THURSDAY, JUNE 1, 1871.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

-Gold was quoted in New York, yesterday, at 112.

-Cotton opened strong at 17; cents. No closing quotations received. -In Liverpool, cotton closed firm; uplands at 73a74d.; sales 20,000 bales. -An "onion bath" is a cure for fever announced in England.

-There are over six millions of cotton spindles in operation in the United States.

-The latest style for the seashore is a canwas awning attached to the brim of a straw

-It is rumored that Bennett has recently given the New York Herald to James Gordon -In the Bank of England vaults there is at present gold coin to the value of $122,500,000; in the United States treasury at New York $94,000,000 in gold. -Queen Victoria's salary is only $2,200,000 a year, but by selling butter from her dairy farms and close economy she manages to wiggle through. -Mr. Miall, the Non-conformist leader in the British House of Commons, in the recent debate on the Established Church, declared that "it is the right of every citizen to hold what creed seems reasonable to him, and to belong to any church he likes, or to none, without the least difference being made on that account, in his relation to any law, or his enjoyment of any political right or privilege." -One of the curious topsey-turveys presented by the abnormal condition of affairs in Paris during the rule of the Commune, was witnessed in the case of the legal practice of that city. The lawyers and notaries having mostly fled from the city, their chambers were taken possession of by their clerks who remained, and who drove a thriving business with their masters' unsuspicious clients. This is quite like the doings of the Mock Duke in the play of "The Taming of the Shrew."

-A savant has discovered with the microscope that when we pour milk into a cup of tea, the albumen of the milk and the tannin of the tea instantly unite and form leather, or minute flakes of the very same compound which is produced in the texture of the tanned hides, and which makes it leather as distinguished from the original skin. He consequently estimates that in the course of a year a tea-drinker of average capacity limbibes enough leather to make a pair of shoes.

-Among other things settled by the late treaty of peace between France and Germany is an understanding that the Germans who have been expelled from l'rance will be restored to the possession of their property, and to the rights of domicile on French territory. With regard to commercial relations, Germany will be treated on the same footing as the most favored nations-namely, England, Belgium, &c. Thus is it that poor France has been compelled to swallow more indignities

-The Cabinet have under consideration the seizure of plantations in Cuba belonging to Americans. One estate, worth between $1,-000,000 and $2,000,000, was levied upon pearly two years ago. An order was sent from Spain for its release fifteen months since, but the Captain-General made no response. Six months ago Secretary Fish sent a note to the Spanish Minister, coupled with a demand for the restora tion of the property. Instead of at once obeying the order given by the Spanish 'Cinister, several hundred thousand dollars' worth more of the same property was destroyed. This action of the Spanish authorities is to be speedily looked into and prompt redress demanded.

-Not many individuals, or corporations even, can afford to lose from $50,000,000 to $75,000,000, and yet come out in the end all right, as if nothing had happened. Such is said, however, to have been the case with the Rothschilds. When the late Franco German war broke out, this house had every confidence in the success of the French arms, and made its investments accordingly, and had the resuit been as the shrewd financiers anticipated, their profits would have been simply enormous. But for the nonce they were mistaken, and but for their quick counter operations and reinvestments, their losses would have been thrice as large. Under these circumstances, it is consoling to the London member of the house to have won the Derby. -Mrs. Stowe, the author of Uncle Tom's Cabin, has lately made a visit to the South, an account of which she has furnished to the Church Union, of New York. She declares that the South is quiet, and that, so far from there being prejudice against Northern settlers, honest folks of that kind will find room and welcome. Coming from the author of Uncle Tom's Cabin, this ought to be considered satisfactory. Mrs. Stowe was accompanied by an invalid sister on her journey, and bears testimony also to the uniform courtesy, attention and kindness which the two women, travelling without escort, received on all sides from the men and women of the South. It might not suit the purposes exactly of the majority of the congressional committee appointed to investigate the condition of the South, else we would suggest that they call Mrs. Stowe before them, also Mr. Horace Greeley, General Sherman and some others who have lately seen for themselves.

