

LARGEST CIRCULATION—THE DAILY NEWS BEING THE NEWSPAPER OFFICIALLY RECOGNIZED AS HAVING THE LARGEST CIRCULATION IN THE CITY OF CHARLESTON, PUBLISHERS THE LIST OF LETTERS REMAINING IN THE POST-OFFICE AT THE END OF EACH WEEK, ACCORDING TO THE PROVISIONS OF THE NEW POST-OFFICE LAW.

FRIDAY MORNING, NOVEMBER 15, 1867.

LOCAL MATTERS.

SALES OF REAL ESTATE.—Messrs. Smith & McGilvray sold at auction, yesterday, a house and lot, No. 135 Coming street, for $1250, and part of the Oakes tract, on Goose Creek, consisting of 120 acres, at $300 per acre. Also, at private sale, within the past week, a small lot, with a small wooden building situate thereon, for $1000, and two farms, within eight and eight and a half miles from the city, for $4500 and $6000 respectively, half cash.

THE CITY GOVERNMENT.—There is good reason to believe that the rumor in relation to a contemplated change in the City Government, referred to in the News of yesterday, is strictly correct. It is thought, however, that the action referred to will not be taken for some weeks to come.

THE FARM AND GARDEN.—This excellent agricultural newspaper is published by J. R. Jacobs & Co., at Clinton, S. C., at one dollar per annum. It is full of interesting information, and contains an article in the November number—"How much land will support a family"—which is fully worth the annual subscription.

THE ZODIAC.—There is so great a pressure of cotton for shipment that it is difficult to find ships to carry it away, and prevent it from accumulating on the wharves and in the depots. Ship after ship has been taken up, and has steamed Northward deeply freighted with the Southern staple, and it has been necessary to go in now direct to the coast, and call on New York and Philadelphia.

SALES OF REAL ESTATE.—Messrs. Smith & McGilvray sold at auction, yesterday, a house and lot, No. 135 Coming street, for $1250, and part of the Oakes tract, on Goose Creek, consisting of 120 acres, at $300 per acre. Also, at private sale, within the past week, a small lot, with a small wooden building situate thereon, for $1000, and two farms, within eight and eight and a half miles from the city, for $4500 and $6000 respectively, half cash.

Although real estate has been considerably depressed since the war, it still has a market value, and sales are frequently made that prove advantageous to the owners. At the present time the market is extremely dull, and the prices obtained by Messrs. Smith & McGilvray for the property mentioned above is a fair sign of the present condition of the market. Buyers are extremely scarce and wary, and it is seldom that transactions terminate so favorably for the owner as those reported yesterday.

HOTEL ARRIVALS.—Pavilion Hotel.—Captain Thomas R. Paine, City; J. P. Boone, Statesburg; J. R. Barnes, Fortch, N. E. R.; J. B. Wilson, City; N. Norton, Baltimore, Md.; J. B. Hubbard, Abbeville; T. M. Bable, Laurens; L. S. Fuller and C. E. Fuller, Laurens; J. A. Cannon, Pomaria; E. A. Bronson, Barnwell; P. S. Worham, Gorman; J. H. Thorton, Summerville, S. C.; G. Tremble, Savannah; S. T. Deering, Augusta; L. Hill, Lady's Island; E. J. Edgely, J. D. Hopkins, U. S. A.; W. H. McLaughlin, U. S. A.; J. No. Welsh and Lady, Mount Vernon; Reuben W. Page and sister, Mount Vernon; O. M. Dart and child, Savannah, Ga.; M. D. Burket, City; O. W. Dudley, Bennettsville.

YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.—The exercises of this Association are progressing favorably, and an increased interest in its proceedings is shown by the large attendance at the nightly meetings.

YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.—The exercises of this Association are progressing favorably, and an increased interest in its proceedings is shown by the large attendance at the nightly meetings.

YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.—The exercises of this Association are progressing favorably, and an increased interest in its proceedings is shown by the large attendance at the nightly meetings.

YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.—The exercises of this Association are progressing favorably, and an increased interest in its proceedings is shown by the large attendance at the nightly meetings.

YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.—The exercises of this Association are progressing favorably, and an increased interest in its proceedings is shown by the large attendance at the nightly meetings.

YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.—The exercises of this Association are progressing favorably, and an increased interest in its proceedings is shown by the large attendance at the nightly meetings.

YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.—The exercises of this Association are progressing favorably, and an increased interest in its proceedings is shown by the large attendance at the nightly meetings.

YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.—The exercises of this Association are progressing favorably, and an increased interest in its proceedings is shown by the large attendance at the nightly meetings.

YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.—The exercises of this Association are progressing favorably, and an increased interest in its proceedings is shown by the large attendance at the nightly meetings.

THE CHARLESTON BLEND SOCIETY.—In the notice of the recent meeting of this Society, we asserted that the resolution recommending the Charleston and American Bible Societies was adopted unanimously. This was an error, as there were some dissenting voices, the majority of those present, however, being in favor of the union. The discussion was characterized by a true Christian spirit, the pastors and laymen present looking only to the good of the Society; and though there were some differences of opinion, they did not disturb the harmony of the meeting.

THE SOUTHERN EXPRESS COMPANY.—There is no branch of business in this country more extensive and important than the express service; yet, while agriculture, art and trade are world-wide, Europe has had no part in creating it; and twenty years ago it was not dreamed of in America, where it is now so indispensable. Peculiarly American in its origin and characteristics, it has become so thoroughly interwoven with the daily business of the country, that it seems to constitute an inseparable portion of its scale and sinecure. The express service, properly so called, does not date back beyond the origin of American railroads. With the innovation of railroads, the stage drivers and wagoners found, like Othello, "their occupation gone." The loss of their services inconvenienced the public, but the railroads offered a remedy. After some years had passed—and trade and inter-communication between towns and country suffering measurably—William F. Hiram, a conductor on the Boston and Worcester Railroad, started the express business in the Spring of 1839. At first he was his own messenger, carrying his entire express in an ordinary valise, but the advantages of the new enterprise were apparent, and he soon entered his sphere of usefulness. The first appropriation was run on the 4th of May, 1840, by Alvin Adley, and in the Spring of 1841 the express routes in the world were those of the future husband or wife, and the Express business had taken rapid strides forward; new companies have been formed, new routes opened, and each day extends their sphere of usefulness. In 1856, the entire number of miles of express routes in America was estimated at 25,000, but as their facilities increased these routes were extended, and lines now stretch in every direction, crossing each other like the threads of the spider's web.

THE SOUTHERN EXPRESS COMPANY.—There is no branch of business in this country more extensive and important than the express service; yet, while agriculture, art and trade are world-wide, Europe has had no part in creating it; and twenty years ago it was not dreamed of in America, where it is now so indispensable. Peculiarly American in its origin and characteristics, it has become so thoroughly interwoven with the daily business of the country, that it seems to constitute an inseparable portion of its scale and sinecure. The express service, properly so called, does not date back beyond the origin of American railroads. With the innovation of railroads, the stage drivers and wagoners found, like Othello, "their occupation gone." The loss of their services inconvenienced the public, but the railroads offered a remedy. After some years had passed—and trade and inter-communication between towns and country suffering measurably—William F. Hiram, a conductor on the Boston and Worcester Railroad, started the express business in the Spring of 1839. At first he was his own messenger, carrying his entire express in an ordinary valise, but the advantages of the new enterprise were apparent, and he soon entered his sphere of usefulness. The first appropriation was run on the 4th of May, 1840, by Alvin Adley, and in the Spring of 1841 the express routes in the world were those of the future husband or wife, and the Express business had taken rapid strides forward; new companies have been formed, new routes opened, and each day extends their sphere of usefulness. In 1856, the entire number of miles of express routes in America was estimated at 25,000, but as their facilities increased these routes were extended, and lines now stretch in every direction, crossing each other like the threads of the spider's web.

THE SOUTHERN EXPRESS COMPANY.—There is no branch of business in this country more extensive and important than the express service; yet, while agriculture, art and trade are world-wide, Europe has had no part in creating it; and twenty years ago it was not dreamed of in America, where it is now so indispensable. Peculiarly American in its origin and characteristics, it has become so thoroughly interwoven with the daily business of the country, that it seems to constitute an inseparable portion of its scale and sinecure. The express service, properly so called, does not date back beyond the origin of American railroads. With the innovation of railroads, the stage drivers and wagoners found, like Othello, "their occupation gone." The loss of their services inconvenienced the public, but the railroads offered a remedy. After some years had passed—and trade and inter-communication between towns and country suffering measurably—William F. Hiram, a conductor on the Boston and Worcester Railroad, started the express business in the Spring of 1839. At first he was his own messenger, carrying his entire express in an ordinary valise, but the advantages of the new enterprise were apparent, and he soon entered his sphere of usefulness. The first appropriation was run on the 4th of May, 1840, by Alvin Adley, and in the Spring of 1841 the express routes in the world were those of the future husband or wife, and the Express business had taken rapid strides forward; new companies have been formed, new routes opened, and each day extends their sphere of usefulness. In 1856, the entire number of miles of express routes in America was estimated at 25,000, but as their facilities increased these routes were extended, and lines now stretch in every direction, crossing each other like the threads of the spider's web.

