the field. He is of the opinion that the corn imparts a peculiar sweetness to the tomato. Give it a trial.

Receipts.

BLACKBERRY CORDIAL.—Take 2 quarts of juice, 1 pound of sugar, 1/2 ounce of cinnamon, 1/2 ounce of spice, 1 ounce of cloves. Pulverize spices, and boil all together for 15 or 20 minutes. When cold, add a pint of brandy.
ANOTHER.—Take any quantity of blackberries; put them on to stew with scarcely any water; when cooked soft enough to squeeze the juice from the berries, take them off, and strain them until the juice is perfectly clear. Then to every 3 quarts of juice, add 2 pounds of sugar, and 1 quart of rum, with or without spices, to suit the taste. This cordial, as soon as it is cool, is fit for use.
STRAWBERRY, BLACKBERRY or PLUM JELLY.—For the juice of a pound of fruit allow a pound of white loaf sugar. Let it boil slowly in a preserving kettle for three-quarters of an hour, stirring frequently, until it becomes thick. Take it off, and in cooling, it will become of the consistency of jelly.