-The Hartford Times prints an amusing catalogue of Nilsson's troubles in that vicinity a short time since. She had parlous words with her manager, Strakosch; she dropped her beautiful watch, the gift of the Emperor, and accidentally put her heel on it; she disliked the cooking at the Aliyn House, and wanted the cook to bring a chicken to her room and cook it over the grate, which the cook utterly and contemptuously refused to do. But her smiles and sweetness returned, as by magic, when a lovely bouquet with Governor Jewell's compliments arrived, and would have continued had not a subsequent message announced the bouquet as intended for Cary; the storm then grew fearful, her brow knitted, her cheek flushed, and as her dress of white satin was defaced by some burnt cork left by the negro minstrels who preceded her in the hall where the performance took place, there was a culmination of wrath which obliged those about her to look for shelter. The papers, nevertheless, said she sang "I know that my Redeemer Liveth" in angelic style.

-A gossipy reporter in the New York World has been making a tour among the lesser lights of the metropolitan stage, and records the results in four columns of sprightly reading. He found one pretty little ballet girl in a try in the use of the sewing machine, she eked | Maximilian II, of Bavaria, during his youth, by out her scanty salary sufficiently to support herself and her husband, formerly an orchestra player, but crippled and shiftless. Others in the same building supported mothers, sisters, or sounger brothers, by their theatrical salaries and by working daytimes in shops. One of these, a buxom English girl bearing the prosalc name of Polly, was introduced, and in turn acted as guide to the inquirer in his further rambles among the sisterhood. One fat, jolly burlesqueuse from H'england, declared life "stunning 'ere, and an awful deal tollier than London, you know." She was profuse in anecdotes of stock actresses who supported "lazy 'ounds of 'usbands," and declared her branch of the art preferable to all others. She was no such fool as to marry cut of the business, but was going to have a professional, now clown in a pantomime, who gets "two 'undred dollars a week." Another community was composed entirely of "high-priced dancers; no ballet and utility girls here," and all were industrious, pretty and lady-like. One premiere danseuse, French by birth, was bleaching her blonde hair, and called attention to her dress, every stitch of which she made herself. She sald, "You people think we're fast. That's all nonsense. It's only the little dancers, la canaille that can afford to be dissipated. I'm too tired after the theatre to go on a spree, as they call it. Besides, it hurts our business." The observer sums up that the ballet girls are poorly paid, and lead a life devoid of romance; that the burlesquese enjoys the fat things of the profession most abundantly, and that the favorite dancers live twice as comfortable and quite as decorously as many of the chaste matrons and daughters of our country.

Graceful and appropriate was the tribute paid to the fallen heroes of the Lost Cause, by Attorney-General Chamberlain, the orator on the occasion of the decoration of the graves of the Union dead, at Magnolia, on Tuesday last. We quote his words:

"Comrades and friends! Not far from this spot where our comrades sleep is the last resting place of many who fought and fell upon the other-side of this great conflict. As with loving and tender pride we recall the memories of our heroes, shall we not also remember that valor and devotion were conspicuously illustrated in the lives and deaths of those whom in their lives we knew as enemies? The struggle is over; the war is ended. Shall we not freely acknowledge that upon every field of this revolution we met those whose courage and whose devotion to the cause which they supported has challenged the admiration of the world ! Gentle and loving hands have already laid upon those graves the tributes of tender sympathy and respect, and what generous heart will to-day utter a reproachful word, or do less than acknowledge the consistent and heroic devotion which characterized our fallen brethren upon the other side? The great issues which divided them from us have been settled; the cause for which they fought has failed; the hopes which they cherished have been disappointed, and now the voice which duty, and patriotism, and generosity utter, is one of the cause to which they freely devoted their the still contending passions of the hour, let us hear the still, calm voice of true patriotism crying to us all, peace! peace! Let the strife now be ended; let the past, with all its miseries, its enstrangements, and its bitterness, be forgotten; and let us henceforth remember only that upon both sides brave and true men fought and fell, and that the work which they have left to us is to rebuild the waste places, to bind up the wounds of war, and to go forward together to the full realization of all the blesslugs which our common struggles and our common experiences have secured. Let us now build to the perpetual memory of those whom we honor to-day, a temple of liberty so fair, so spacious, so immovable, that beneath its ample protection friends and foes shall find a sate shelter from all the evils which have disturbed our past or which still threaten our present safety. To this great work we are called by the memories which this day recalls, had numerous articles relative to the agitation produced in Germany by the recent excommunication of Dr. Döllinger by the Archpishop of Munich. This distinguished divine, now seventy-three years of age, and for over forty years Professor of Theology in the University of Munich, has for many years been considered one of the ablest scholars in the Catholic Church, and is specially known by his labors in the field of ecclesiastical history. He was opposed to the promulgation of the doctrine of the infallibility of the Pope, and stated his reasons in the public prints, before the meeting of the late Council at Rome. By virtue of his office he was a member of the Council, and there again was the head of the opposition. After the adoption of the dogma, however, nearly all the dissenters gave in their adhesion, subjecting, according to the requirements of their church, their own judgments to the decree of the Ecumenical Council. This Dr. Döllinger refused to do; whereupon his immediate spiritual superior, the Archbishop of Munich, excommunicated him. This, in brief, is a statement of the case, which is making considerable noise in the world. The young King of Bavaria has given countenance to Dr. Döllinger, and a number of his colleagues of the University, if not all, have sided with him; so also have the people of Munich generally, and a number of the parish priests. One or two bishops, in other parts of Germany, have also taken the same stand. As nothing came of the defec tion of Father Hyacinthe, so, it is argued by the Roman Catholic press, nothing will re sult from this latest revolt against the church, except, perhaps, some modification in the Concordat of Bavaria with the Holy See. We know that many of the English periodicals, as also some in America, predict a for midable schism as likely to be the result of this agitation; but from what we know of the relation of the parties, we hardly think that such will be the case. Dr. Döllinger lacks nearly every one of the elements that constituted Martin Luther the successful "Reformer;" but even if this were otherwise, he is too old to organize such a movement-to say nothing of the altered circum-