THE SOUTHERN EXPRESS COMPANY.—There is no branch of business in this country more extensive and important than the express service; yet, while agriculture, art and trade are world-wide, Europe has had no part in creating it; and twenty years ago it was not dreamed of in America, where it is now so indispensable. Peculiarly American in its origin and characteristics, it has become so thoroughly interwoven with the daily business of the country, that it seems to constitute an inseparable portion of its scale and sinecure. The express service, properly so called, does not date back beyond the origin of American railroads. With the innovation of railroads, the stage drivers and wagoners found, like Othello, "their occupation gone." The loss of their services inconvenienced the public, but the railroads offered a remedy. After some years had passed—and trade and inter-communication between towns and country suffering measurably—William F. Hiram, a conductor on the Boston and Worcester Railroad, started the express business in the Spring of 1839. At first he was his own messenger, carrying his entire express in an ordinary valise, but the advantages of the new enterprise were apparent, and he soon entered his sphere of usefulness. The first appropriation was run on the 4th of May, 1840, by Alvin Adley, and in the Spring of 1841 the express routes in the world were those of the future husband or wife, and the Express business had taken rapid strides forward; new companies have been formed, new routes opened, and each day extends their sphere of usefulness. In 1856, the entire number of miles of express routes in America was estimated at 25,000, but as their facilities increased these routes were extended, and lines now stretch in every direction, crossing each other like the threads of the spider's web.

THE SOUTHERN EXPRESS COMPANY.—There is no branch of business in this country more extensive and important than the express service; yet, while agriculture, art and trade are world-wide, Europe has had no part in creating it; and twenty years ago it was not dreamed of in America, where it is now so indispensable. Peculiarly American in its origin and characteristics, it has become so thoroughly interwoven with the daily business of the country, that it seems to constitute an inseparable portion of its scale and sinecure. The express service, properly so called, does not date back beyond the origin of American railroads. With the innovation of railroads, the stage drivers and wagoners found, like Othello, "their occupation gone." The loss of their services inconvenienced the public, but the railroads offered a remedy. After some years had passed—and trade and inter-communication between towns and country suffering measurably—William F. Hiram, a conductor on the Boston and Worcester Railroad, started the express business in the Spring of 1839. At first he was his own messenger, carrying his entire express in an ordinary valise, but the advantages of the new enterprise were apparent, and he soon entered his sphere of usefulness. The first appropriation was run on the 4th of May, 1840, by Alvin Adley, and in the Spring of 1841 the express routes in the world were those of the future husband or wife, and the Express business had taken rapid strides forward; new companies have been formed, new routes opened, and each day extends their sphere of usefulness. In 1856, the entire number of miles of express routes in America was estimated at 25,000, but as their facilities increased these routes were extended, and lines now stretch in every direction, crossing each other like the threads of the spider's web.

THE SOUTHERN EXPRESS COMPANY.—There is no branch of business in this country more extensive and important than the express service; yet, while agriculture, art and trade are world-wide, Europe has had no part in creating it; and twenty years ago it was not dreamed of in America, where it is now so indispensable. Peculiarly American in its origin and characteristics, it has become so thoroughly interwoven with the daily business of the country, that it seems to constitute an inseparable portion of its scale and sinecure. The express service, properly so called, does not date back beyond the origin of American railroads. With the innovation of railroads, the stage drivers and wagoners found, like Othello, "their occupation gone." The loss of their services inconvenienced the public, but the railroads offered a remedy. After some years had passed—and trade and inter-communication between towns and country suffering measurably—William F. Hiram, a conductor on the Boston and Worcester Railroad, started the express business in the Spring of 1839. At first he was his own messenger, carrying his entire express in an ordinary valise, but the advantages of the new enterprise were apparent, and he soon entered his sphere of usefulness. The first appropriation was run on the 4th of May, 1840, by Alvin Adley, and in the Spring of 1841 the express routes in the world were those of the future husband or wife, and the Express business had taken rapid strides forward; new companies have been formed, new routes opened, and each day extends their sphere of usefulness. In 1856, the entire number of miles of express routes in America was estimated at 25,000, but as their facilities increased these routes were extended, and lines now stretch in every direction, crossing each other like the threads of the spider's web.

