Belton Loses a Progressive Citizen.

Belton has lost a worthy and progressive citizen in the death of John G. Cannon, which occurred at his home in that town on Wednesday night, 25th inst., after a brief illness.

Mr. Cannon had been very successful in his business affairs, and had added considerably to the property inherited from his father's estate. He had been engaged for some time in the mercantile business at Belton in partnership with R. J. Gambrell, who had an intimate friend of his since his boyhood days, and who, by his will, inherits the larger portion of his estate, which will amount to probably $20,000 or $40,000.

Augusta's Gala Week.

Last week was a gala week in Augusta and the order of Elks in that city have covered themselves with glory by making the Carnival a success. Up to Friday night, the time at which the Carnival was supposed to close, the receipts at the various booths on the Midway aggregated $100,000.

The Elks' per centage of this amount will meet all expenses and in all probability put $5,000 in the treasury of the order. The festivities were continued through Saturday up to midnight, and the crowd appeared to be but slightly diminished from the day before.

The occasion gave many an opportunity to visit Aiken over the new trolley line. This line starts at the monument on Broad Street, runs up Broad, across the river into north Augusta and through the mill towns of Clear Water, Waverly, Wrenville, Aiken and Graniteville to Aiken, a distance of 22 miles.

Bread and Bread Making.

Prof. Wiley, of the Agricultural Department at Washington, in an article on "Bread and Bread Making," says "the nutritive value of wheat flour depends largely upon the character of the milling."

He Could Hardly Get Up. P. H. Duffy of Ashley, Ill. writes: "This is to certify that I have used two bottles of Foley's Kidney Cure and it has helped me more than any other medicine. I tried many advertised remedies, but none of them gave me any relief. My kidneys were so badly affected that I could hardly get up. Foley's Kidney Cure and it has cured me. Before commencing its use I was in such a shape that I could hardly get up when once down." Evans Pharmacy.

Daughters of the Confederacy in Convention.

The Seventh Annual Convention of the Daughters of the Confederacy has filled the city with many visitors and brought our people to a higher appreciation of the efforts of our noble women to perpetuate the fame of our Confederate soldiers on behalf of the visitors from adjacent towns and from the country, there are about fifty delegates from cities and towns all over the State.

The business session convened at the Court House at 11 o'clock yesterday morning. It began raining during the night and continued, making the streets muddy and walking disagreeable, but by 10 o'clock the ladies began to assemble and the Court House was soon the scene of beauty and refinement. The session was presided over by Mrs. James Conner, of Charleston, the president of the U. D. C. of South Carolina. Mrs. Conner is a typical Southern woman in style, manner and appearance. The well defined though delicate cast of the features, the poise of the head, all combining to bring out the characteristic lineaments of our fair Southern beauties. The session was opened with prayer by Dr. James J. Chapman, after which Mayor J. M. Sullivan, in a happy vein of witicism, extended welcome on behalf of the city. Greetings from the R. E. Lee Chapter were extended by Mrs. Lulu Ayer Vandiver in a short, elegantly composed original poem, which was well delivered and greeted with applause. This was followed by a greeting from the Dixie Chapter by Miss Eleanor Cochran, her theme being the love and worship of the dead and the effort of these organizations to find and honor every Confederate soldier.

Miss Cochran is one of Anderson's most brilliant young ladies, and it is nothing more than our people expect when we say her remarks were intellectual, pleasing and well delivered. The response on behalf of the State Division was by Mrs. J. H. Johnson. Her remarks were highly complimentary to Anderson, both city and county, and indicated a familiarity with the history of Anderson, which could only have been obtained by interested research. The response was full of interesting references, splendidly delivered and delighted every one. Interspersed through the program were beautiful songs. The sextette from the Dixie Chapter treated the Convention to a unique rendition of "Annie Laurie," which was sweet and well appreciated because of the absence of the male voice. Mrs. Cora Ligon sang "Conquered Banner." This lady is noted for her soft round voice, which is at all times under perfect control and for exquisite expression. When ever she sings is beautifully sung. "Songs of the South," rendered in chorus, brought the Convention to the routine of business, as appointing and report of credential committee, reading minutes of last Convention, calling roll of officers and Chapters. The entire proceedings were interesting, entertaining and edifying. There was almost incessant rain during the day, but interest did not abate and the Convention was delightful in spite of the weather.

Last night the delegates, the Dixie Chapter, the Veterans and the Sons of Veterans were tendered a reception at the beautiful home of Mrs. S. Beckley by the R. E. Lee Chapter. The decorations of this already elegant home were beautiful almost beyond description and were the creations of Mrs. Annie Gilliard. Three arches of twelve electric lights, alternating white and red, spanned the walk from the gate to the entrance. The long roomy piazza was suit in by crimson bunting and converted into a veritable palm garden of natural palms, which, under the electric lights, produced a most charming effect. This was the place of promenade and rest for the many guests. The front hall was a patriotic picture. Confederate flags adorned the walls in graceful groups, while on the ceiling overhead was stretched a large Confederate battle flag. A lady was tastefully entertained among the flags, producing a bright softening effect. Over the entrance leading to the back hall, in half circle, in large letters were the words, "United Daughters of the Confederacy." The side of reception rooms were a work of exquisite art in decoration. They were immediately to the right of the main entrance and communicative by sliding doors. The first in red effect. A roomed from last Convention, the center were garlands of ivy, studded with red roses, draping low and extending to the four sides. Not less than five hundred roses were used in this room, all being the work of Miss Marie Gilliard. The adjoining room was in pure white. Magnolias were the flowers lavishly but tastefully used, white bunting being the drappings. It was in this lovely room the officers of the Chapters stood when receiving. From the first room the dining room was reached. In this only electric chandeliers were used, but the blending of the many colors was artistically done and the effect was delightful. Lunch was served, music, both vocal and instrumental, interspersed the gaieties, and every one at ending was pleased and happy despite the inclement weather. Mrs. Beckley, the hostess of the occasion and the historian of the R. E. Lee Chapter, was charming and entertaining as is always her chief characteristic.

A Policeman's Testimony.

J. K. Patterson, night policeman of Nashua, Ia., writes: "Last winter I had a bad cold on my lung and tried at least half dozen advertised cough medicines and had treatment from two physicians without getting any benefit. A friend recommended Foley's Honey and Tar and I took it. It cured me. I can say it is the greatest cough and lung medicine in the world." Evans Pharmacy.

W. A. Herrin, of Finch, Ark., writes:

"I wish to report that Foley's Kidney Cure has cured a terrible case of kidney and bladder trouble that two doctors had given up."
