Not "How Much?"

but "how good" is the question that every one should ask in buying candy.

The old saying that "a man is judged by the candy he gives" holds good today same as always. Buy the best—don't take the "just as good" kind.

A HANDSOME NEW CAR

Mr. Edward Holder has placed an order with the Franklin Auto Co. for one of their newest model 45-horse power touring cars, the largest and most powerful cars they build. The car, which is the heaviest and most expensive to be shipped to this city, will be shipped out about the 25th of this month.

WILL GO TO SEABREEZE

Mrs. S. T. Sistrunk and children will spend the summer at Seabreeze. They have rented a cottage there and will go over about June 1st to remain for three or four months.

CANTALOUPE TO MOVE

The first shipments of cantaloupes from the famous cantaloupe sections of Marion county will be made next week. Local shipments will be made early in the week and towards the last of the week it is thought several car lot shipments will be made. The crop is fair and although cut down somewhat by the drouth of last month is good and good prices ought to be realized.

A great many people visited the Berlin theater last night and all came away well pleased. The "dancing swine" is the funniest ever, and most of the other pictures are almost as ticklesome. The adventures of Aladdin in finding, losing and recovering his wonderful lamp are artistically depicted and alone worth more than the price of the show. The same pictures are on this evening and we can testify they are all well worth seeing. "Ben Hur" will be the piece de resistance tomorrow night.

GOOD THING TO DIE WITH

Some one said religion and life insurance were good things to die with. See the "man," he will tell you where to get both. M. D. Wilson is the "man."

FOUND HIM GUILTY

The time of the circuit court yesterday afternoon was taken up with securing a jury and trying the case of the state vs. Dave English, colored, for running a gambling house. The jury found him guilty and sentence will be passed later. Mr. R. B. Bullock defended the man.

GREAT WORK AT THE GULF

Mr. Robert A. Alfred, who is well known and much liked in Ocala, is collector of the port and superintendent for the company. Mr. Alfred is a man of affairs, well versed in business and skilled in more than one trade. He occupies a pleasant cottage on one of the highest parts of the island, and those who partake of his hospitality are fortunate indeed. At present he is rather lonesome, as his wife and daughter are on a visit north.

Mr. C. E. Morris is bookkeeper for the company. He is well known to many Marion county folks, as he ran a steamboat on the upper Withlacoochee for several years. He has a daughter, Miss Ethel, attending the Ocala High School. He is now also on the lonesome list, his wife and younger children being in Georgia for the summer.

Mixson and Vidal run two well appointed and sufficient stores at Inglis and Port Inglis. Mr. Vidal conducts the mail and passengers between Inglis and the port. A trip on the weirdly beautiful Withlacoochee to his swift launch is an event to remember.

Mrs. J. H. McCormack conducts a big boarding house at Port Inglis. The rooms are clean and airy, the table well supplied and there is a magnificent view of the blue, smiling gulf and the shipping from the spacious verandas of the house.

Miss Carrie Coburn is the postmistress, and is as efficient and accommodating as an official ever gets to be.

Mr. G. A. Layne and his son, Byron, both well known in Ocala, are among the ship yard force, and both are doing well.

W. W. Carlton, who for some time clerked for T. B. Snyder in Ocala has a position in the store of Mixson and Vidal at Inglis. "Shorty" has to take only two steps where other folks take three, and can reach a shelf or two higher without a ladder, consequently he is an invaluable clerk. The Inglis girls hope he will stay there till persimmons get ripe.

Port Inglis has a perfect little gem of a school house. It is probably the best appointed of its size in the state.

There are no animals larger than a dog on the island and no vehicle larger than a wheel barrow. The roads are shell-covered paths, and the travelers thereon are not afflicted with dust or mud.

The bathing around the island isn't good, owing to the shell bottoms, but the company has equipped its houses with bath tubs and supplies them with plenty of soft water, which for all the year round is best, after all.

The fishing in the waters near the island is superb. It is no trouble for even an amateur to pull in the finny leautes.

Port Inglis is not exactly an Evesless Eden, but the men are greatly in the majority. Nearly all the men are employees of the Port Inglis Terminal Company. They are picked men, industrious and highly efficient.

Captain Inglis has a beautiful cottage on the southern end of the island. It is equipped with all modern conveniences, and is a palace in miniature. His naphtha yacht, Tuna, now out of commission, is an elegant specimen of marine architecture—comfortable, safe and speedy as well as pretty.

