News Summary.

The steamship Atlanta, which is now at quarantine in the lower bay of New York harbor, left London the 10th, and Havre on the 12th October. Most of the passengers were taken on board at Havre; the majority of these came in the steamer, and from some of them the cholera developed. On the first day out, a child was taken severely sick; the disease rapidly developed, and the symptoms soon showed, unmistakably, the presence of cholera; on the next day the child died. The body was sunk in the ocean, and the ship went on, from that moment, a floating pest-house. The surgeon, it is said, thought proper, to avoid alarm, to conceal the fact from the passengers that cholera was the cause of death! Efforts were made to disinfect the ship, and keep it in as clean a condition as possible. To a great extent this was found impossible. Many of the steamer passengers seemed to delight in being as filthy as possible, and kept their quarters in the worst condition. Others soon began to sicken—death after death occurred—and were buried in the ocean in less than an hour after they had breathed their last. Fifty or sixty cases of attacks of cholera, it is said, occurred during the voyage—of this number, fifteen died and the balance recovered.

A Convention of Fire Insurance Underwriters was held in New York on the 15th inst., at the Underwriters' Chambers, in the Manhattan Life Insurance Company building, No. 156 Broadway, at which a resolution was passed organizing for the purpose of a united effort to secure the passage, in the next Congress, of a national bill of insurance in order to do away with all State legislation on the subject of insurance, and place insurance companies upon the same general basis as national banks. A bill was introduced in the last Congress, on the petition of Cyrus P. Smith and others, for the establishment of a bureau of life insurance, which was favorably considered, and the bill printed and laid over to next March. The meeting was addressed by Messrs. SLAUBURY, HOPE and HEALD, of New York city, and by Mr. NOYES, of Connecticut. It is probable that all the other insurance interests will combine and co-operate together for the success of the measure.

A very interesting relic is now exhibiting on Boston Common. It is the log cabin built in Macon county, Illinois, in the year 1830, and in which the late President resided for two years. Mr. LINCOLN and his friend JOHN HANKS constructed this rude habitation thirty-five years ago, by their joint labor. It was removed from its original site by Mr. HANKS, who we may add, went with Mr. LINCOLN on his somewhat celebrated flatboat excursion to New Orleans. The log cabin is now attracting considerable attention in Boston. It was for a time on exhibition in New York, in an establishment having the reputation of containing so many humbugs, that the people did not credit its genuineness, and, therefore, did not go to see it. Gov. COLESBY, of Illinois, states the cabin now on exhibition is the identical one built by ABRAHAM LINCOLN, THOMAS LINCOLN and JOHN HANKS.

The heads of Departments at Washington are busy in preparing their reports for Congress, and most of them will present a satisfactory condition of their affairs, it is believed. The General Post-office, under the efficient administration of Gov. DENNISON, has not only greatly extended its service at large expense, but will exhibit a surplus accumulation of about a million of dollars. Tax-payers will be glad of this.

The lower house of the Missouri Legislature, which convened at Jefferson city on Thursday, 2d inst., elected the radical candidate Speaker by a vote of sixty-nine to sixteen. Gen. FRANK P. BLAIR, Jr., having, in a recent speech, charged that there was fraud in the counting of the votes cast at the election by which the new constitution of the State was declared adopted, the Secretary of State, in a communication to the Legislature, asks that a commission be appointed to make a recount and decide the matter.

Havana papers give additional particulars of the insurrection in the island of Jamaica. It broke out in the district of St. Thomas, and is led by a man named PAUL BOOLE, for whose capture the British authorities have offered a reward of two thousand dollars. British troops have been sent to the disturbed region, and two Spanish steamers have gone thither from Cuba, to protect Spanish subjects and render such assistance to the English as may be needed.

The lower house of the Mississippi Legislature has passed over the Governor's veto a bill abolishing the Special Court of Equity established by Provisional Governor SHANKER, and it is said that the Senate will likewise pass it. The Legislature has appointed a committee to solicit of President JOHNSON the pardon of JACOB THOMPSON, Secretary of the Interior in President BUCHANAN'S Cabinet, and subsequently one of the reputed Confederate agents in Canada.

In Copiah County, Mississippi, a difficulty recently occurred between the Sheriff and the Agent of the Freedmen's Bureau, terminating in the former imprisoning the latter. Gen. OSTENHAUS, upon learning of this, sent thither troops, who liberated the imprisoned official, and the county was again placed under close military surveillance.

There was another Government auction sale of cotton at 111 Broadway, New York, on the 3d inst., at which about twenty-six hundred bales were disposed of, at average prices of sixty cents for middling fair qualities, fifty-six cents for fully middling, fifty and a half cents for good ordinary, forty-two cents for ordinary, and seventy-one cents for sea islands.

The English Government has given its adhesion to the proposal of France that an International Sanitary Conference should assemble at Constantinople with the object of devising measures for preventing the spread of cholera from Asia into Europe, and removing, as far as possible, the causes which lead to outbreaks of this epidemic. The proposal had been favorably received by most of the European Governments.

The Collector for the Third District of South Carolina reports to the Agricultural Department fourteen cotton manufacturing firms within his district.

CHARLESTON.

THURSDAY MORNING, NOVEMBER 9, 1865.