The Catholic press, however, somewhat underrates the force of this movement. The Catholic World, speaking on the subject says: "Dr. Döllinger in early life was a strict Ul-stances of the times.

tramontane, and until 1861 had given no indication whatever of having a heterodox tendency. His recent course may be traced back fourth floor room, where, by constant indus- to an idea first implanted in the mind of King his tutor, the distinguished philosopher Schelling, namely: the reunion of Christendom on a basis of compromise between the Catholic Church and the Eastern and Western sects, excluding the supremacy of the Pope. The great lever by which this mighty work was to be accomplished was to be a society of learned men and able statesmen, directed by the King himselt. The gathering for these learned men was naturally the University of Munich, and from the chairs of this University would proceed that teaching and influence which should train up a body of disciples ready to sustain and carry out in their various professions and post of influence the grand project conceived in the philosophic brain of Schelling and eagerly adopted by his royal pupil. As a matter of course, those professors of the University who were thoroughly loyal to Rome must either submit to the royal dictation or be removed. Phillipps and several other distinguished professors sacrificed their places to their conscience. Döllinger submitted."

Who is Responsible !

The Marion Crescent, in a well considered article, with the above heading, lays the blame of the present disturbed state of the country, and of the many reported K. K. outrages, at the doors of the Governor, who fails to execute judicial decrees, and thereby encourages crime. After speaking of this in general terms, it descends to particulars, giving several instances of recent occurrence in Marion County. A negro was tried by a negro jury of his own selection, for stealing a bale of cotton, found guilty, and sentenced by a Radical Judge (Rutland) to two years in the Penitentiary. He was pardoned by the Governor after a very short stay in Columbia. Two colored boys were tried in the same way for hog stealing, convicted, and sent to the Penitentiary. They also were pardoned. The Crescent then goes on to sav: "A gentleman in this community gathered from a p- tion of his farm three hundred bushels of u ... and thirty bales of cotton in 1869. From the same land, last year, after expending an equal amount in fertilizers and labor, he gathered from the same land fifteen bales of cotton and nary bushel of corn-the whole had been stolen. What encouragement we ask, has he to prosecute the thieves, when he is reasonably certain that the Governor would pardon them if he succeeded, at great trouble and expense, in their conviction?"

The Future of France: The London Times, of May 16th, has an article on the government of the future for France, when the Commune shall have been suppressed. It says that an impatience of slow progress, and a consequent resentment of compromise, constitute the standing difficulty in the progress of France. The yearnings after order and peace of a nation wearied by dissension and disaster appear just now to support a movement in favor of kindness to the memories of those who fell in Henry V, and it is even said that the Assembly of Versailles is prepared to accept him fortunes and their lives. Above the noise of as King. The Comte de Chambord has never manifested any disposition to abate one jot of his hereditary pretensions. He is a oneidea man, whose hobby is that France must necessarily return to its allegiance to the family of which he is the head.