THE SOUTHERN EXPRESS COMPANY.—There is no branch of business in this country more extensive and important than the express service; yet, while agriculture, art and trade are world-wide, Europe has had no part in creating it; and twenty years ago it was not dreamed of in America, where it is now so indispensable. Peculiarly American in its origin and characteristics, it has become so thoroughly interwoven with the daily business of the country, that it seems to constitute an inseparable portion of its scale and sinecure. The express service, properly so called, does not date back beyond the origin of American railroads. With the innovation of railroads, the stage drivers and wagoners found, like Othello, "their occupation gone." The loss of their services inconvenienced the public, but the railroads offered a remedy. After some years had passed—and trade and inter-communication between towns and country suffering measurably—William F. Hiram, a conductor on the Boston and Worcester Railroad, started the express business in the Spring of 1839. At first he was his own messenger, carrying his entire express in an ordinary valise, but the advantages of the new enterprise were apparent, and he soon entered his sphere of usefulness. The first appropriation was run on the 4th of May, 1840, by Alvin Adley, and in the Spring of 1841 the express routes in the world were those of the future husband or wife, and the Express business had taken rapid strides forward; new companies have been formed, new routes opened, and each day extends their sphere of usefulness. In 1856, the entire number of miles of express routes in America was estimated at 25,000, but as their facilities increased these routes were extended, and lines now stretch in every direction, crossing each other like the threads of the spider's web.

THE SOUTHERN EXPRESS COMPANY.—There is no branch of business in this country more extensive and important than the express service; yet, while agriculture, art and trade are world-wide, Europe has had no part in creating it; and twenty years ago it was not dreamed of in America, where it is now so indispensable. Peculiarly American in its origin and characteristics, it has become so thoroughly interwoven with the daily business of the country, that it seems to constitute an inseparable portion of its scale and sinecure. The express service, properly so called, does not date back beyond the origin of American railroads. With the innovation of railroads, the stage drivers and wagoners found, like Othello, "their occupation gone." The loss of their services inconvenienced the public, but the railroads offered a remedy. After some years had passed—and trade and inter-communication between towns and country suffering measurably—William F. Hiram, a conductor on the Boston and Worcester Railroad, started the express business in the Spring of 1839. At first he was his own messenger, carrying his entire express in an ordinary valise, but the advantages of the new enterprise were apparent, and he soon entered his sphere of usefulness. The first appropriation was run on the 4th of May, 1840, by Alvin Adley, and in the Spring of 1841 the express routes in the world were those of the future husband or wife, and the Express business had taken rapid strides forward; new companies have been formed, new routes opened, and each day extends their sphere of usefulness. In 1856, the entire number of miles of express routes in America was estimated at 25,000, but as their facilities increased these routes were extended, and lines now stretch in every direction, crossing each other like the threads of the spider's web.

THE SOUTHERN EXPRESS COMPANY.—There is no branch of business in this country more extensive and important than the express service; yet, while agriculture, art and trade are world-wide, Europe has had no part in creating it; and twenty years ago it was not dreamed of in America, where it is now so indispensable. Peculiarly American in its origin and characteristics, it has become so thoroughly interwoven with the daily business of the country, that it seems to constitute an inseparable portion of its scale and sinecure. The express service, properly so called, does not date back beyond the origin of American railroads. With the innovation of railroads, the stage drivers and wagoners found, like Othello, "their occupation gone." The loss of their services inconvenienced the public, but the railroads offered a remedy. After some years had passed—and trade and inter-communication between towns and country suffering measurably—William F. Hiram, a conductor on the Boston and Worcester Railroad, started the express business in the Spring of 1839. At first he was his own messenger, carrying his entire express in an ordinary valise, but the advantages of the new enterprise were apparent, and he soon entered his sphere of usefulness. The first appropriation was run on the 4th of May, 1840, by Alvin Adley, and in the Spring of 1841 the express routes in the world were those of the future husband or wife, and the Express business had taken rapid strides forward; new companies have been formed, new routes opened, and each day extends their sphere of usefulness. In 1856, the entire number of miles of express routes in America was estimated at 25,000, but as their facilities increased these routes were extended, and lines now stretch in every direction, crossing each other like the threads of the spider's web.

THE SOUTHERN EXPRESS COMPANY.—There is no branch of business in this country more extensive and important than the express service; yet, while agriculture, art and trade are world-wide, Europe has had no part in creating it; and twenty years ago it was not dreamed of in America, where it is now so indispensable. Peculiarly American in its origin and characteristics, it has become so thoroughly interwoven with the daily business of the country, that it seems to constitute an inseparable portion of its scale and sinecure. The express service, properly so called, does not date back beyond the origin of American railroads. With the innovation of railroads, the stage drivers and wagoners found, like Othello, "their occupation gone." The loss of their services inconvenienced the public, but the railroads offered a remedy. After some years had passed—and trade and inter-communication between towns and country suffering measurably—William F. Hiram, a conductor on the Boston and Worcester Railroad, started the express business in the Spring of 1839. At first he was his own messenger, carrying his entire express in an ordinary valise, but the advantages of the new enterprise were apparent, and he soon entered his sphere of usefulness. The first appropriation was run on the 4th of May, 1840, by Alvin Adley, and in the Spring of 1841 the express routes in the world were those of the future husband or wife, and the Express business had taken rapid strides forward; new companies have been formed, new routes opened, and each day extends their sphere of usefulness. In 1856, the entire number of miles of express routes in America was estimated at 25,000, but as their facilities increased these routes were extended, and lines now stretch in every direction, crossing each other like the threads of the spider's web.