"WHO MAY BE THE MINISTERS OF THE QUEEN ARE the accidents of history," says Mr. DISRAELI, in very doubtful grammar. We need not say that it was not, while Chancellor of the Exchequer, that the great Commoner used this language. The accidents of office have much to do in moulding our sentiments. Speculations on the probable change of ministry have been the order of the day for some time past in every paper, magazine or review that reaches us from the other side of the water; and this was the case before we heard of the death of the great Premier. A long Parliament (six years and five weeks in duration) had just closed, under the auspices of a party and ministry largely composed (as to its leaders at least) of men far advanced in life. The administration sustained severe blows, by the hand of death, in losing such men as Sir GEORGE CORNEWALL LEVIE, SIDNEY HERBERT, and the Duke of Newcastle; and now England mourns the loss of her greatest statesman—and his party their great Coryphæus, who for years guided their steps, and so often had led them to victory. He alone, of all the public men living in England, commanded the respect and confidence of all parties, and in a great measure disarmed the habitual virulence of the opposition press. In office, his wisdom, tact, long experience in state craft—the more influence of his name and the confidence of his Sovereign—rendered his party almost invincible. PALMERSTON was "many-sided," as our cousins-german call it—infinite in expedients. He seemed born with a talent for diplomacy—a faculty not as frequently met in England as on the Continent. He could hold his own with a KAUNITZ, a METTERNICH, a TALLEYRAND, or whoever else might be pitted against him. DICKENS, in his "Bleak House," says the Court of Chancery is constantly engaged in studying "How to do it;" so, on occasions, the noble Viscount knew "How to tell it." Let a turbulent member of the opposition rise, and call for the papers on some intricate or otherwise unpleasant subject, or ask for an explanation on some vexed point, and Lord PALMERSTON, with a smile of geniality, bland and cheerful in his manner, and in the most courteous terms, would proceed to enlighten the interrogating member by a most finished exercise in the art, "How not to tell it." This is a negative virtue, to be sure; but not the less necessary to a ruler of men. However, enough of Lord PALMERSTON.

The Queen, we learn, has called his friend and colleague, Earl RUSSELL, to the helm; and it is natural to speculate on the bearing this change of personnel may have on the great questions of the day. As the meeting of Parliament is close at hand, we do not think there will be any change whatever, until then, in the foreign policy of England; the more so, as Lord RUSSELL does not by any means feel sure of his party continuing in office. Should the Whigs have another lease of power, the Queen will have her choice of a Premier between GLASTONE and RUSSELL; and, of the two, we suppose RUSSELL will naturally be selected as the head, more on account of his long and faithful services to the Crown, his extensive influence both of family and party, and his knowledge of the complex machine of State, than for any superior talent to GLASTONE, or many other aspirants.

PALMERSTON and RUSSELL have been so long associated together in the Cabinet, that we cannot expect any change in the course of the ministry because of the death of the former. The Tories were somewhat sanguine of a majority in the next House of Commons, but, at last accounts, we believe the prospects of the Whigs were still good.

But these changes of Ministers in England, after all, are of no interest to us, politically. As DISRAELI says, they are mere accidents of history. PALMERSTON, for the last thirty years, has been marking out England's foreign policy—one of peace and non-interference; and, we doubt not, whoever takes the helm, whether Whig or Tory, this same course will be continued in the main. A very selfish policy, no doubt, and one that has made the name of England odious among all the nations of the earth. How she was hated in America during the late war, both by South and North! Her name is a reproach and a by-word on the Continent for her pusillanimous "masterly inactivity" during the late Schleswig-Holstein imbroglio. The policy is one of undoubted selfishness. But when were nations otherwise than selfish? And what right have we to quarrel with John Bull because he will insist on minding his own business?

WHERE IS THE DIFFICULTY?—Yesterday we were in receipt of New York papers of the 4th inst., brought by the Quaker City. This steamer experienced heavy weather, and would have been in this port one day sooner, but for this fact. We are also in receipt, by regular mail, of Columbia papers and letters of the 5th inst. The distance between this point and New York, by the ordinary steam route, is considered six hundred miles. The distance between here and Columbia, by rail, is one hundred and thirty miles. The Quaker City's time is averaged, considering the weather, at ten miles an hour. For sake of illustration, say the time on the South Carolina Road is the same. We are told there is nothing whatever to hinder communication between that city and this. We do not understand why there should be. There is a post-office and a postmaster at Columbia. So there is here. There is a railroad upon which a daily train of cars run between the two points, excepting a distance of fourteen miles. From Hopkins' Turn-out to Columbia there is a regular line of stages which connect with the cars. What is the reason we do not have a daily mail from Columbia? Or why does not some enterprising individual start a parcel express?

WE PUBLISH, in another column, the account of an insurrection in Jamaica, the importance of which may be overestimated, of course, but which has so much verisimilitude as to entitle it to consideration. The fact presented by the correspondent as a reason for questioning the occurrence, or as a matter of surprise connected with it that the negroes are in the ascendant, both in numbers and in political power, affords no matter of surprise to us. We have ever contended that the point of equality in numbers and political rights will be exactly the point of contact and antagonism. It is then, that meeting upon the same plain, they must come to a contest of position, and that we acquire no securities by a relaxation of right and power.

The government of the country must be in the hands of one race or the other. It were better that it were in the hands of the white race. They have more of culture and capacity, and are better fitted, therefore, for the office of direction. But, as a matter of fact, it is in their hands, and it were a madness they will not exhibit to relax their grasp upon it for the illusive hopes presented by theorists upon the subject.
