Carpet and Rug Sale
 In order to effect a reduction in our Carpet and Rug stock, we will make a special offering of 500 Rugs at Cut Prices
 All sizes, shades and qualities from the small door mat to room sizes. It will pay you to lay in a supply during this sale.
 We will make a great cut in the price of all short lengths of carpetings, so as to close out a lot of perhaps 150 or 200 pieces. They run in good lengths generally quite sufficient for ordinary sized rooms, and many of them for quite large rooms. We find it necessary to reduce our stock as much as possible and the present prices will certainly effect it in Carpet and Rugs.

NOMINATING SPEECH.
 only party which ever had within its own ranks sufficient constructive statesmanship to create a nation in which each citizen becomes a sovereign, have, true to the traditions you bear in your platform set out in simple language, with a decided American accent, a plan for the people's redemption from each sacrilege and seism taught by the Republican party. That plan contains nothing but the approved precepts of the elders and doctors of your faith. If, on such a platform, you place a candidate whose devoted and unblemished life shall stand as a pledge to the plain people that he, in good faith, will carry out the solemn covenants made therein, then the hour of our ultimate triumph is at hand.
 There is no greater honor reserved for a citizen of these United States than to become the standard bearer of the Democratic party. It at once enrolls his name on the scroll of the "Immortals who are not born to die," and encircles him with a halo of the glory of all the illustrious achievements which that unconquered and unconquerable organization has emblazoned on every page of our nation's history. It entrusts to his keeping the fame of that long line of statesmen and patriots who have knelt for a blessing at Democracy's shrine.
 "O, bright are the names of those heroes and sages,
 That shine like stars through the dimness of ages,
 Whose deeds are inscribed on the pages of story,
 Forever to live in the sunlight of glory."
 This high distinction must not be unworthily bestowed. It must follow as a reward for noble actions bravely done, for unrequited tireless toil, for sacrifices made and strength displayed, for trusts discharged and pledges kept. We must seek a leader whose public and private life most nearly exemplifies his party's highest ideals; who stands unqualifiedly pledged to every issue we declare who will carry the standard we place in his hands, even as the Black Douglas carried the sacred casket that inclosed the heart of Bruce.
 He must not declare for free trade with Porto Rico and then at the persuasive suggestion of the sugar and tobacco trusts sign a bill providing for a tariff on the products of that island.
 He must not denounce a policy as one of "criminal aggression," and then at the demand of a power behind the throne pursue the policy he has so denounced.
 He must not, while professing opposition to combines and conspiracies against trade, send his emissaries to the trust baron castles to beg, like Lazarus at Dives' gates, for subscriptions to his campaign.
 He must not lend the moral support of his administration to a monarchy in its efforts to destroy a republic. But he must ever sympathize with a people struggling for the right of self-government.
 Instead of the Republican policy of mono-metalism, he must offer the free and unlimited coinage of the money metals of the constitution, the gold that polished the winged scandals of Hermes, and silver that glitters in the bow of Diana.
 Instead of panic-breeding, credit currency, controlled by the bank trust, he must offer government paper controlled by the people.
 He must be able to distinguish between Democratic expansion and Republican imperialism. The first is a natural growth by the addition of contiguous American territory, into every foot of which is carried the constitution, the flag and the Decalogue, and over the shoulders of every inhabitant of the added territory is thrown a purple robe of sovereign citizenship. It is a growth that has added eighteen stars to the field of blue in the "banner of the free," to symbolize the States that have been carved from territory, annexed to the domain of this nation by the wisdom and statesmanship of the Democratic party; this is an expansion that is bounded on the west by the Monroe Doctrine; on the north by the constitution of the United States; on the south by the Declaration of Independence and on the west by the Ten Commandments.
 How different this from the bantled policy of Republican imperialism, with its standing army and bayonet rule of conquered provinces; its government of sullen subjects against their will, by force and fraud; its denial to them of the protection of either the constitution or the command which says: "Thou shalt not steal," a policy that would send our Uncle Sam off his American range with a cowboy hat, a rope and a branding iron, to rustle and brand-over all the loose islands of the orient, while hypocritically chanting the long-metre dogology.
 Democratic skies are tinged with a rosier hue today than when we met in convention four years ago. Then a financial cataclysm had spread over the country, and although its every lacerating cause was easily traced to the errors and follies of the Republican party, yet we were in power when it came and were wrongly held responsible for the wreck of shattered fortunes which followed in its wake. Torn asunder by dissensions within and disasters without, our party faced a gloomy and foreboding future which seemed to augur its dissolution. The problem then was to select a standard bearer bold enough to cover the rear of a retreat, and save the party from destruction, if not from defeat.
 While discord with her flanking torch confused the counsels there, from out the sunset realm a champion came and bade defiance to the oncoming hosts. With the strength of youth, and the wisdom of age, with knightly mien and matchless speech, he towered above his peers, and all who saw him then with one accord did hail him "chief," and gave our party's banner to his hand. Slowly despair gave way to hope; confidence took the place where timorous fear had been; the broken, shattered columns formed again, and behind him, singing, came six million five hundred thousand valiant men to that unequal fight.

