

Salt Rheum
You may call it eczema, tetter or milk crust.
But no matter what you call it, this skin disease which comes in patches that burn, itch, discharge a watery matter, dry and scale, owes its existence to the presence of humors in the system.
It will continue to exist, annoy, and perhaps agonize, as long as these humors remain.
It is always radically and permanently cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla
which expels all humors, and is positively unequalled for all cutaneous eruptions.

CRITICAL

situation In Race War In Illinois.
Eldorado, Ill., Sept. 24.—The situation in the race war here is so critical that a request has been made by the commander of the troops that all citizens remain in their homes after dark until the acute stage of the trouble is past. The order to the troops to shoot to kill is still in force. The militia since the two attacks on the Bean Home have become more vigilant. Rumors are current that another attack is planned and that a desperate attempt will be made by the lawless element to drive the Bean family out of town. It has been openly stated that the presence of the colored race in Eldorado must cease with the departure of Bean and his family.

More Announcements Relating to Opening Day Arrangements.
Four thousand small flags and 1,500 light hats have been ordered by the Summit County Republican Executive committee for marchers in the opening day parade.
At a meeting held Tuesday night it was also decided to offer a large silk flag for the best appearing ward delegation in the parade. This is the second prize offered to arouse enthusiasm, as the same offer has been made to township delegations. Committees have been appointed in each ward to organize delegations.
It has also been decided to send personal letters to all the property owners along the line of march, requesting them to decorate their residences and places of business in honor of the opening.
Secretary of War Root, who is to be the principal speaker, is scheduled to deliver an address at Peoria, Ill., this evening. On Thursday he will inspect the government arsenal at Rock Island, and from there will come to Canton to visit Mrs. McKinley. From Canton he will go to Cleveland to visit Senator Hanna, and accompany him to Akron Saturday morning.

THE PRESIDENT
IN NO DANGER

carriage, which had stopped, he assisted him to alight and walked with Senator Fairbanks and Gov. Durbin, over the steps of the hospital. The officials of the third carriage quickly followed and at the same time Capt. Callon had stationed his men about the entrance, and a squad of police, which had been sent to the hospital before the President left the club, appeared and formed a cordon about the building. Everything was done with dispatch, and the gathering crowds were kept at a distance. No man was allowed to enter the hospital, except those belonging to the President's party, or those who had special business there. From the time the President left the Columbia club until he found himself in a hospital surrounded by a cordon of police and soldiers not more than ten minutes had elapsed.
After the President entered the operating room he sat down and waited for instructions from the physicians and surgeons, watching their preparations with keen interest.
"I am sorry I cannot continue my Western trip," said he. "Can't you let me go ahead with it after this thing is over?"
Several of the surgeons turned to him, and one said: "It is my opinion that you would be very indiscreet to continue on your feet, as would be necessary in your speechmaking trip, after the operation. This is by no means a serious thing and there is absolutely no danger of serious consequences from it, if you are careful and stay off your feet until the trouble is over. You should, by all means, Mr. President, discontinue your trip."
"Very well, then, it will have to be that way," said the President resignedly. "I will do as you gentlemen say."

The President was told to remove his shoes and stockings and nether garments. He also removed his coat and vest. A moment later however, he was told simply to remove his shoe and the physicians would be required to bare the leg only. This was done. The President walked to the operating table alone, and as he lay down he remarked with a smile:
"Gentlemen, you are formal. I see you have your gloves on." This was a reference to the antiseptic gloves of the surgeons.
"Mr. President," said a surgeon with a smile: "It is always in order to wear gloves at a President's reception."
The operation was begun without delay. The pain caused the President to mutter several times in a low voice, but he said nothing that was distinct, except to ask for a glass of water before the needle had been removed.
After the operation was over he made remarks concerning trivial matters and asked if he would be allowed to use his leg long enough to walk upstairs himself.
"You will be hauled upstairs in a wheeled ambulance," said the surgeon. After being taken to an upper room from the operating room, the President was served with a light luncheon and chatted to those in the room. He made several kind remarks to the nurses attending about the trouble he was causing and shifted his position several times nervously.
At 7:40 p.m. a white blanket was thrown around him and he was placed on the hospital stretcher and escorted by a company of infantry, was carried to the car a block away by four negro porters from the train. He bade goodby to the nurses as he was being carried out and thanked them for their kindness. He did not talk during his trip to the car. Senator Fairbanks, Governor Durbin and other prominent citizens were at the train to bid him goodby.