Captain Alfred is building a craft that will make a good torpedo boat in case of war. She is sharp enough to slave a dandy, and will make twenty miles an hour.

Good as a Yaching Trip

A man who gets an invitation to spend a day on one of the tug boats, taking barges out to the ships, is in luck, and it is his own fault if he doesn't have the very best of a time. A tug boat is all business and business all the time and her captain and crew have to be just as proficient in their line as the captain and crew of a Cunard liner have to be in theirs. His rule had no exception on the tug Alexander Wyllie, on board which a member of the Star's staff made the trip a few days ago.

The tug casts off the dock at the port at the proper stage of the tide, and goes up the river half way to Inglis, taking along an empty barge. At the half-way point, she meets the stern-wheeler, bringing down a loaded barge, and swaps without any boot. Taking the loaded barge in tow, the tug starts for the sea. The man at the wheel (generally the captain) has no sinecure on this river trip, particularly going up. In the first place, it isn't child's play to hold the wheel, and he must know the river and power of his boat to a fraction, for the river is crooked and the tow unwieldy, and a very little error would send one vessel or the other crashing into the bank. Coming down the river is easier, but his watchfulness must not relax until the boats are well out in the bay, clear of the shallow water and the reefs. It also requires great skill to lay a loaded barge alongside a steamship when the waves are strong enough to smash a vessel if she hits at the wrong time or place.

A guest on the boat, however, doesn't have to worry about these things. He is at home; he has the freedom of the boat, and if he doesn't enjoy himself, it's his own fault. He can sit on the upper deck and look at the sea and the ships, and the islands in the distance, or if he wants to talk, he can find plenty to talk to. When grub time comes he eats in the galley, with the captain and crew. The food is abundant and well cooked and seldom fails to exact justice.

One of the best places on the boat is to sit on the rail by the engine room, watching the green water rush by and listening to the rhythmic chant of the engines, as with the power of more than twice a hundred horses they push the boat through the waves and pull the unwilling and unwieldy tow along behind. There should always be a note of rest in the voice of the steam engine, for it is the song of a mighty giant, telling of the immense burden he has lifted from the muscles of toiling man.

Captain Joe Crevasse, the skipper of the Wyllie, is a veteran steamboat man, and he says (and he ought to know) that he has a good crew. The engineer (T. A. Levines) is almost a Marion county boy, for his home is at Montbrook, and he passed much time at Martel, in the employ of the Martel Lumber Company. The crew of the Wyllie were slightly grouchy over the fact that they were not on their regular boat, the A. E. Bigelow, which was being repaired, and which they said was a yacht to the Wyllie. The Wyllie, however, seemed to the newspaper man to be a good boat, and Captain Joe said, "She gets there, all the same."

Let me give you figures on your job painting or paper hanging. All work fully guaranteed, neatly and quickly done. H. I. Puckett, general delivery, city.

Price vs. Quality and Perfect Fitting

Mere spectacles fit in a haphazard way are apt to be an injury to the eyes. This is a matter in which you cannot afford to take any chances at all.

THE SMALL DIFFERENCE of Price should not be considered when the question of EYESIGHT is involved.

A Cordial Invitation to Attend It from Colonel Rogers

Come early and stay late.
We desire all to have a most lovable day and the best time of the season, Thursday, May 14th.

Mrs. Jack Rentz is visiting her parents, Rev. and Mrs. Davis, at Kirkwood, Ga., where she will remain until June 1st.

Mrs. Arthur Clark has returned from a two week's stay in Jacksonville, where she has been having her eyes treated.

Mrs. E. T. Helvenston has returned from Tallahassee, where she went as a delegate to the meeting of the U. D. C. of the state. Mrs. F. E. Harris, who was also a delegate, stopped off at Monticello, to visit her brother, Mr. J. J. McDonald for a few days. The stay in Tallahassee was a most delightful one and the session of the Daughters one of the most interesting ever held. Mrs. Badger, of this city, was elected third vice president.

Mr. Donald Ansley of Brooksville, who is visiting his sister, Mrs. Sanford Jewett in this city, is quite ill with fever.

The outside work on Mr. W. W. Ciyatt's handsome two-story brick building is all completed and the structure presents a substantial and improving appearance.
