Commander Winslow, and his crew, of the Kearsage, will receive $100,000 for the capture of the Alabama, should Congress pass the bill.

There are signs, says the Pittsburg Dispatch, of a great emigration southward in the early spring. Many families are preparing to leave for Alabama, Georgia, Kentucky and Florida.

A new law in Cincinnati prohibits the operation of commercial agents or "drummers" in that city. A travelling agent of a New York hat and cap establishment has just been fined $50 and costs, and another agent double that amount.

It is understood that the Senate will hold long and serious debate over the Alabama claims treaty when it comes before them, notwithstanding the reported adverse decision of the committee. The treaty, therefore, will not probably be brought up this session.

A joint resolution was adopted in the Louisiana House on Saturday authorizing the Governor and Treasurer to hypothecate State bonds whenever it is deemed necessary to provide for the payment of the interest due, or coming due, on bonds. The rate of interest on such loan not to exceed seven per cent.

Governor Brownlow, on Saturday, issued a proclamation declaring martial law in the Counties of Jackson, Gibson, Maury, Madison, Haywood, Lawrence, Giles, Marshall and Overton. General Cooper has been ordered to send troops to those counties, and to arrest and punish all evildoers without reference to civil law.

A letter from A. W. Clark, United States Consul at Valparaiso, dated January 16th, states that the yellow fever had again made its appearance in a most malignant form at the ports south of Callao. The disease was reported as more virulent and fatal than last year when at its height. Vessels arriving at Valparaiso from the affected ports were strictly quarantined.

A prize of $10 was recently offered to any member of the Connecticut Teachers' Institute who would write and spell correctly the words in the following sentence: "It is an agreeable sight to witness the unparalleled embarrassment of a harassed peddler at tempting to gauge the symmetry of a poeled onion, which a sibyl has stabbed with a poniard, regardless of the innuendoes of the lilies of carnation hue." Thirty-eight teachers competed for the prize, but not one was successful.

General Grant, it is said, becomes more communicative as the time for his inauguration approaches. He recently told an old Connecticut friend that he would put no military or naval officers in his Cabinet, but should invite civilians to fill them all. A man of the most eminent ability is to be offered the portfolio of Secretary of State; and from the description of the kind of man General Grant desires for the position, the Connecticut gentleman says there are not more than three men in the country who will come up to the mark.

A colored man, J. S. Richardson, of Washington, has addressed a note to Mayor Bowen, as chairman of the committee on the sale of tickets for the inauguration ball, stating that a number of his friends from Philadelphia and New York would be in Washington on the 4th of March, and asks whether any distinction on account of color is to be made in the sale of tickets. Mayor Bowen addressed him a reply, in which he says that "any person of respectable character and standing in this community who applies and pays for a ticket to the inauguration ball, to be held in the north wing of the Treasury Department, will not be denied, at least so far as my action is concerned. The question of color never having arisen in the committee, I cannot, of course, decide for them."

The question of the confidential character of a telegraphic message has recently been raised in England on the trial of the election cases. The judges presiding over these new tribunals are authorized to "call for papers," but great difficulties are made because Judge Keble, managing director of the Associated Telegraph Company to produce a bundle of telegrams bearing on the Dublin election. The manager protested, assuring the court that the company had always considered a telegram as sacred as if a seal were attached to it. The judge, however, advised the manager "not to mind what the company thought; he had the telegrams, and must produce them, although, of course, he had only done his duty in obtaining them." The English journals, in commenting on this order, argue that telegrams are letter-dispatched by means of electricity, and that, in compiling their production, Justice Keble acted in precisely the same way as if he had instructed one of the officers of his court to go down to the candidate's private residence, break open his writing-desk and seize all his letters.

A duel was fought at New Orleans last week, between Louis E. Mouton and D. F. Lawson. The weapons were small swords, and the meeting took place a little ways from the levee, in the presence of two or three hundred soldiers. Mouton, the survivor, makes the following statement: "Once on the ground, I hesitated some time after the swords were drawn about fighting, and attempted to avoid a difficulty. It was not until he had cursed me, and had run the point of his sword against my hand, that I made any lunge at him whatever. Upon first going on the ground, I had stuck my sword into the levee bank, and repeatedly told him he had no provocation for fighting. Finally, when he had several times cursed me, the fight commenced in good earnest. Twice, then, after this had commenced, and when I had twice parried his lunges, I attempted to end the difficulty. I then made a thrust at him with my sword, and the point passed between the second and third ribs in the left side, penetrating his liver. Lawson, who had ten or twelve of his friends with him, was then carried to a carriage. Before he reached this, his surgeon in attendance announced that he was dead. I was thereupon arrested by an officer in charge of the barracks, who had been a witness to the fight, and brought to the city, though subsequently released."

Leutenant Braine, of the Confederate navy, held by the government on a charge of piracy, is represented by a writer in a morning paper as a man without a country and without a trial. He was a tall, straight and commanding-looking personage when in health, but his sufferings in prison have been so intense that he cannot walk without the aid of a crutch, and is perhaps permanently disabled. His right foot is much swollen from inflammatory rheumatism, a disease he attributes to the unavoidable dampness of the prison, and he is, indeed a wreck of the man who entered it nearly three years ago. He is only twenty-nine years of age, but says that since his imprisonment he has grown old faster than with the flight of years. With a shattered constitution and a frame that is no longer the subject of the will, he craves himself about the prison, and even finds it necessary to appeal to the judgment of his visitors that the reports of some newspapers that he has lost his reason are untrue. What can be the motive of keeping this man untried, and thus bring him and his family beyond redemption?

