

WORTH HER KEEP.

Our readers will be glad to know that one costly American warship is earning her keep. An Armenian, who had been in America for years and who had become a naturalized citizen of the United States, revisited his native land a few months ago. When the massacres broke out he endeavored to return to America, but was arrested and with his wife and children imprisoned in the jail at Boodroom, a Turkish town on the Aegean Sea. The American man-of-war "Marblehead" was cruising in the vicinity, and when her commander learned of the incident he sailed for Boodroom and notified the authorities of that town that unless the Armenian and his family were released there would be trouble. Then he cleared his ship for action and trained his guns on the town. It was not long before the Armenians stood on the deck of the American ship. To protect the weak and innocent is a good use to put war vessels to, and may those that fly our country's flag never fight in a less worthy cause.

The Armenian massacres continue, but the powers have apparently ceased to try to check them. But appearances are deceitful in nothing more than in diplomacy.

The indomitable Dr. Parkhurst is reorganizing his forces for another assault on municipal corruption in New York. Success to him.
