LIVELY

Winter For Bowlers.

Tournament Will Open Monday Evening.

North End Athletic Club Will Play Sunday.

Brewster's Team Will be Tendered a Banquet.

Simms' Partner Broke Kelly's Jaw at Crestline.

With the completion of several first-class bowling alleys in the city and the refitting of all the old ones, the coming season bids fair to be a "bummer" among lovers of the sport.

Monday evening will witness the opening of a bowling tournament upon the Howard st. alleys. Six teams will contest for the championship, and each team will play two games.

The schedule for next week is as follows: Monday night, Crowns vs. Peerless; Tuesday night, Summit vs. Buchtel College; Wednesday night, Cereals vs. Eureka; Thursday night, Peerless vs. Summit; Friday night, Eureka vs. Crowns.

Sunday Game.
The North End Athletic club will play the Bedford foot ball team at Summit Lake park Sunday afternoon. The visitors are a strong team and the N.E.A.C. will have a hard tussle. The team is in good shape and will play to win.

Brewster's Successor.
The University School foot ball team of Cleveland of which Alfred Brewster of this city has been captain, has closed a very successful season. A dispatch says: The University school eleven will be tendered a banquet this evening by Mr. Samuel Raymond, father of the manager of the University team, at 602 Prospect street. These banquets are customary affairs after the close of the season. A captain for next season will be elected. It is quite likely that Weber, who has been captaining the eleven since the injury to Brewster, may be selected for the position.

Jaw Broken.
Curly Supples, who is well known in Akron as the trainer of Art Simms, defeated Jack Kelly of Mansfield Thursday night at Crestline in a seven-round go. In the second round Supples landed left on Kelly's jaw, breaking it. Kelly fought a game fight considering his broken jaw.

Arranged at Last.
New York, Nov. 17.—A match between Jim Jeffries, the champion heavyweight pugilist, and Jim Corbett, ex-champion, was arranged today through Corbett personally and W. A. Brady for Jeffries. The articles will be signed next Tuesday. Jeffries will have the fixing of the date of the bout.

New Goods Coming Daily.
J. J. Brassemle's 5c and 10c store at 118 S. Howard st. is a busy place. Great quantities of new goods for every department is arriving daily. Everything imaginable in this line can be found here. It will pay you to trade at the "Big Store of Little Prices."

IMPRISONED.

Accused by His Wife of Assault and Battery.

Blake Harvey of South Akron, was placed in the City prison Saturday morning by Special Officer McAllister. Harvey's wife, Callie, filed an affidavit in the Mayor's court, accusing her husband of assault and battery. There was something extremely pathetic in the frail, little woman's story, which she told in a trembling voice and with tears in her eyes.

"This morning he struck me in the face with his fist," the woman said, "and kicked me, too, simply because I had given my mother a little bit of coal." The woman's face bore marks of violence. The case will likely be heard Monday.

Peter Bora and John Filka, Peo-locks, were discharged. They were accused of assault and battery upon the person of Albert Wesh.

A demurrer was sustained against the charge made that W. H. Bradford had secured goods from Henry H. Bracken and case against the defendant dismissed.

Case against Burton Dilworth, accused of perjury, was continued to next Tuesday.

Attention, Macabees!
The funeral of our late sister Mary Conrad will be held from the Universalist church Sunday at 2:30 p.m. Members of Busy Bee hive are requested to attend.

Pepper's Patent Heart Searcher.

I was Professor Pepper's only heir. Among his effects found in his laboratory after his untimely departure was the curious mechanism he called his "heart searcher." In appearance it resembled a Waterbury watch. Of its internal mechanism I know nothing.

Fortunately for me the professor's invention was accompanied by a card of "directions for use," so that I had no difficulty in testing its great value as an aid in the search for truth.

The instrument had a face like an ordinary watch, except that there was only one hand or pointer, and in place of the usual 12 figures there were the names of the moral and immoral sentiments. At the top of the dial was the word "truth," and the zero mark, and when not in use the pointer rested at the zero or neutral mark.

From the stem extended two insulating wires about a yard long, and at the end of these wires was a flat ivory disk that could be easily held in the hand.

My first experiment with the professor's heart searcher was calculated to inspire confidence in its invention. It told the truth with refreshing exactitude.