A railroad conductor has recently been sued by his employers on a claim for wages withheld and not paid over to them. The defendant in this case, a colored man, has his appointment as conductor, and had filled the useful but not very lucrative position of an ostler, with an average salary of only $500 per year. He contrived, between the years 1842 and 1865, to accumulate enough money to be placed as the fourth in the list of realty citizens of Concord, N. H. It is stated that during this period of twenty-three years, he made over $150,000, built himself the finest residence in Concord, and was known as a large stockholder and real estate owner. Suspicious of his position, the conductors of the road in question were holding back the money they received, and an investigation was made which satisfied the company that they did not receive all they were entitled to. The defendant in the suit just decided was examined, and undertook to account for his property by thrift and economy. Among other things he stated that the clothing of his wife for the last twenty years had cost $50 per annum; but unfortunately, in 1865, he had received $1500 from an insurance company, for his wife's dresses, all new, that had been injured by fire. He also undertook to account for $3200 of his property as the profits on peanuts sold on his train by a small Irish boy in his employment. The referee in the suit finally decided that the railroad company were entitled to recover of the conductor the sum of $15,500.

General Grant is in ill odor on account of the practical character of his speech replying to the official announcement of his election. At a time when political questions claim the first consideration, when political services demand a fitting recompense of office, when the people are simply the constituency of Congress, the President elect foolishly proposes to consult the public welfare. No wonder that there is uneasiness at Washington. A clamor already breaks forth. The storm is brewing which will soon fall upon the luckless, simple soldier who repeats, now-a-days, the traditions of the fathers of the republic.

We smile, as we think of the opinion the Radical leaders must hold of an Executive who announces that "economy, retrenchment, the faithful collection of the revenue and the payment of the public debt," will be the cardinal principles of his administration. Little do Sumner and Butler and Schenck and Garfield and Cameron and Forney care for these trifles. The government they sustain is that of a country, but of a section; the good they seek is that not of the public, but of a party; the President they want is not a benefactor, but an obsequious servant. But whatever their opinions may be and their private ends, it is unquestionable that General Grant has struck a key-note which reverberates and awakens a harmonious response throughout the republic. The politicians may rage against him, but every man ground down with taxes will bid him God speed.

Nor does the avowed desire of the President elect to please those who elected him necessarily indicate any deviation from the policy he has marked out. The objects which he has in view are of the first importance, and he needs Republican support for their attainment. That he should break with that party is not desirable for himself or for us. Mr. Johnson, with the best motives we doubt not, tried the experiment. The result is shown in the distracted and disorganized state of the country. He undertook to make a new road for himself and us, through the tangled wilderness, and the result was that he got lost; he failed to direct us safely; and the best we can say of him is, that his aim was good, that he was not absolutely swamped, and that he will get on solid ground by the end of his Presidential term. But now, both the North and the South expect from General Grant something more. We have "peace" already; we want security; we want relief from our burdens; we want such a state of public affairs as will afford scope for industry and enterprise, as will allow intelligent character and blood to tell.

The longer the present condition of things continues the less have we been disposed to attach any special importance to political measures. Little do we heed the fantastic tricks of the speech-makers of Columbia, who seem to fancy that the eyes of the whole State—nay, of the whole world—were fixed upon them. Let them "fret and fume their little hour upon the stage." When the substantial citizens of the State have a fair chance, they will ask no favors. They can do their work independently of all the politicians. They can recover their ancient prestige. With their cotton fibres that float on the winds, they can weave a white plume of guidance, of glory and of victory, like that which of old surged on "the helmet of Navarre." All that we want of General Grant is that he shall settle the policy of the country. We can't manage an anarchy; for any settled form of government, from a despotism to a republic, we can control. And that settlement of public policy we anticipate, from the disclaimers than from the determinations of our new President.

For three hundred years it has been the dream of commercial enterprise to sweep away the slight barrier which separates the Atlantic and the Pacific oceans, and by the construction of a ship canal across the Isthmus of Darien to throw open to the world the vast advantages of a more direct and safer route from Europe to China. The project seems at length about to assume a practical and tangible shape. The recent mission of Mr. Caleb Cushing to Bogota has resulted in a treaty with the Colombian Government which will probably render the completion of the enterprise only a matter of a few years.

By its terms, the exclusive right is conceded to the United States of constructing a canal or canals across the Isthmus of Darien, and the liberty of choosing any route that may be selected by our engineers. Six miles of land are ceded by the Colombian Government on either side of the canal, one-half for the benefit of the party undertaking its construction. It vests the ownership and exclusive control, and of course the right of fixing the rate of tolls, in the government of the United States. It allows ten months for the ratification of the treaty, and ten years for the commencement of the work, and fifteen years thereafter for its completion.

The neutrality of the canal is provided for by a clause in the treaty, requiring that it shall be open to the commerce of nations, except in times of war, when it is to be closed to belligerents. The Colombian Government is to receive ten per cent. of the net profits of the canal for the first ten years, and after the tenth is paid for, one-fourth of the net profits. The estimated cost of the work is $100,000,000.

After the success of the Atlantic cable, the Suez canal, the Mont Cenis tunnel and the Pacific railroad, it would be rash to pronounce the Darien canal impracticable. As to the physical difficulties of the work, there seems no reason to suppose them insuperable. But the ability of the projectors to carry the work through to completion will depend upon their ability to satisfy capitalists; first, that the work is practicable, and secondly, that as an investment it will pay a good interest. These are questions for future solution. In the meantime, it is safe to predict that the treaty will be speedily ratified by the Senate, and that the work of the preliminary surveys will be at once entered upon, with the view of bringing out the gigantic company whose capital is to effect the long desired union of the two great oceans.
