WASHINGTON, March 30.—Parties interested in the removal of Casey as Collector of Customs for New Orleans, are much discouraged this morning. The Georgia extremists are jubilant over the action regarding Texas; they claim that it will give them two more votes against Bingham's amendment. The Texan Senators, however, are not committed to either party.

The following message was sent to Congress to-day, by President Grant: It is unusual to notify Congress by message, of the proclamation of Constitutional amendments. In view, however, of the vast importance of the fifteenth amendment, this day declared a part of that revered instrument, departure from usual custom is justifiable. A measure which makes 4,000,000 people voters, who were heretofore declared by the highest judicial tribunal not citizens, and ineligible to become so, is a measure of grander importance than any one act since the foundation of our free Government. The President calls upon the newly enfranchised race to make themselves worthy of their new privileges, and urges the whites to withhold no legal privilege of advancement to the new citizens. He quotes from Washington, regarding the importance of intelligence and education, and calls upon Congress to promote and encourage popular education, and upon all people, everywhere, to see that all who possess political rights shall have an opportunity to acquire that knowledge which shall make their share in the Government a blessing instead of danger. By such means only, can the benefits contemplated by this amendment be secured.

REPORTED FIGHTING IN CUBA.—The Herald has advices from Nuevitas to the 20th, via Havana and Key West. They report that the filibusters effected a landing near Nuevas Grandes. Troops were telegraphed for from Puerto Principe. They arrived at Nuevitas on the 19th, and immediately started in pursuit of the rebels. Two gun-boats also sailed for Nuevas Grandes to cut off their retreat by sea. Hard fighting was reported near Manote; no particulars had been received. The troops must have lost heavily, as the Spaniards at Nuevitas seemed much depressed.

The Secrets of Beauty.

Two Philadelphia doctors, Messrs. D. G. Brinton and Geo. H. Napheys, have united in the production of a book on "Personal Beauty, How to Cultivate and Preserve it in accordance with the Laws of Health." (W. J. Holland.) They have succeeded in gathering a number of important maxims on the subject, interspersed with more or less interesting anecdotes, and have made altogether a volume of much value to the students of beauty. We will give our readers what is most remarkable in this mine of wisdom:

The height should be exactly equal to the distance between the tips of the middle fingers of either hand when the arms are fully extended. Ten times the length of the hand, or seven and a-half times the length of the foot, or five times the diameter of the chest from one arm-pit to the other, should also each give the height of the whole body. The distance from the junction of the thighs to the ground should be the same as from that point to the crown of the head. The knee should be precisely midway between the same point and the bottom of the heel. The distance from the elbow to the tip of the middle finger should be the same as from the elbow to the middle line of the breast. From the top of the head to the level of the chin should be the same as from the level of the chin to that of the arm-pits, and from the heel to the toe.

A want of symmetry in the shoulders is very common among those who write or paint steadily. The right shoulder usually becomes higher, and the bones more prominent. These persons should practice daily and regularly, sitting with the left shoulder elevated and the right depressed. They should avoid low-necked dresses, and on state occasions conceal the lack of uniformity by a soft padding. A course of calisthenics is also of great service.

In regard to obesity and leanness, the Banting system of diet is explained and recommended, but with caution. It seems that corpulence is often a protection thrown out by the system against some threatening disease. If the corpulence is then successfully attacked, the victory may cost the person her life. A case is recorded by Dr. Maccary where an obese child was reduced in flesh, but became ever after subject to epileptic fits. A number of instances have been recently published in medical journals, where ladies have brought on fatal disease of the kidneys by a too determinate and unwise reduction of their weight. A case came recently under our own notice, where a young lady weighing nearly 200 pounds, entered upon the reduction of her size with great zeal, but little discretion. She succeeded, but developed in the process the seeds of hereditary consumption of the lungs.

In some persons, the hair grows down upon the forehead, destroying its contour and beauty. This may be remedied by carefully removing the hairs, which are generally thin and fine, by one of the depilatories to be mentioned hereafter. Charlotte Bremer, in her life of her sister, Frederica Bremer, relates that this was one of the girlish troubles of the gifted authoress, and her mother often regretted the disfigurement. One day, Frederica cut off the hair around her forehead with the scissors. Her mother, not at once perceiving what she had been about, remarked in the course of the day, "Why, Frederica, your forehead is not so low after all." This delighted her daughter, but soon the hairs commenced to re-appear, stiff and bristly. But with heroic perseverance, Frederica pulled them out, one after another, with a pair of tweezers, until she had achieved that fine forehead which those who saw her in her visit to this country may remember.

Many a lady is disgusted with herself after a night at a ball-room or some unusual watching, to find a dark blue line beneath her eyes, the sure indication of excessive excitement of the system. In London and Paris, where wild young clerks are apt to acquire a black eye occasionally in their nocturnal rambles, which might cost them their position if the head of their houses were to notice it, there is a class of artists whose avocation it is to conceal the trace of such untoward accidents. For minor discolorations, such as we are now speaking of, they employ the following method: Take a little precipitated French chalk in impalpable powder, rub it on the part, and gently blow or dust off the loose particles. Then apply a little of the same powder, very slightly tinted with carmine, dusting in the same manner. Clear the edges of the eye-lashes with a pencil, and tone down the outer margin of the dusted portion, so that it insensibly merges into the surrounding skin.

