High School Exercises

The usual Friday afternoon program was carried out and notwithstanding that several were absent we had a pleasant time. A declamation by Robert Burford was highly creditable to him. The debate was very good. Rev. Mr. Dutil and Mr. Munden were present and Mr. Dutil favored us with a bright little story that illustrated the money value of honesty.

A petition is being put in circulation today to extend the Ocala subschool district two miles square. Only one man refused to sign it and he on the ground that if any more money was needed to run our schools, the pupils attending the schools should be taxed for that purpose, as they receive the benefit.

A gentleman from South Carolina desires to locate a military institute in Ocala. He desires to know how much Ocala will do to secure such a school.

Howard Academy has an enrollment of 325 pupils and last month they averaged a daily attendance of 258 scholars.

TERPSICHOEAN CARNIVAL

An Evening in Fairyland

Friday evening, March 8, Professor Northcutt will give a terpsichorean carnival at the Ocala Rifles' Armory. A special stage has been erected for this occasion and a charming program arranged consisting of songs, dances, cake walks and marches. Among the most attractive numbers on the program will be a snap shot from Buffalo Bill's wild west show, an Oriental tea party, a Midsummer Night's Dream, Uncle Sam's Reception and Cake Walk to all the Nations, Parisian Dancing Girls, and Looking Backward, by eight pretty Irish maids. Fifty children will take part in this ball, and a special program has been arranged for the Ocala House Orchestra, which will furnish the music for the occasion. This entertainment bids fair to surpass all previous efforts in this line given by Professor Northcutt. All those not holding tickets will be charged 50 cents at the door. Children 25 cents. The grand march will begin promptly at 8:30 o'clock.

SOCIAL TIME AT SPRING PARK

Annual Supper of the Ladies' Village Improvement Society

The ladies comprising the Spring Park Village Improvement Society celebrated its thirteenth anniversary last evening in its cozy hall by one of its famous suppers, which brought together more than a hundred persons who enjoyed an evening of pleasant social commingling that left nothing wanting in the desires of those present.

At 6 o'clock the hall was lit up and shortly after Mrs. Packham, the queenly president of the society, ably assisted by Mrs. Sears, Mrs. J. E. French, Mrs. Culling, Mrs. Martha Hall, Miss Laura Churchill, Miss Wallace, Miss Martin, ably seconded by Mr. Packham, were in evidence to welcome the guests and make them feel as members of the family.

The ladies were shown up stairs, where their wraps, hats, etc., were taken care of, while the male persuasion were ushered into the smoker where their superfluous garments were properly checked.

When the proper hour for refreshments had arrived, Mr. Packham, who was installed as master of ceremonies, said, in the absence of a clergyman, every one would say grace in their hearts and gather around the festive board. Every one present who seemed to have nursed a keen appetite, lined up beautifully and for the next two hours gastronomic feats, and the unspeakable toothsome of the viands spread before them by the artistic and fair Ganymedes, Misses Chur-stammering his thanks and and trying to properly adjust a lump of Teapot delicacies, which he was interviewing when called on, used up his time without saying anything worthy to go down in history. George Young, the poet laureate of the Park and a composer of melo-dramatic song, was announced and received the closest attention in singing one of his amusing and laughable lyrical gems, entichill, Wallace, Martin, et. al., was most religiously observed.

That those detained or belated by getting lost in the woods en route to the scene of the festivities might not be slighted or the aching void in their anatomy go unfilled, a table was set apart and they fared as sumptuously as the first comers.

Among those noted at the table were Jake Brown, Dr. Weeks, the Smoaks, Elmore Davidson, Mose Brown and John Mathews.

The supper was in every particular, from the abundance, richness, flavor, etc., of the eatables (liquids and solids), as fine as the ladies of the L. V. I. S. ever prepared in their history, which is enough said, but a few were rash enough to say in their gastronomic enthusiasm that the baked beans and brown bread were a little the most delicious and tempting that had caused the feasters to stray from their well formed resolutions of moderation and for the once luxuriate in a flush of the good things spread before them.

A "literary feast" was to follow a "flow of soul," and to that end a well prepared program had been arranged, but the lateness of the hour, 10 p. m. and the eagerness of the young people to woo the terpsichorean goddess, and the irresistible importunings of the fair ones, caused the obliging master of ceremonies, Mr. Packham, to sponge out about all of the program, which he did with such a neat, unique and business-like talk that he set all to laughing. He was roundly applauded for his felicitous remarks.

Among the things said was a compliment to the Star for the interest it took in the welfare of the L. V. I. Society and the excellence of its local news, covering every section of Marion county, and how the Parkites, here or elsewhere always awaited its arrival with impatience. Therefore, said Mr. Packham, it deserved the support of the people, for it is a clean, newsy paper. Mr. Packham called on the editor for a few minutes' talk. But, under the weight of the compliments loaded on his paper, he, between

Then came the drawings, a lovely sofa pillow, the beautiful handiwork of Mrs. Morse, which fell to the lot of H. J. Peterman, Ocala; the blue quilt was taken in by Mose Brown and the yellow quilt fell to the lot of the boss of the Teapot, Jake Brown, whose face lit up at his good fortune as if a self-propelled electric plant was casting the radiance of several arc lamps athwart his genial countenance.

The quilts were the work of the ladies of the society and were beauties, as shown when Miss Churchill, by request, draped herself in the blue one and passed into the hall, transforming herself into a veritable pretty little Japanese maid fresh from school.

Then it was that Mr. Packham sang out, "Choose your partners," and in a moment the floor was covered with dancers and for aught this reporter knows, Mose Brown and several other dance enthusiasts, though worn to a frazzle, are still "sashaying" over the floor and bowing with chivalric grace to their fair partners.

Mr. John Mathews called the numbers and Morgan Christie, of Anthony, and the engineer of the steam launch Helen, of Silver Springs, furnished the music.

Notes

Grandpa French, as he took in the festivities of the evening, grew young again and spread sociability and sunshine everywhere by his friendly greetings. He felt highly complimented when told his white wash brush as applied to the trees, marked his new road to the Park via the hard road, that "any old wayfarer" could reach his destination and Jake Brown stray off on the bicycle path and give as his excuse that he imagined he was passing through "Lovers' Lane."

Lee Howell led the Anthony delegation, while Frank Brown and Albert Sidney Johnson, at the head of the Silver Springs delegation, made a bright and shining procession.

Charley French, by his portly proportions and genial smile for all, made visitors think he was solely the product of Spring Park sunshine and his amiable wife's cleverness and tact aided much to make strangers feel
