News Summary.

The Secretary of War has issued orders accepting the resignations of Major-General Q. A. Gillmore, to take effect December 5, and that of Brigadier-General Gordon P. Berr, to take effect on the 4th instant.

The order recently published honoring mustering out of service Major-General James H. Wilson, at present in Georgia, has been revoked by the War Department.

Two important cases were about to be adjudicated by the Supreme Court of the United States. The first involves the question as to whether the President's pardon remits the sentence of forfeiture of confiscated property and reinstates the owner in all his rights thereto.

The Montana Post, of October 28, says: "Last week the queen trophy of the mountains was found by Bz Fox & Co., in Deadwood Gulch. This monster nugget weighed fourteen and a half pounds, and measures in length nine inches; in breadth, two and a half inches, and in thickness one and a half inch.

The New Orleans Picayune states that it is a consolatory and encouraging evidence of the sympathy of our people for the unfortunate, that the Sergeant-at-Arms of the Senate is without legs, the Doorkeeper of the House without arms, the Secretary of the Senate and Clerk of the House are both on crutches.

The Jackson (Mississippi) Clarion says: "On Monday last the most sweeping repudiating resolution ever presented to a deliberative assembly, was adopted by the Senate. It declares that 'the State will not, and should not, pay any debt against the State, whether on account of salaries of officers, Treasury notes, change bills, or otherwise, originating between the 9th day of January, 1861, and the 16th day of October, 1864; and the Treasurer of the State is hereby directed not to pay any warrant or claim based upon any such demand; and all receivers of public moneys are hereby forbidden to receive any such warrant or demand for dues to the State.'"

Hon. GEORGE WASHINGTON JULIAN, says the Cincinnati Inquirer, the man who would hang liberally in the South—who would put to death Davis, Lee, and all the other Southern leaders, is thus noticed by General Sherman in a card, since he considered him. He says: "By nature cold, selfish and calculating—with a pestiferous disposition to poke his nose into the business of every one who does not 'pin faith' with him, and following up his impudent interference with haughty backbiting, misrepresentations and downright falsehoods, it is not wonderful that he should be spurned and shunned by all who know him well, or that he should be exposed and written down as a perfidious counterfeiter and cheat—a disgrace to humanity—a living, talking LIE!"

The Washington correspondent of the Baltimore Sun, of the 11th inst., says that the long agony of the Senatorial caucus upon the THAD. STEVENS resolution is at an end. Rightly apprehending an executive veto if they passed it, they put the thing in the shape of a "Call for a Joint Committee of nine from the House and six from the Senate." This is to inquire into the condition of the South, and report as to the right of representation of the late Confederate States. Under this arrangement Tennessee will be likely to come in soon, for the reason that the President is the dispenser of patronage and from that State. GIBBS has worked like a beaver to make the radicals let down, and RAYMOND, not to be outdone, comes out to-day strong for the President's policy. There is great complaint of the vast disproportion of chairmen of the committees given to New England.

A Northern paper makes the following statement: Some complaints, and we believe unjust complaints, have been made of the conduct of Gen. TILGNER as to his management in regard to the freedmen and his treatment of citizens of Wilkes County, Georgia. Official and other reliable information has been received by Gen. HOWARD, of the Bureau of Freedmen, which exonerates Gen. TILGNER. This information is to the effect that the most outrageous conduct has followed the withdrawal of the military forces from the county above named, and in other parts of Georgia. The acts complained of were committed by the sons of wealthy and influential families. These go in gangs, and openly declare that no negro shall live upon land owned or rented by himself, but shall live with some white man, or leave the country. Good men of the State denounce these acts, but are powerless to prevent them.

They ask that the military force be kept in the State, and say that if it is removed there is no protection for life or property. In consequence of representations made to him by good citizens, Gen. BREWSTER has ordered a military force to be stationed in Wilkes County. A letter from Hon. N. M. RESVE, Judge of the District Court of Georgia, dated Washington, Wilkes County, November 27, states that, at the request of the colored people and in behalf of respectable citizens, he asks the intervention of the military in behalf of the freedmen. Several bands, calling themselves bushwhackers, jayhawkers, and regulators, are perpetrating the most shameful outrages—shooting, burning and beating negroes, to get money and for revenge. Their barbarous acts cannot be made known for legal effect except through negro testimony, and therefore cannot be punished. He asks that officers may be sent to take affidavits, and carry the offenders to Augusta for punishment, if any can be awarded them.

