SOLD BRUSHES

While His Company Lost the Prize.

Why D of Wooster Did Not Win at Columbus.

(Special Correspondence.)

Columbus, O., Sept. 6.—The absence of Second Lieutenant Unger of Company D, Eighth regiment, Wooster, made it impossible for that command to win first prize at the competitive drill contest at the State Exposition.

Each company was required to appear with three commissioned officers, four guides and at least 32 men in ranks. Company D brought 48 men, but eight of these were not used in the drill. The absence of the second lieutenant placed the company at a decided disadvantage. A private was asked concerning the absence of Lieutenant Unger, and he replied in a tone of disgust, "I guess he's away selling brushes. He promised to come." Company D has won three prizes this year.

A Communication.

Mr. Editor: Allow me to speak a few words in favor of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. I suffered for three years with the bronchitis and could not sleep at nights. I tried several doctors and various patent medicines, but could get nothing to give me any relief until my wife got a bottle of this valuable medicine, which has completely relieved me.—W. S. Brockman, Bagnell, Mo. This remedy is for sale by all druggists. E. Steubacher & Co., wholesale agents.

JOHNSON Made an Argument To the Board of Railroad Equalizers. The Republican Officials Were Indifferent. Some Cheap Sarcasm Drew the Mayor's Fire. Columbus, Sept. 5.—Tom L. Johnson appeared before the State Board of Railway Equalization yesterday to present the data collected for him by Prof. Edward Bemis, the expert, tending to show that the Ohio railroads are greatly undervalued, in fact are paying on millions less than a valuation proportionate to the farm lands and other real estate. The Board is composed exclusively of Republican State officials—Auditor of State Guilbert, Treasurer Cameron, Railroad Commissioner Morris, and Attorney General Sheets. The Ohio State Journal, the Republican organ here, yesterday printed what seemed to be an inspired article to the effect that Johnson would be listened to for appearances sake, but nothing that he might say could influence the Board to add anything to the valuation of railroad property. The matter came up today on a debate of the Ohio State League of Municipalities to be heard and Johnson appeared in his capacity as Mayor of Cleveland, by reason of which office he is interested in the burden of taxation being equally distributed. Instead of the real estate owners bearing practically all the burden and the rich corporations all but escaping taxation entirely. In the preliminaries of the meeting Mayor Johnson arose and said he had been selected by the Municipal League of Ohio as one of those to present the matter. As he was sitting down State Treasurer Cameron asked: "What might be the gentleman's name, please?" Johnson smiled, and replied, "I am Mr. Johnson of Cleveland. What might be your name please?" Mayor Sam Jones arrived at the meeting at 11 a. m. He seemed as much of a stranger in this assemblage of corporation people as Johnson. He was recognized only by Johnson. Colonel Kilbourne came in later. There was a big array of high feed railroad lawyers present. Professor Bemis consumed the entire morning session in a report of the investigation of the railroad tax question made at the request of Mayor Johnson. He showed that the railroads of Ohio are appraised only at 21 per cent. of their salable value, while real estate is appraised at 60 per cent. It would only be fair, therefore, to multiply the total railroad valuation of the state of $117,000,000, by three. It was shown that the rails alone are worth more than the entire tax appraisement of the roads, and the culpers on the freight cars cost more than the entire car is returned for. It was shown by comparison that Ohio roads are appraised per mile of main line only about one-third of what they are appraised for in both Indiana and Michigan, while in those states the roads have a much less proportion of sidings and terminals. A table presented by Mr. Bemis shows that the counties of the state are losing $4,062,255 annually that they should receive from the railroads. According to these figures Lucas county is losing in taxes each year $140,500 by reason of an undervaluation of the railroads. Among the spectators were Colonel James Kilbourne and State Chairman Daugherty. "Now suppose this Board," said Mayor Johnson, in the course of his address, "refuses to equalize these appraisements by assessing all the roads at 60 per cent of their true value in money, what remedy have the people? None. If you do not do your duty there is no higher body to which the people can appeal. But that is not true of the railroads. If you exceed your powers by the fraction of an inch the railroads will at once appeal to the courts and have it corrected. The Supreme court will undo any illegal act that you may do, but it will not do any legal act which you should have done. I do not know what you will do, but I do know that there will come a time when the people will find a way of making the great steam railroads and other corporations pay their just share of the burden of taxation. "The big corporations get all the benefits of the present methods of assessments. How? By influencing Legislators, by influencing courts and by influencing elections. Let us take off the mask and be frank with each other. I say that no Auditor or other official who has a railroad pass in his pocket or accepts other favors from these corporations is a fit man to say how much of the tax burden they shall pay. Some men may be above these influences, but I doubt it. Why, gentlemen, this business of extending favors to public officials has even gone so far as to extend to your august body. Two of you accepted an invitation of a certain railroad official to take a long trip in a private car to California. I hope it did not influence you."

The Mayor closed his speech with these words and took his seat. For a few moments there was an absolute quiet, every one present expecting that some one on the Board would challenge the Mayor for an explanation. After a reasonable wait Judge Collins of the B. & O. said he would like to prepare an answer to the "Material things presented by the gentleman on the other side." After a little discussion the Board fixed the time as Sept. 14. Mayor Johnson said he would be on hand.

Judge Hunter said he would determine later and let the board know if the Hoeking Valley wished to make any reply. If so he would come in Sept. 14. "I won't answer Mayor Johnson's statement that every public body from the United States Senate down is corrupt," he said, "and therefore I will make no attempt to show that the members of this board are not corrupt. I do know that the Hoeking Valley did not corrupt the auditors who assessed its property, nor did it attempt to corrupt them. If Mr. Johnson is not satisfied with the present law of assessing railroad property, let him go before the next legislature and have it changed."

"It is not with the law, but with the execution of it that I find fault," retorted the Mayor. "Then get a policeman to make the board execute it right."

"I know a better way of doing it than with a policeman," was the reply. "I know what you mean," laughed Judge Hunter.

Ramsey of the Wabash walked up to the mayor, and, shaking his pencil at him, began to propound questions as to why railroad property was assessed higher in Indiana than in Ohio. "I don't know," answered the mayor. "Prof. Bemis knows, though."

"Then I call on Prof. Bemis to explain."

Prof. Bemis looked at Ramsey contemptuously for a moment and then turned his back.

Ramsey became a bit abusive and the Mayor sought to cut him short and asked him to explain why his road was assessed for $18,000 per mile less in Ohio than in Indiana.

"You may do your talking outside gentlemen," cried Attorney General Sheets.

"I beg your pardon. I will," said the Mayor, "but I'll come back Sept. 14."