I had, at the time of the professor's death, been dwelling in a state of rather distressing uncertainty concerning the future of my dear cousin, Amy Glantz, toward myself. I wanted to tell her how much I loved her and had not dared, being uncertain of the result of any such declaration. The heart searcher? Fortunately I had it with me, and then I could cheerfully propose, knowing in advance that I would be accepted.

First it might be desirable to test the heart searcher upon some minor subject. I accordingly found me a pocket watch and secured it there with an imitation watch chain to give the impression that I had my watch with me. The wires I passed through the sleeve of my coat, leaving the ivory disk just hid in my cuff.

This armed, I set forth in the quest of the unknowable. I took the trolley car, intending to make calls. In the car I met my cousin, Amy, and I slipped the ivory disk into my hand, I cordially took her hand and pressed the disk against her active little pulse. Pretending to be searching in learning the time of day, I asked her sundry questions, and once saw pictured on the dial of the heart searcher every passing change in the dear child's transparent nature.

"I am not glad to see me, dear?" The pointer swung slowly around to "delight."

"What are your views, my child, upon the subject of caramels?" The dial promptly moved to "hope." This was significant. Clearly the heart searcher was a most important invention.

The dear child at once expressed herself as interested in caramels, concluding her remarks with the information that she knew of a place where they sold "two for five." Manifestly the instrument and my young relative's words did not agree. She was evidently in some conflicting emotions, for the pointer quivered slightly and moved to "disappointment." She did not wish to plainly ask for caramels, and yet in the deep recesses of her young heart she hoped I would give her some.

"I am very sorry, my child, but I have no caramels with me. If I had only known I should meet you, I would have brought some with me."

The pointer was greatly agitated and vibrated between "disappointment" and "doubt."

I at once offered the child a dime, and, at my request, the dial indicated "disappointment" only.

"Oh! I beg pardon! Let me see. Was that a quarter? Dear me! I'm sorry I made such a mistake. Here's a quarter."

At once the pointer swung swiftly to "delight."

The heart searcher was a triumphant success. I squeezed the dear child's hand and said: "I am glad to see you."

"Goodby, dear! I must get off here."

As I left the car I saw young Brown of our office walking quickly down the street as if in haste to catch a train. I grasped his hand fervently. "My dear boy, I'm so glad to meet you! How are your mother and your sister-in-law and your brother, Theodore Augustus? You have plenty of time," I remarked as I pretended to look at my watch.

He pulled his hand away and said in his usual breezy manner: "Delighted to meet you! Goodby—train—awful late. Bye!"

He was gone, and I gazed upon the white face of the heart searcher. Although disconnected, the pointer still lingered at "botheration." It was more than an hour before it finally settled back to zero. How had it evidently a very powerful emotional nature.

Am I at home when I called, and when I shook her hand warmly I glanced at the telltale dial, "expectation." This heart searcher, I would proceed to unfold my tale of love. I still held her hand with loving fervor and stammered forth my blushing confession.

At intervals I glanced at the white face of the heart searcher. Its sensitive pointer was greatly agitated and quivered from "surprise" to "anger" and from "anger" to "cold disdain." Finally it stopped at "doubt."

"But my dear!—I love you!" The fatal words were out.

"I don't believe one word you say. You are looking at your watch all the time just to see how soon you can go."

The heart searcher fell from my nerveless hand and was dashed to a hundred pieces.

No, I never repaired it. Amy has condescended that it is, in the words of the poet, "best not to know." The unknowable is the truly wise.

Any? Oh, pardon me! She married another man.—Home Magazine.

WHEN MEN MISS SUCCESS.
Idleness and Incompetency Keep the Business Novice Down.
Walter F. Phillips, the founder of the national newspaper corporation known as the United Press, and the inventor of Phillips' telegraphic code, a typical, energetic American, who has put many young men in the news gathering business, believes that the cause of failure everywhere among young business beginners lies in incompetency.

Nine-tenths of the young men who are struggling for a me and place in the world are untrained for the callings they have picked out for themselves. Besides an unlimited supply of energy and wholeheartedness in the work before him, the successful man of the future must know his business from A to Z.

The next great drawback to success is idleness. Nothing worth while is accomplished without work, and plenty of it. Things do not happen without a cause, and behind every great life there are years of concentrated energy and tireless industry. Idleness will make any man a failure; intelligent work will land any man among the successful. It is all so simple and so true that one hesitates to put the fact down in cold blood, and yet how few men recognize, or, recognizing, live up to the axiom that labor conquers all things.
