FIVE MEN

Will Give Time and Work To Ohio Democratic Interests.

Paid Secretary Will be at Once Employed.

Columbus, O., Jan. 17.—The Democratic State Central committee met here Thursday afternoon and took the preliminary steps toward perfecting a permanent State organization. A committee to open headquarters and elect a secretary was appointed and over $2,500 was subscribed by the Democrats who met with the committee preliminary to its executive session.

The net results of the work are highly satisfactory to Mayor Johnson, of Cleveland. It is a simple fact that Mayor Johnson's friends constitute a majority of the five men selected to finish up the work which has been started. This committee consists of Harvey Garber, of Darke county; Charles P. Saleh, of Cleveland; Chas. W. Baker, of Cincinnati, who was the Democratic choice for United States Senator; W. B. Burnett, of Springfield; and W. J. Frye, of Findlay. While there is no reason for believing that any of those named will attempt to throw the machine projected into the hands of any Southern Ohio Democrat, such a contingency is made impossible by the full understanding which exists between Mayor Tom Johnson and three of the five.

The plans of those who called the meeting were carried out just as outlined yesterday. Nineteen of the 21 members of the State committee were present. The talk that it was a "grafting scheme," inspired by politicians, was not heard at the meeting and a perfect harmony prevailed throughout.

About forty Democrats met with the committee at the Neil house at 1:30 o'clock and the session lasted until 5 o'clock. Chairman Frye, of the Central committee, made a plain statement of the proposition, explaining that the only purpose was to build up a Democratic organization that would be in touch all the year round with the Democrats in the most remote sections of the State. The Republicans, he explained, had their organization in Ohio so well perfected that within a few days they could open communication with 50,000 of their workers. The Democrats had invariably gone into State campaigns unprepared and disorganized and by the time they got down to really effective work the fight was nearly over. He thought it was time a change was brought about and an organization builded that would not be controlled by any one man or set of men. Several others spoke also.

Mayor Johnson was called on. The Democratic party, he said, was getting back to where it started. Formerly it was the party of the people and for the people, but long continued successes had made it corrupt and from its abuse of the power given it arose a condition that made possible the birth of the Republican party. The latter now occupied the place, the party for the privileged classes against the masses, which had caused the fall of the Democratic party, while the latter had again risen to the high plane that commanded the respect and confidence of the people.

On motion of Mr. Baker it was declared to be the sense of the meeting that the Central committee select a committee of five, which should have complete charge of the State organization until the next State convention, at which the plan would be continued or some other adopted to take its place.

This done, "the men of means" present walked forward to write their names on the list of those guaranteeing to meet the expenses of opening and maintaining a State headquarters for the first year. Mayor Johnson was the first to put down his name. No amount was set opposite the name of any of those written, it being understood that they would make good the money needed. About twenty names were placed on the list. The expenses for a year will probably amount to $5,000, including the salary of the secretary. Col. James Kilbourne, who is in Hot Springs with his son, telegraphed that his name should be put down.

The State Central committee then went into executive session and selected the five to take charge of the organization of the State. Harvey Garber was selected chairman. He is in the telephone business and has an office here. He will open it as the temporary headquarters today.

Next Wednesday the committee of five will meet in Columbus and elect a secretary. His salary will be fixed at that time. Judge Ditty and Col. Wm. Taylor, of Columbus, are candidates for the office. They are not satisfactory to Northern Ohio Democrats, who are determined that a young and active man shall be placed in that position. It is a safe prediction that neither Ditty or Taylor have any chance to land the plum. The influence of this committee in the selection of delegates to the next State convention will be tremendous and it may be imagined what it means to a particular individual to have his friends in control of it.

In size and tone this gathering of Democrats was remarkable. The success attending the call for it was a surprise to its promoters.

SMALL POX

Is Less Fatal Than Measles, Says Dr. Probst.

Columbus, O., Jan. 17.—Dr. C. O. Probst, Secretary of the State Board of Health, reports that there were 4,033 cases of small-pox in the State in 1901, with only 40 deaths. While the disease spreads very rapidly, being very contagious, it is less fatal than measles, he declares. The efficacious methods used nowadays in handling the malady have lessened its danger.

Nash Warmly, but In Vain.

"Roosevelt and Foraker" Picture Painted

By the Senior Senator, but It Did No Good.

Columbus, O., Jan. 17.—The assertion is made here that when Senator Foraker left for Washington last night he was blue and discouraged over the failure of a cherished plan. The cause of it all is that Foraker has been trying to establish an alliance with Governor Nash. He wanted him to sit down with him to a game of "freeze out" in which one Mark Hanna was to be the victim. Foraker began to woo Nash while sitting with the Governor in the latter's office waiting for the arrival of the joint committee of the Assembly to tell him that he had been re-elected. He used his most caressing tone and called into play all the diplomatic language at his command. Nash was asked to throw Hanna into the air and consult with Foraker exclusively before making his appointments. That was the first step. With a sangfroid that quite took Foraker's breath away, Nash said no.

In the afternoon Foraker called again at the Governor's office and picked up the thread where it had been dropped. He took Nash up on the mountain top and showed him the promised land, and Nash looked and said he did not covet.

Perplexed, Foraker framed up the informal reception which he gave to anybody and everybody in the Dewey suite at the Chittenden Wednesday night. It was to cover another move in the game—a conference with Harry Daugherty, Howard Manning and "Cy" Huling. He opened his box of promises and exhibited to them a glittering array. They could pick out anything that suited their fancy if they would pull some of the wires that he knew ran from many points into Daugherty's office and persuade Nash to consent to his propositions. Just what they said in answer is not known, but it is intimated that they left a distinct impression on Foraker's mind that so far as they were concerned, Nash was playing a lone hand and could not be cajoled into taking his eyes off the cards.

Foraker postponed his departure to have one last try with the Governor. They lunched together at the Columbus club. Foraker recited Ohio's past history since the election of the first Governor and painted a glowing word picture of the future in which appeared only the faces of Roosevelt and Foraker. Nash was asked to look up on it long and carefully and decide whether he would remain tied to a "dead one" or join the procession of the "future greats."

Nash turned his eyes upon the beautiful picture and then he sighed and pulled from his pocket a copy of the inaugural address which he delivered in the rotunda of the state house last Monday morning. He read that pathetic message which told that the new Governor was getting well along in years and was on his last turn of the political circle and his only ambition was to have it said of him when he completed the course, "well done, good and faithful servant." Foraker said no more.