THE SOUTHERN EXPRESS COMPANY.—There is no branch of business in this country more extensive and important than the express service; yet, while agriculture, art and trade are world-wide, Europe has had no part in creating it; and twenty years ago it was not dreamed of in America, where it is now so indispensable. Peculiarly American in its origin and characteristics, it has become so thoroughly interwoven with the daily business of the country, that it seems to constitute an inseparable portion of its scale and sinecure. The express service, properly so called, does not date back beyond the origin of American railroads. With the innovation of railroads, the stage drivers and wagoners found, like Othello, "their occupation gone." The loss of their services inconvenienced the public, but the railroads offered a remedy. After some years had passed—and trade and inter-communication between towns and country suffering measurably—William F. Hiram, a conductor on the Boston and Worcester Railroad, started the express business in the Spring of 1839. At first he was his own messenger, carrying his entire express in an ordinary valise, but the advantages of the new enterprise were apparent, and he soon entered his sphere of usefulness. The first appropriation was run on the 4th of May, 1840, by Alvin Adley, and in the Spring of 1841 the express routes in the world were those of the future husband or wife, and the Express business had taken rapid strides forward; new companies have been formed, new routes opened, and each day extends their sphere of usefulness. In 1856, the entire number of miles of express routes in America was estimated at 25,000, but as their facilities increased these routes were extended, and lines now stretch in every direction, crossing each other like the threads of the spider's web.

THE SOUTHERN EXPRESS COMPANY.—There is no branch of business in this country more extensive and important than the express service; yet, while agriculture, art and trade are world-wide, Europe has had no part in creating it; and twenty years ago it was not dreamed of in America, where it is now so indispensable. Peculiarly American in its origin and characteristics, it has become so thoroughly interwoven with the daily business of the country, that it seems to constitute an inseparable portion of its scale and sinecure. The express service, properly so called, does not date back beyond the origin of American railroads. With the innovation of railroads, the stage drivers and wagoners found, like Othello, "their occupation gone." The loss of their services inconvenienced the public, but the railroads offered a remedy. After some years had passed—and trade and inter-communication between towns and country suffering measurably—William F. Hiram, a conductor on the Boston and Worcester Railroad, started the express business in the Spring of 1839. At first he was his own messenger, carrying his entire express in an ordinary valise, but the advantages of the new enterprise were apparent, and he soon entered his sphere of usefulness. The first appropriation was run on the 4th of May, 1840, by Alvin Adley, and in the Spring of 1841 the express routes in the world were those of the future husband or wife, and the Express business had taken rapid strides forward; new companies have been formed, new routes opened, and each day extends their sphere of usefulness. In 1856, the entire number of miles of express routes in America was estimated at 25,000, but as their facilities increased these routes were extended, and lines now stretch in every direction, crossing each other like the threads of the spider's web.

THE SOUTHERN EXPRESS COMPANY.—There is no branch of business in this country more extensive and important than the express service; yet, while agriculture, art and trade are world-wide, Europe has had no part in creating it; and twenty years ago it was not dreamed of in America, where it is now so indispensable. Peculiarly American in its origin and characteristics, it has become so thoroughly interwoven with the daily business of the country, that it seems to constitute an inseparable portion of its scale and sinecure. The express service, properly so called, does not date back beyond the origin of American railroads. With the innovation of railroads, the stage drivers and wagoners found, like Othello, "their occupation gone." The loss of their services inconvenienced the public, but the railroads offered a remedy. After some years had passed—and trade and inter-communication between towns and country suffering measurably—William F. Hiram, a conductor on the Boston and Worcester Railroad, started the express business in the Spring of 1839. At first he was his own messenger, carrying his entire express in an ordinary valise, but the advantages of the new enterprise were apparent, and he soon entered his sphere of usefulness. The first appropriation was run on the 4th of May, 1840, by Alvin Adley, and in the Spring of 1841 the express routes in the world were those of the future husband or wife, and the Express business had taken rapid strides forward; new companies have been formed, new routes opened, and each day extends their sphere of usefulness. In 1856, the entire number of miles of express routes in America was estimated at 25,000, but as their facilities increased these routes were extended, and lines now stretch in every direction, crossing each other like the threads of the spider's web.

