

BILL ARP. The Group of Cotton this season not so Encouraging-Obeying the Law

Atlanta Constitution. The prospect is not bright. We were counting on twice as much cotton as we are going to get. I don't plant cotton, but my tenants don't, and I thought I could get enough to pay my taxes and put blinds on the house but I won't, and the blinds must go. It is hard on me but it is harder on Roland, for he has worked faithfully and had high hopes of being able to buy another mule. Roland is a cheerful man and never complains. He compares himself with those who are worse off. When I sympathized with him about the long drouth cutting off his cotton, he said: "Well, it's not so bad as it might be, for I made a good crop and plenty of money. I don't want and I don't care as much as some of the nabors. I don't owe more than I can pay."

"How much do you owe?" said I. "Only two dollars," said he. I wish every man as well off as Roland. I traveled with a man from York in South Carolina the other day, and he said his people owed enough for gunno to take all their cotton, and there wasn't enough made in his county to make a shirt apiece for the people who made it, "but then," said he, "we are having mighty good meetings going on, and I always noticed that it took a power of religion to do folks under drouth—more religion in adversity than prosperity and they always get it." That's so, I reckon. The good book says: "Humble thyself under the mighty hand of God," but a man can't do it with a pocket full of money. He may be ever so much inclined that way, but a man who has no money can't get it. He has to go and wrestle in prayer and take underhold like one who is in the low grounds of sorrow. The rich man feels secure and independent whether it rains or not. The only thing he wants to rain for is to get the drouth and cool the heat and feel better in his skin. But the poor farmer looks to the clouds for a living, and he never looks up without feeling his dependence upon Him who made them and sends rain upon the just and the unjust. It is not at all a scarce thing to look like the man the Lord gives a man the more he ought to love Him but he don't, and it is the same way with a parent and his children. Poor folk's children love their parents better than rich folk's children, and the best Christians I know of are the poorest and the afflicted. Rich men's children stand around waiting for the old man to die. They don't think they are, but they are, and they catch themselves flinching many a time about their care, and what they will get when the old man dies. Dr. Haygood preached a sermon at our town not long ago, and with solemn earnestness declared that it was a perilous thing for a father to lay up money for his children, and that he ought to give it to the poor. He said, "I have been an educator of the boys of this land. I have loved them and watched them, and tried to guide them by precept and example, and I say now with solemn conviction, that there is no danger to the soul of a child so fatal to youth as riches. Many boys come to college as beneficiaries; many come whose parents are toiling and struggling to give them an education, and many come whose parents are rich, and their children never know a care. It is this last class only that have ever given us trouble or anxiety. From this class all the expulsions come, and not long ago we had to expel one of them who was only sixteen years old for being a habitual drunkard. I keep a record of our graduates and watch them from year to year after they leave us, and it is only this class who come to grief and make up a record either of indolence or of shame. Of course there are noble exceptions, and I only allude to the contrast in general."

This was the substance of the doctor's declaration, and I wish every parent in the land could have heard it, and realized the solemnity of the advice. He said it, for Dr. Haygood knows. He has opportunity to know. Poor boys make the best citizens. They obey the law, and they work and toil for an honest living. Riches are best with many people. A man can pile up and keep on piling if he wants to, but let him look out for breakers. Not long ago I passed by a princely mansion in a large city, and I asked my friend what he had to do with that man's children, and he said he didn't know but his son was a general valet who looks around town and the daughter married a gambler who neglects her, and that is what killed the old man. So, after all, there is some good in poverty; some safety for the children. Not long ago I asked a wealthy old man, a gentleman about his children, where they were and what they were doing, and he answered with pride about his oldest boys and said they were sober and steady and at work. He then added, "but these boys were born when I was poor, very poor, and had to work hard for a living and as they grew up they had to work too and acquired habits of industry and economy, but our two youngest came to us when they were five and they never worked any, and they give me a great deal of trouble and anxiety. I am sorry I ever got rich."

That is the way of it exactly. The perils of riches. But still a fortune gained honestly in the pursuit of an honest calling is a good thing, and many men manage it aright and manage their children too, and I am like everybody else: I think I would be willing to risk it and take the children. It is no sin to be rich, but every man who is hunting for it ought to be forewarned and forearmed and bring up his children on proper principles. "Get acquainted with them." I heard a rich man at Anniston say to his wife, "I want and I must quit. I have got money enough, but it looks like I can't stop. I want to stop and get acquainted with my children."

Well, that is right. A man ought to know his children, and they ought to know him. He ought to take time to talk to them and tell them stories about what he did when he was a little boy, and be ought to frolic with them and all have good family time together. That best money all the time, and the best way to get it is to be a good man and be waiting for the old man to die.

BILL ARP. The borrowing family. The borrowing family sent their boy Jack over to Mrs. Murphy's to borrow some tea and sugar and a plate of butter. Mrs. Murphy was busy, and had no inclination to lend anything, but she returned anything she borrowed. At the same time she did not care to entirely offend them.

"I'd be glad to accommodate you," she said, politely, "but oh in a hurry, and haven't the time to wait on you. I've other folk to serve."

The boy went home, and reported that Mrs. Murphy was busy to attend to him and had other folk to fry, etc.

The Seven Bibles of the World.

