THE DIAMOND FROM THE SKY

ventured with steadfast courage and high resolve.

Esther does not know that Blair has knowledge of John Powell and his yacht. But Blair, having no cause for secrecy when he has arrived in Santa Barbara, has not remained hidden at a hotel, as Esther has, the discreet Quabba also keeping from sight. So Blair has learned Arthur has left the yacht and has returned to Los Angeles on business.

Unless Esther has communicated with Arthur, which Blair does not deem likely, Arthur has no reason as yet to suspect him, Blair knows. In his daring way Blair is indifferent. He telegraphs to Arthur he has arrived in Santa Barbara and is disappointed in missing him. Arthur realizes that he is a usurper, standing in the way of Blair's birthright, the Stanley heritage. For if not for the old association of their wild youth in Virginia, Arthur has a generous desire to make amends for the injustice he thinks he does Blair.

It is Vivian's wish also to keep Blair from Los Angeles. The time may come when she may need him, though, when she battles against Durand, the king of diamonds, and the rest of the "pack," as they call themselves. But just now she is not in open warfare with the "pack." She suggests to Arthur that Blair stay and look after the yacht in Santa Barbara and that later they join him there for a cruise altogether. How she is to exert her will upon Arthur in the proximity of Blair is a matter that Vivian leaves to the time and the place.

Blair and the sailing master of the yacht get their telegraphed instructions from Arthur, and when Blair goes aboard he finds the sailing master and a few of the men of one watch aboard, the rest of the crew having been given shore leave in the absence of the owner.

"Make yourself at home, Mr. Stanley," says the sailing master. "You will find things in Mr. Powell's cabin." "I will need a good deal of fixing up," Blair explains laughingly. "My man and I got lost in the mountains while hunting." And he indicated Luke, who had come aboard with him. "Let your man go to the forecastle, and I will see he is fitted out," said the sailing master. "As for you, sir, I take it from Mr. Powell's telegram you are to help yourself to what you wish of his things in your own arrival."

The sailing master led Blair to Arthur's cabin and then said he would take the launch to the wharf and round up the crew in Santa Barbara. "Which," he added, "won't be hard to do, as Santa Barbara is a temperance town. It is only a question of which of the movie shows the men are at."

As the launch panted to the wharf the sailing master and the man running the launch were aware of a very pretty girl in a snowy yachting costume being rowed in the direction of John Powell's yacht by a launchboard of foreign aspect. The sailing master noticed the girl in the rowboat eyed him keenly, but turned as though disappointed.

Arriving by the companionway, Esther cautioned Quabba to make no explanation if questioned, as she wished to give Arthur the happy surprise of facing him unannounced. But no sailor on watch barred her way nor were any questions shouted over the rail to Quabba. The yacht swung idly at anchor, and such of the crew as were on the boat were in the forecastle with the gypsy fellow who had come aboard with the friend of the owner. Here the bottle of liquor that Luke had brought was augmented by some of the same quality one of the hospitable sailors had in his bunk.

In Arthur's cabin Blair had refreshed himself with a shower and had donned fresh linen and a yachting suit of Arthur's. The two young men were of the same size, and the uniform coat and cap fitted Blair to a nicety.

Esther, crossing the deck, saw no sailor or officer in charge. She heard some one stirring about and there, in what was evidently the owner's cabin, she noted a tall and stalwart young man in uniform, his back turned to the open door. Esther tiptoed forward and, pulling the diamond from the sky out in view upon her neck, her lips had framed the word "Arthur!" when she found herself gazing horrified into a mirror that reflected the handsome but wicked face of Blair!

Esther turned with a cry for help and sped across the deck. There, from the doorway to the forecastle, the bulky form of a leering, sodden brute creature faced her. It was Luke Lovell! Esther turned and darted to one side, missing the clutching grasp of Blair Stanley by a hair's breadth. The sudden revulsion from hope and happiness to fear and despair had driven Esther to a frenzy of sudden flight. As though upon the wings of fear, she fled. Hardly knowing what she did save that she escaped her enemies, Esther plunged over the sheer side of the yacht into the sea!

Down, down, down she sank in the cold, wan water. There was a ringing of death bells in her ears, a pressure upon her heart that seemed about to burst her asunder. The strangling sea water rasped her tender throat. She clutched at her neck instinctively. Her hands closed upon something hard and cold, colder than the cold depths in which she sank—it was the diamond from the sky!

DISTRESS IN THE STOMACH
There are many people who have a distress in the stomach after meals. It is due to indigestion and easily remedied by taking one of Chamberlain's Tablets after meals. Mrs. Henry Padghan, Victor, N. Y., writes: "For some time I was troubled with headache and distress in my stomach after eating, also with constipation. About six months ago I began taking Chamberlain's Tablets. They regulated the action of my bowels and the headache and other annoyances ceased in a short time. Obtainable everywhere. Adv."

Woman's Missionary Society
The Woman's Missionary Society of the Methodist church will meet tomorrow, Friday, afternoon at the Methodist church. All members are cordially invited to be present.

The first meeting of the culture department of the Woman's Club was held yesterday afternoon at the club house. Mrs. F. R. Bridges, who is to have charge of the six lessons on Sydney Lanier, was present and made final arrangements for her class which has an enrollment of almost twenty members. On account of not being able to get the text books earlier the first lesson will not be held until Wednesday, November 17th. The Shakspeare class, under the leadership of Mrs. E. T. Helvenst, was organized, it having an enrollment also of about twenty members. As a number of the class were not able to be present yesterday the first historical lesson on King Lear, the play to be studied first will be learned for the meeting next Wednesday.

HOW TO PREVENT CROUP

It may be a surprise to you to learn that in many cases croup can be prevented. Mrs. H. M. Johns, Elida, Ohio, relates her experience as follows: "My little boy is subject to croup. During the past winter I kept a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in the house, and when he began having that croupy cough I would give him one or two doses of it and it would break the attack. My life is better for children than any other cough medicine because children take it willingly, and it is safe and reliable." Obtainable everywhere. Adv.

You Need a Tonic

There are times in every woman's life when she needs a tonic to help her over the hard places. When that time comes to you, you know what tonic to take—Cardui, the woman's tonic. Cardui is composed of purely vegetable ingredients, which act gently, yet surely, on the weakened womanly organs, and helps build them back to strength and health. It has benefited thousands and thousands of weak, ailing women in its past half century of wonderful success, and it will do the same for you.

You can't make a mistake in taking

GARDUI

The Woman's Tonic

Miss Amelia Wilson, R. F. D. No. 4, Alma, Ark., says: "I think Cardui is the greatest medicine on earth, for women. Before I began to take Cardui, I was so weak and nervous, and had such awful dizzy spells and a poor appetite. Now I feel as well and as strong as I ever did, and can eat most anything." Begin taking Cardui today. Sold by all dealers.