THE SOUTHERN EXPRESS COMPANY.—There is no branch of business in this country more extensive and important than the express service; yet, while agriculture, art and trade are world-wide, Europe has had no part in creating it; and twenty years ago it was not dreamed of in America, where it is now so indispensable. Peculiarly American in its origin and characteristics, it has become so thoroughly interwoven with the daily business of the country, that it seems to constitute an inseparable portion of its scale and sinecure. The express service, properly so called, does not date back beyond the origin of American railroads. With the innovation of railroads, the stage drivers and wagoners found, like Othello, "their occupation gone." The loss of their services inconvenienced the public, but the railroads offered a remedy. After some years had passed—and trade and inter-communication between towns and country suffering measurably—William F. Hiram, a conductor on the Boston and Worcester Railroad, started the express business in the Spring of 1839. At first he was his own messenger, carrying his entire express in an ordinary valise, but the advantages of the new enterprise were apparent, and he soon entered his sphere of usefulness. The first appropriation was run on the 4th of May, 1840, by Alvin Adley, and in the Spring of 1841 the express routes in the world were those of the future husband or wife, and the Express business had taken rapid strides forward; new companies have been formed, new routes opened, and each day extends their sphere of usefulness. In 1856, the entire number of miles of express routes in America was estimated at 25,000, but as their facilities increased these routes were extended, and lines now stretch in every direction, crossing each other like the threads of the spider's web.

THE SOUTHERN EXPRESS COMPANY.—There is no branch of business in this country more extensive and important than the express service; yet, while agriculture, art and trade are world-wide, Europe has had no part in creating it; and twenty years ago it was not dreamed of in America, where it is now so indispensable. Peculiarly American in its origin and characteristics, it has become so thoroughly interwoven with the daily business of the country, that it seems to constitute an inseparable portion of its scale and sinecure. The express service, properly so called, does not date back beyond the origin of American railroads. With the innovation of railroads, the stage drivers and wagoners found, like Othello, "their occupation gone." The loss of their services inconvenienced the public, but the railroads offered a remedy. After some years had passed—and trade and inter-communication between towns and country suffering measurably—William F. Hiram, a conductor on the Boston and Worcester Railroad, started the express business in the Spring of 1839. At first he was his own messenger, carrying his entire express in an ordinary valise, but the advantages of the new enterprise were apparent, and he soon entered his sphere of usefulness. The first appropriation was run on the 4th of May, 1840, by Alvin Adley, and in the Spring of 1841 the express routes in the world were those of the future husband or wife, and the Express business had taken rapid strides forward; new companies have been formed, new routes opened, and each day extends their sphere of usefulness. In 1856, the entire number of miles of express routes in America was estimated at 25,000, but as their facilities increased these routes were extended, and lines now stretch in every direction, crossing each other like the threads of the spider's web.

Why Shako? Why Burn? Put those two questions to man passing through the alternate paroxysms of Fever and Ague, and he will probably reply, "Because I cannot help myself." But he is mistaken. He can help himself. He need not continue to endure the marrow-scorching cold and parching heat of intermittent fever unless he chooses. If there is an established fact in the history of medicine, it is that; HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS invariably breaks up the fit of this exhausting disease.

Quinine often fails, and whether it fails or not, it is always a dangerous medicine. It stimulates the nervous system, but it does not cure the fever. The Bitters, on the other hand, are a glorious medicine; in fact, a specific for nervous ailments. Medicines, as a general rule, are "bad to take." Not so, this famous vegetable specific. It is mild and agreeable, not pungent and nauseating. The liver is always greatly disordered in intermittent and remittent fevers, and the excellent tonic and strength has antiseptic employed to diffuse its medicinal virtues through the organs of the liver is perfectly pure, and this cannot be said of the spirituous basis of any other tonic. The best tonic is that which is most agreeable to the system, and which can be given to persons of all ages, in all climates, and in all seasons. The express service, properly so called, does not date back beyond the origin of American railroads. With the innovation of railroads, the stage drivers and wagoners found, like Othello, "their occupation gone." The loss of their services inconvenienced the public, but the railroads offered a remedy. After some years had passed—and trade and inter-communication between towns and country suffering measurably—William F. Hiram, a conductor on the Boston and Worcester Railroad, started the express business in the Spring of 1839. At first he was his own messenger, carrying his entire express in an ordinary valise, but the advantages of the new enterprise were apparent, and he soon entered his sphere of usefulness. The first appropriation was run on the 4th of May, 1840, by Alvin Adley, and in the Spring of 1841 the express routes in the world were those of the future husband or wife, and the Express business had taken rapid strides forward; new companies have been formed, new routes opened, and each day extends their sphere of usefulness. In 1856, the entire number of miles of express routes in America was estimated at 25,000, but as their facilities increased these routes were extended, and lines now stretch in every direction, crossing each other like the threads of the spider's web.