The swelling of the President's leg, which made an operation necessary, was occasioned by a bruise he received at the time of the trolley car accident at Pittsfield, Mass. Besides being injured on the face and across the eye, the President at that time received a blow upon the inner part of the left leg, between the ankle and the knee, but characteristically he paid no attention to it, ignoring it as being a slight bruise, not worth talking about. For several weeks he took no heed of it, but finally it began to pain him so as to enforce his attention.
After starting on his Western trip he determined that perhaps Dr. Lung, who was aboard the train, should examine it. The doctor did so and pronounced it to be a serious matter. When in Detroit the doctor finally declared that something should be done. After consulting with Dr. Richardson, another member of the party, it was decided that, in order to avoid the possibility of blood poisoning, it probably would be wise to have an operation performed.
The President was very much averse to anything of the kind, but nevertheless when Logansport, Ind., had been reached he had been prevailed on to deliver the tariff speech, which had been prepared for delivery at Milwaukee, and which was regarded as one of the most important of his proposed speeches for the West. At Logansport, Senator Beveridge boarded the train, and after a consultation with him it was decided that he should summon several of the best physicians of Indianapolis to meet the President, and with this end in view the Senator telegraphed to Dr. George H. Oliver, Dr. George J. Cook and Dr. Henry Jameson to be at the Massachusetts avenue station. When the train pulled into the station the doctors were there and they were taken by the senator immediately into the president's car.
The physicians accompanied the party to Tomlinson hall, and it was thought by those who noticed them that they were present as members of the reception committee. When the president arose to acknowledge the reception given him at the hall, and also when he arose to make his address, it was noticed by those near him in the front of the hall that he stood with all his weight on his right leg, and the posture seemed so awkward and so much like a pose that it caused more than one comment. Little did anyone think that he stood in the way he did because of the pain in the left leg.
During the delivery of his speech, when he had become aroused, he stood on both legs, and at one point in the speech he seemed to forget about his injury so completely that he took several steps and in so doing hit his leg against a gun that was stacked with others on the stage. An expression of pain passed quickly over his face, which was remarked upon by many listening to him, who could not understand why he should make such peculiar facial expressions.

INSIST
That He Was Murdered.

Friends of Janos Roman Aroused.
Had Nearly $100 When He Left Akron—Penniless When Found.
Circumstances now point to the fact that the death of Janos Roman, the Hungarian, who was killed Monday night, south of Akron, presumably by an Erie freight train, may not have been accidental. The friends and relatives of the dead man insist that it must have been murder, pure and simple. They say that Roman, who formerly worked in Akron for the B. & O., as a section hand, left here about a month ago and went to Midvale, where he secured work with the Royal Pottery Co. His brother went with him, and Saturday Roman left Midvale to come to Akron, and draw his pay and that of his brother. He had $8 when he left Midvale, according to the story. They claim further that he drew his money, from the B. & O. Monday, amounting to $73.00, and that he and his former boss on the section were in Doll's saloon, at Halo, at 5 o'clock Monday afternoon. Roman then left, the story runs, saying that he was going back to Midvale. Nothing more was then heard from him until the telephone message came to Undertaker Parks and the C. A. & C. officials in South Akron, who then sent a switch engine to South Akron to pick him up. When found there was no money in his pockets with the exception of ten cents.
At the railways no one seems to know just what train it was that struck him, and no one can say for certain that he was not already lying on the track, when the train came upon him. When being taken to the hospital in Parks' ambulance, Roman seemed to partly recover consciousness and seemed to try hard to tell something, but his words were not understood, and he died before anyone could be found to understand him.
Coroner E. O. Leberman stated Wednesday afternoon that he had had all his information in the case second handed, but he also stated that the matter would now be given a full investigation. Roman's relatives took charge of the remains and the funeral took place from Parks' morgue Wednesday afternoon.

MORE CASH
For the National Banks Under This Plan.
Washington, Sept. 24.—Secretary Shaw will return to Washington with the President. It is understood that tomorrow he will increase the deposits of the government's money in National banks to the market value of bonds deposited, instead of to their par value. Government bonds are now selling at an average of 15 to 18 per cent above face value. The result of this action will therefore be to increase the amount of government money on deposit with banks by 15 or 18 million dollars. The reason for this intended action is the news from Wall Street of a tightness of the money market.

WHY

Bryan Says the Speaker Saw Defeat Ahead.
Lincoln, Neb., Sept. 24.—Wm. J. Bryan takes the view that Speaker Henderson's withdrawal was prompted by fear of defeat. He has given out a statement, in which he says in part: "He finds many Republicans in his district in favor of putting trust-made articles on the free list as a remedy for private monopolies, and as he is opposed to that remedy he declares that he preferred to retire to private life rather than strike such a blow at the system of protection. It is only fair to assume that the Republican defeat in his district is so serious as to make him believe his election impossible, for on no other theory would he be justified, even according to his own logic, in refusing to make the fight."

The line enters Summit county at the northern boundary, at Richfield, and passes through Bath, Copley, Portage, Coventry, Franklin and Green.
By the terms under which the grant was made the Gas company must pay $1,000, to be applied to the County General fund.