The seven Bibles of the world are the Koran of the Mohammedans, the Tri Pitakas of the Buddhists, the Five Kings of the Chinese, the Vedas of the Hindus, the Zendavesta, and the Scriptures of the Christians. The Koran is the most recent of these, dating about the seventh century after Christ. It is a compound of quotations from the Old and New Testaments, the Torah, and the Gospel of St. Barnabas. The Vedas of the Scandinavians were first published in the fourteenth century. The Pitakas of the Buddhists contain sublime morals, and pure aspirations, and their authors lived and died in the sixth century before Christ. There is nothing of excellence in these sacred books not found in the Bible. The sacred writings of the Chinese are called the Five Kings, the four Kings, and the one King. They contain the best sayings of the best sages on the duties of life. These sayings cannot be traced farther back than eleven hundred years before Christ. The three Vedas are the most ancient books of the Hindus; and they are believed to date not eleven hundred years before Christ. The Zendavesta of the Persians is the greatest of the sacred books next to our Bible. Zoroaster, whose sayings it contains, was born in the twelfth century before Christ, and he lived fifteen hundred years before Christ.

Strict Observance. In some parts of Arkansas the Sunday law is rigidly enforced. Mr. J. P. Jacklin was arrested on a charge of shooting Mr. Wiber Staggs. Both parties being men of high standing, the affair created great interest. In making his statement Jacklin said: "I cannot regret more than I do this melancholy affair. I have ever been averse to shedding blood, and am so gentle in disposition that, when a boy, I have been known to run away to keep from helping my father kill hogs. I did not feel that I should shoot and I do not think my life was in danger." The witnesses all agreed that it was a case of self-defense, and the justice was asked to discharge the defendant, when some one remarked: "I was on my way to church when the shooting occurred." "On your way to church?" exclaimed the justice. "Yes, sir." "Did the affair occur on Sunday?" "Yes, your honor." "Mr. Jacklin, you have violated the law. I discharge you for killing the man, but will bind you over for the shooting on Sunday. It is to be hoped that after this you will be more careful."—Arkansas Traveler.

The Working Tools of Insects. I wonder if you know that the smallest insects you see about you have tools given them to do their work with. There is a little fly called a saw-fly, because it has a saw to work with. It is really a very much nicer saw than you could make if you were ever so old. The fly uses it to make places where the eggs will be safe. What is more strange, it has a kind of home-made glue which fastens them where they are laid. Some insects have cutting instruments that work just as your scissors do. The poppy-bee is one of them, whose work is wonderful. This bee has a boring tool, and uses it to make holes in the wood. This borer cleans out the nest ready for use. When all is ready the insect cuts out pieces of leaves to line the nest and to make the cells. These are made in the shape of the cells. You would be surprised to see the care taken to have every piece of just the right size, so that it will fit. When they are fitted, the pieces are nicely fastened together and put into the nest.—Our Little Ones.

In England alone it is estimated that there are nearly 25,000 women and girls who gain a part at least of their daily bread by the making of gloves. —It is all right to toll a bell, but it makes a difference how you do it. A man once told a Brooklyn belle he would marry her, and it cost him five thousand dollars because he didn't.

Mrs. Mary H. Davis was shot and killed while standing in her door-way near Alpine, Ga., Monday night, by some one in ambush. Her uncle, J. B. Dorsey, and a prostitute named Jane Wade have been arrested for complicity in the deed.

"No," said Fogg meditatively, "I don't fear what may come to me in another world; it is the act of dying that fills me with a sort of nameless dread. I don't like the idea of crossing the dark river. I always was afraid of water, you know." "You shouldn't let that worry you," replied Mrs. F.; "you'd have a splendid chance to dry your clothes when you reached the other side."

Bill Simpson is aged about 10. His father died when he was a year old, and he was brought up by his mother, who was increased by still another little boy, and a friend of the family, meeting Billy, said to him: "So you have got another baby at your house. He is a right smart little fellow, ain't he?" "Humph!" sneered Billy, turning up his nose; "but my smart boys do you expect us to have in our family?"—Texas Siftings.

—Samuel Fries, aged fifty-eight, of Steinsville, Lehigh County, Pa., is a well built butcher and a Democrat. Twenty-four years ago he vowed he would never again use a Democratic banner until he was inaugurated. His beard is over six feet long and sweeps the ground. He had his razor ready when Tilden was declared elected, but as he was not inaugurated, he beard-platted and rolled up under his vest. He expects to shave early in March next.

KIDNEY TROUBLE. For over six years I have been a terrible sufferer from a troublesome kidney complaint, for the relief of which I have spent over $200. I have tried the most noted so-called remedies proving failures. The use of one single bottle of Dr. B. B. R. has been marvelous, giving more relief than all while treated combined. It is a quick cure, while others, if they cure at all, are in the distant future. C. H. ROBERTS, Atlanta Water Works.

Scrofula. Dr. L. A. Guild, of Atlanta, who owns a large nursery and vineyard, has a lad on his place who was cured of a stubborn case of Scrofula, with one single bottle of Dr. B. B. R. Write to him about the case. Frank Joseph, 245 Jones street, Atlanta, has a son who had a scrofulous ulcer of the neck, and had lost his hair and eye-sight, finding no relief. One bottle of Dr. B. B. R. healed the ulcer, eradicated the poison from his blood, restored his eye-sight, and placed him on the road to health. A book filled with wonderful proof from the very best class of citizens, and recommendations from the leading Atlanta physicians, mailed free to any address. Dr. B. B. R. only a year old and is working wonders. Large bottles $1.00, or six for $5.00. Sold by Druggists. Expressed on receipt of price. BLOOD BALM Co., Atlanta, Ga. FOR SALE BY HILL BROS., Anderson, S.