Know thy Destiny. MADAME E. F. THORNTON, the great English Astrologer, Clairvoyant and Psychometrist, who has astonished the scientific circles of the World, has now located herself at Hudson, N. Y. Madame's talents possess such wonderful powers of second sight as to enable her to impart knowledge of the greatest importance to the single or married of either sex. While in a state of trance, she delineates the very features of the person who is to marry, and by the aid of an instrument of intense power, known as the Psychomotor, guarantees to produce a life-like picture of the future husband or wife of the applicant, together with date of marriage, position in life, leading traits of character, &c. This is no humbug, as thousands of testimonials can attest. She will send, when desired, a certified certificate, or written guarantee, that the picture is what it purports to be. By sending a small lock of hair, or a piece of clothing, or a stamp, and enclosing a dollar, she will send you a picture of your future husband or wife, and a stamped envelope addressed to yourself, you will receive the picture and desired information by return mail. All communications strictly confidential. Address, 10 Hudson, N. Y. P. O. Box 223. March 30.

Free to Everybody. A Large 64 page Circular, giving information of the greatest importance to the present husband or wife of the applicant, together with date of marriage, position in life, leading traits of character, &c. This is no humbug, as thousands of testimonials can attest. She will send, when desired, a certified certificate, or written guarantee, that the picture is what it purports to be. By sending a small lock of hair, or a piece of clothing, or a stamp, and enclosing a dollar, she will send you a picture of your future husband or wife, and a stamped envelope addressed to yourself, you will receive the picture and desired information by return mail. All communications strictly confidential. Address, 10 Hudson, N. Y. P. O. Box 223. March 30.

FINANCIAL. BONDS, STOCKS, COUPONS, AND BANK BILLS. THE ABOVE BOUGHT AT HIGHEST MARKET RATES, BY ANDREW M. HIGGINS, Broker, No. 3 Broad Street. September 30.

PHILIP H. KEGLER, BANKER, NO. 10 BROAD STREET, CHARLESTON, S. C. CHECKS FOR SALE ON NEW YORK, BALTIMORE AND BOSTON. FOREIGN EXCHANGE—BILLS DRAWN ON ALL THE PRINCIPAL CITIES IN EUROPE. GOLD, SILVER, SECURITIES, BANK NOTES, &c. COLLECTIONS MADE AT ALL ACCESSIBLE POINTS. ADVANCES ALLOWED ON DEPOSITS. Imo

Watches, Jewelry, Etc. Wm. G. Whilden & Co., Large and Varied Assortment of FINE GOODS, NOW OPENED, AND WHICH THEY OFFER FOR SALE ON MOST REASONABLE TERMS.

ISAAC MIX & SON, No. 598 BROADWAY, NEW YORK. (ESTABLISHED 1850.) MANUFACTURERS AND DEALERS IN FINE CARRIAGES. OF EVERY DESCRIPTION, WHICH WILL BE SOLD AT AS LOW A PRICE AS THE MARKET. Warranted to do all made in the United States. Descriptive catalogue sent on application. August 30.

EDGERTON & RICHARDS, HAVING NOW OPENED THEIR FALL AND WINTER STOCK OF CLOTHING, CASIMERE, AND VESTINGS, WHICH THEY ARE PREPARED TO MAKE UP, OR WILL SELL BY THE YARD.

WHITE AND DECORATED TEA, DINNER AND CHAMBER SETS, WITH EVERY DESCRIPTION OF CROCKERY AND EARTHENWARE. ALSO, AN EXTENSIVE ASSORTMENT OF PARLOR, OFFICE AND MARINE CLOCKS, IN MARBLE, IRON, WALNUT AND MAHOGANY. GLASSWARE! GLASSWARE!!

LOTTERIES. KENTUCKY STATE LOTTERY (ON THE HAVANA PLAN) FOR THE BENEFIT OF THE SHELBY COLLEGE, MURRAY, EDDY & CO., Managers. Great Scheme. CAPITAL PRIZE, $50,000!

W. M. G. WHILDEN & CO., TOOTH & NAIL BRUSHES, DIRECT IMPORTATION. FOR SALE LOW AT W. M. G. WHILDEN & CO., No. 255 King, corner Beaufain streets. November 14.