 And the story of how well he fought, how fearlessly he fell, and how dearly the enemy's victory was bought; has all gone out into history now.
 Back from his "first battle" he came, a baffled but unconquered hero of the rights of man. Conscious of the rectitude of his purpose, and cheered by the belief "that no issue is ever settled until it is settled right," he cheerfully acquiesced in the result of that campaign and girded his loins for the next great contest between the dollar and the man.
 For four years he has waged an unceasing warfare against the people's enemies; for four years he has held up the party's standard and his voice has cheered the hosts of Democracy in every state and territory.
 When the trusts began to increase under the protection of a Republican Administration, he was the first to point out the danger and prescribe a remedy.
 When the alarms of war for humanity roused the heroic spirit of our land, he offered his sword to his country's cause on the day that war was declared.
 When later he saw the Administration departing from the ancient landmarks of our institutions, in its enchanted dream of empire and militarism, he was the first to raise a warning voice, and resigning his commission on the day the treaty of peace was signed, he threw himself into the contest for the rescue of the republic.
 Realizing that imperialism like the fabled Antaeus was born of earth and that, contending, with upon the selfish worldly plane of greed and gain and gold, it was of giant strength; and if thrown down would rise again refreshed from contact with his mother element. He, like the mighty Hercules, raised it high above the sordid sphere from which its strength was drawn and on a plane of lofty patriotism he strangled it.
 With the issues now clearly drawn, no doubt remains as to the name of our candidate. On that question we are a re-united democracy.
 Already worthy allies, differing from us rather in name than in faith, have shouted for our gallant leader again, and every state and territory has instructed its delegates to this convention to vote for him here. So it only remains for Nebraska to pronounce the name that has been thundered from the foot of Bunker Hill, and echoed back from Sierra's sunset slope, and that reverberates among the pine-clad, snow-capped hills of the north, and rises up from the slumbering flower-scented Savannah of the south, and that name is the name of William Jennings Bryan, her best loved son.

Convention: In behalf of the Democratic masses of the state of New York, for whom I assume to speak on this occasion, I second the nomination which has been made from the state of Nebraska. (Renewed applause and cheering.) William J. Bryan does not belong to Nebraska alone; he belongs to the north and the south, to the east and the west—he belongs to the whole country at large. (Renewed applause and cheering.)
 It is a nomination already made in the hearts and affections of the American people. (Continued cheering and applause.) From the closing of the polls four years ago until this very hour there never was a possibility of any other nomination being made. (Enthusiastic cheers and applause.) He is a gentleman that needs no introduction in this convention nor to the American people. (Renewed applause and cheering.) Nebraska is proud of him, but New York is proud of him also. (Renewed applause and cheering.) For four years he has upheld the banner of Democracy in almost every state in the union. His voice has been heard not only in behalf of our principles, but in behalf of the cause of the common people, in behalf of the workingman, in behalf of humanity. (Great applause and cheering.) He will not only have the support of his party—a united party—(Applause, cheers and waving of flags lasting for three minutes.) (The band joined in the demonstration by playing "America.") He is strong, strong with the masses, strong with the farmers, strong with the artisan, stronger even than his own cause. His integrity has never been questioned during all the time that he has been under the gaze of the American people. (Cheers.) His statesmanship has been exhibited in the halls of Congress. This convention meeting here today in this most beautiful city, surrounded by this hospitable community, was indeed the proper place to nominate this candidate. (Applause.) The cause he represents is peculiarly the cause of the people. His election will mean honesty and integrity in public office. (Loud applause.) It will mean the amelioration of the people; it will mean the destruction of criminal trusts and monopolies. (Applause.) It will mean economy and retrenchment in governmental affairs; it will mean the supremacy of the constitution everywhere throughout this land wherever the flag floats. (Applause.) It will mean a return to the advocacy of the principles of the Declaration of Independence. (Applause.) It will prove a blessing not only to those who vote for him, but to the few who may vote against him. (Loud applause.) I, as you well know, was one of those who in good faith doubted the wisdom of some of the portions of the platform; doubted the propriety of going into details on certain portions of our financial policy, but the wisdom of this convention has determined otherwise and I acquiesce cheerfully in the decision. (Loud applause and cries of "Hurrah for Hill" and "Bryan and Hill.")

 I am here to say further that the platform that has been read is worthy of the vote and approval of every man who claims to be a Democrat in this country. (Applause.) Those who do not admire some portions can speak for others. If not in favor of the issues which they do not desire to present as strongly as some others, they can at least talk about something in this platform that is worthy of their approval. At least in some portions of this country the paramount issue is going to carry and carry strongly. (Applause.) This is the time for unity. (Applause.) I and not for division. (Applause.) I plead tonight for party harmony and party success. I plead because of the dangers which confront us. As sure as election day comes, and if we should happen to be defeated, which I do not believe, what will follow? It means the restoration of a federal election law. It means a reduction of the apportionment of members of Congress throughout the Southern States of our Union. It means a consequent reduction in the electoral college from our Southern States and the plea of necessity will be made because it will be apparent by election day that some of the new born States of the West, which they had relied upon, had gone over to the Democratic party. (Applause.) So I am here to say that this is a most important election; important for our party; important for our country; important for the best interests of all our people. I have no time now to analyze this platform. We are speaking of men and not of measures now. This nomination will meet the approval, based upon this platform, of the people of the East. (Cheers.) What we need is an old-fashioned, rousing Democratic victory throughout this land. That will mean a restoration of the currency of our fathers. (Great applause.) That will mean home rule for States. That will mean the supremacy of equal laws throughout the country, and in this great result which we hope to accomplish I am here to say simply in conclusion that New York expects to join you with her thirty-six electoral votes." (Cheers.)