CHARLESTON. SATURDAY MORNING, DECEMBER 16, 1865.

THE COUNTRY, generally, has come to a perception of the fact that the President and Congress have come to an issue upon reconstruction, which may test the powers of the Executive and Legislative departments of the Government.

It will have been noticed that the President, in his Message, places the States lately seceded in the Union, with representatives in attendance, and leaves it only for "you, fellow-citizens of the Senate, and you, fellow-citizens of the House of Representatives, to judge, each of you, for yourselves, of the elections, returns and qualifications of your own members," which, in effect, is this, merely, that not only are these States in the Union, but their representatives present are already members of either House.

It will, also, have been seen that Congress, at the instance of the Republican majority, has ignored all this—have, in the resolution of Mr. STEVENS, in the House, denied that there are any members from the seceded States to Congress, or that any persons purporting to be members shall be admitted until Congress shall act upon the subject; and then rolling the wheels of time back to the surrender of Gen. LEE, takes up the work of reconstruction at that point, to fashion it as it may please them.

Clearly, as we have said, there are opposite trains upon the same track, and a collision is portended. It may be avoided. The consequences must be fearful, and one or the other may back in time, but which can do so, it is difficult to say. The President cannot. He has said the States are in the Union, and he cannot let Congress put them out. This he might do, perhaps, if they were in the Union by any act of his; but they are not. That they are in by the laws and Constitution of the United States, and as the National Executive he cannot let those laws be violated. Nor if their Senators and Representatives be at the doors of Congress, can he permit them to be turned off, except for some one of the causes above stated, which would be equally sufficient to turn off members from the Northern States. There is no reading from his position, therefore, without a violation of the Constitution, even on his own construction of it. There can be no compromise. If the principle be true—if the States be in the Union—it is logically conclusive to its consequences, and he can as little permit the State delegations to be delayed or hindered as he can permit the States themselves to be turned out.

Congress may recede. They cannot be perfectly certain of success; they will suffer from a contest with the President; they are now the victorious party, and naturally solicit the rewards of victory; some want office; some wish to get their friends in office; some wish to retain their friends in office; all want the consideration and importance which a knowledge that they can influence the bestowal of patronage will give them; and they will hesitate upon the final step which will precipitate them from the powers of Government, and the honors and emoluments to be found in the distribution of two hundred million dollars of the public funds.

But though not finally committed, and counselled by these grave considerations not to be, it will yet be difficult for even Congress to recede. They have acted with deliberation, upon a full knowledge of the circumstances; they have acted finally—have determined upon the course indicated, in caucus, in which the members of the party seem to have been fully committed; they are already in antagonism to the President, from whom the alienation can scarcely be more complete in persistence; they have won the Government, and naturally wish to wear it; they wish, also, to have the further power to be found in extending a Provincial Government over the South; they apprehend that if the Southern delegations are admitted into Congress, they will coalesce with the Democratic party at the North, and put them under; they fear, also, that they will coalesce with disaffected classes at the North, and repudiate the public debt. In every way, the reappearance of the Southern representatives in Congress is repulsive. It hodes them no good; they must, of necessity, hate the persons they have injured; they elected the President, and cannot forego the right to rule him; they have powers which he must respect; they express a legislative sentiment of the country; and will be law with the President, if he consents—or without him, if they have two-thirds of a majority; the one House can impeach him, and the other condemn him; and, under the circumstances, therefore, with consciousness of power, and moved by hopes and fears, by the glittering prospect, if their power be confirmed, and the South become a province,—by the gloomy aspect of their fortunes if it be not,—it is to be feared that the Republicans in Congress will persist, and that the collision will come between the departments of this Government, and a fearful, and, perhaps, fatal strain occur upon the political structure of the Republic.

What are the relative powers of these departments—what is the probable result, and what the consequences of this collision—are matters which, to persons impressed with the probability of such occurrence, will be subjects of anxious consideration.