LADIES' AND GENTS' TRAVELLING SATCHELS. ALL PATTERNS, FROM $1 TO $4, LESS THAN NEW YORK PRICES. A full assortment of the FRENCH AND ENGLISH PORTFOLIO, gilt bound, at W. M. G. WHILDEN & CO., No. 255 King, corner Beaufain streets. November 14.

A SUPERB STOCK OF FINE GOLD AND SILVER WATCHES. All warranted to run and thoroughly regulated, at the low price of $10 each! SATISFACTION GUARANTEED.

W. M. G. WHILDEN & CO., TOOTH & NAIL BRUSHES, DIRECT IMPORTATION. FOR SALE LOW AT W. M. G. WHILDEN & CO., No. 255 King, corner Beaufain streets. November 14.

LADIES' AND GENTS' TRAVELLING SATCHELS. ALL PATTERNS, FROM $1 TO $4, LESS THAN NEW YORK PRICES. A full assortment of the FRENCH AND ENGLISH PORTFOLIO, gilt bound, at W. M. G. WHILDEN & CO., No. 255 King, corner Beaufain streets. November 14.

A SUPERB STOCK OF FINE GOLD AND SILVER WATCHES. All warranted to run and thoroughly regulated, at the low price of $10 each! SATISFACTION GUARANTEED.

W. M. G. WHILDEN & CO., TOOTH & NAIL BRUSHES, DIRECT IMPORTATION. FOR SALE LOW AT W. M. G. WHILDEN & CO., No. 255 King, corner Beaufain streets. November 14.

LADIES' AND GENTS' TRAVELLING SATCHELS. ALL PATTERNS, FROM $1 TO $4, LESS THAN NEW YORK PRICES. A full assortment of the FRENCH AND ENGLISH PORTFOLIO, gilt bound, at W. M. G. WHILDEN & CO., No. 255 King, corner Beaufain streets. November 14.

MISCELLANEOUS.

FIFTY-FIRST YEAR OF PUBLICATION. MILLERS' PLANTERS' AND MERCHANTS' ALMANAC FOR 1868. WILL BE ISSUED ABOUT THE FIRST WEEK IN DECEMBER, and will contain the usual valuable information for which it has become so justly celebrated. This ALMANAC circulates through the Districts of South Carolina, and the States of North Carolina and Georgia, and is referred to the year round as authority on many important subjects by Planters, Mechanics, Merchants and Lawyers. A limited number of advertisements will be taken if applied for at once.

HIRAM HARRIS, PUBLISHER, No. 59 BROAD STREET, Charleston, S. C. November 15.

TIN WARE CHEAP FOR CASH! DRESSED AND FINE PAIRS 3 FT., PER DOZEN. $1.50; 1 1/2 FT. 60 C.; 3 FT. 1 1/2 FT. 1.00; 2 FT. 1.25; 3 FT. 1.50; 4 FT. 1.75; 5 FT. 2.00; 6 FT. 2.25; 7 FT. 2.50; 8 FT. 2.75; 9 FT. 3.00; 10 FT. 3.25; 11 FT. 3.50; 12 FT. 3.75; 13 FT. 4.00; 14 FT. 4.25; 15 FT. 4.50; 16 FT. 4.75; 17 FT. 5.00; 18 FT. 5.25; 19 FT. 5.50; 20 FT. 5.75; 21 FT. 6.00; 22 FT. 6.25; 23 FT. 6.50; 24 FT. 6.75; 25 FT. 7.00; 26 FT. 7.25; 27 FT. 7.50; 28 FT. 7.75; 29 FT. 8.00; 30 FT. 8.25; 31 FT. 8.50; 32 FT. 8.75; 33 FT. 9.00; 34 FT. 9.25; 35 FT. 9.50; 36 FT. 9.75; 37 FT. 10.00; 38 FT. 10.25; 39 FT. 10.50; 40 FT. 10.75; 41 FT. 11.00; 42 FT. 11.25; 43 FT. 11.50; 44 FT. 11.75; 45 FT. 12.00; 46 FT. 12.25; 47 FT. 12.50; 48 FT. 12.75; 49 FT. 13.00; 50 FT. 13.25; 51 FT. 13.50; 52 FT. 13.75; 53 FT. 14.00; 54 FT. 14.25; 55 FT. 14.50; 56 FT. 14.75; 57 FT. 15.00; 58 FT. 15.25; 59 FT. 15.50; 60 FT. 15.75; 61 FT. 16.00; 62 FT. 16.25; 63 FT. 16.50; 64 FT. 16.75; 65 FT. 17.00; 66 FT. 17.25; 67 FT. 17.50; 68 FT. 17.75; 69 FT. 18.00; 70 FT. 18.25; 71 FT. 18.50; 72 FT. 18.75; 73 FT. 19.00; 74 FT. 19