Dr. Cid, an inventive surgeon of Paris, noticed that elderly people, who for a long time have worn eye-glasses supported on the nose by a spring, are apt to have this organ long and thin. This he attributes to the compression which the spring exerts on the arteries by which the nose is nourished. The idea occurred to him that the hint should be made useful. Not long afterwards a young lady of fifteen years consulted him, to see if he could restore to moderate dimensions her nose, which was large, fleshy and unsightly. The trait, he found, was hereditary in her family, as her mother and sister were similarly afflicted. This was discouraging, as hereditary peculiarities are particularly obstinate, but the doctor determined to try his method. He took exact measurement and had constructed for her a "lunette pince-nez," a spring and pad for compressing the artery, which she wore at night, and whenever she conveniently could in the day-time. In three weeks a consoling diminution was evident, and in three months the young lady was quite satisfied with the improvement in her features.

A handsome leg is a rarity, we had almost said an impossibility, among American women. The reason of this is the place where they wear their garters. No French woman, no English woman of cultivation, nowadays wears her garter below the knee. It is ruinous to the shape of the calf. More than this, it has serious consequences of another kind. The principal vein of the leg (vena saphena brevis) runs just beneath the skin, until it nearly reaches the knee, when it sinks between the muscles. Now if this is restricted at its largest part by a tight garter, the blood is checked in its return to the heart, the feet are easily chilled, and more liable to disease, the other veins of the legs are swollen into hard, blue knots, become varicose, as it is called, and often break, forming obstinate ulcers. This is a picture which a physician sees nearly every day. With the garter fastened above the knee all this pain and deformity is avoided; but it is still better to wear no garter at all, and suspend the stocking by tapes to a belt around the waist. In this case, however, a well-fitting stocking is needed.

A whole chapter is devoted to the subject of giving an artificial bloom to the cheeks. The word rouge in French simply means red, and is applied to a great variety of products having this color. That, however, which is put up and sold for the complexion, is generally, and should be always, derived from one or two sources: either from cochineal, a small bug found on the leaves of the cactus plant in Brazil, which yields carmine, or from the familiar plant known as the "dyer's saffron," or saffron flower, which furnishes carthamine. The latter is called "rouge-vegetale." A cheap, inferior, and injurious article is prepared from vermilion, which is a form of mercury, and should be avoided. Besides rouge, a blue coloring matter is employed to indicate the veins. "Emmeling" is explained to be nothing more than a skillful painting of the face, often done with injurious substances. Wrinkles are filled up with a paste, and the pigments then laid on by the emmeller.

The growth of the hair in a healthy scalp is from eight to ten inches a year. Its rapidity is not the same at all times. A German writer who has given great attention to this small matter (if, indeed, any of the operations of nature should be called small,) has found that it grows faster in the day-time than at night, and in the summer than winter. There is a common notion that the increase is also more marked in the first half of the lunar month, and there are not wanting men of science who have endorsed this belief. "Who does not know by his own experience," confidently says the Abbe Toaldo, in his Saggio Meteorologico, "that the hair and nails grow faster after the new than after the full moon?" To which question most physicians coolly reply that nobody knows it. As it is a matter of one's own experience, we recommend every one who is curious about it to observe for himself, and make up his own mind, irrespective of the agreement of doctors.

Vast quantities of sugar of lead have been used of late years for a dye. It is usually compounded with glycerine, water, flower of sulphur, and some aromatic and coloring substances. This is the composition of nine out of ten of the hair restorers, hair tonics, and hair washes, so loudly advertised all over the country. No doubt the lead and sulphur do darken the hair, but the color they yield is a dirty brown, not at all natural or pleasing. This is not all. We must condemn this mixture, or any mixture for this purpose containing lead, as dangerous to health and life. Several cases have occurred within the last year or two, where lead palsy, lead colic, and fatal poisoning were caused by the use of just such hair dyes. Very recently a physician of Davenport, Iowa, who for four years had employed a lead dye for his hair and beard, perished with all the symptoms of lead poison. A chemical examination proved that the metal had been absorbed by the skin, and was present in his internal organs.

A few years ago an absurd clamor was raised by some sensational papers about the alleged discovery of minute ova—nits, in plain terms—on the hair sold for chignons. It was asserted that any one who wore them exposed her head to the invasion of very unwelcome guests of the insect kind. Small masses called gregarines were pointed out on some hair as these pretended ova. There was not a word of scientific truth in all this. The methods employed to prepare hair for market will certainly clean it thoroughly from all such impurities, and the gregarines, when examined by competent microscopists, turn out to be nothing but very minute fungi, entirely harmless to the skin, and also very rarely met with on false hair of any kind.

The following is a summary of advice to a woman who wishes to be beautiful: First, let her correct her bad habits, if she has any, of carriage, of expression, of want of cleanliness, of false modes of dress, of injudicious diet, and of indolence.

Secondly, let her study her own complexion, expression, stature, profile and outline, precisely as an artist does those of one of his ideal figures, and with the same care and pains as the artist let her choose for herself the contrasting and harmonizing colors, the coiffure, the expression, and the manner best adapted to bring out prominently all her natural advantages, and throw into the shade all unfavorable traits.

Thirdly, let unsightly warts and scars be done away with, let hairs which injure the appearance be destroyed, let complexion and hair be cultivated, the form developed, diminished or increased by hygienic, emotional and dietetic means, the features and organs of special sense subjected, if need be, to the training and the modification of the surgeon, and the general health improved under the advice of an intelligent physician, the teeth, voice, and even the nails attended to. If she has done all this, there will be little need for the purely venal cosmetic arts, such as paint, powder, patches and rouge.
