[Copyrighted, 1914, by Thomas J. Sullivan.] If you want to succeed in the world you must make your own opportunities as you go on.

The man who waits for the seventh wave to toss him on dry land will find that the seventh wave is a long time in coming. You can commit no greater folly than to sit by the roadside until some one comes along and invites you to ride with him to wealth or influence.

Business men, local and otherwise, in the entire country, are desirous of increasing and extending their business, and if they did not care to do this they would not be in business.

Can Successfully Cope. It is doubtful if there be a local retailer in the country who could not successfully cope with the mail order and catalogue retailer would be but try. This the local merchant may not know, but nevertheless it is an absolute fact.

There is a retail firm in a town in Wisconsin which conspicuously displays upon its counters one of the catalogues of the largest Chicago mail order houses, upon the cover of which is pasted a notice that it will furnish any article advertised in the catalogue as cheaply as the buyer can secure the articles from Chicago, and it lives up to the advertisement attached to the very letter.

Mail Order House Seconds. The substantial local merchant knows well that the cheap stoves sold by the catalogue mail order houses are lightweight stoves; that the iron beds shown in the advertisement matter as massive frames with strong corner posts and heavy crossbars are light, frail castings, commonly known to the trade as "seconds," which no honest or reliable furniture dealer would keep in his stock because he could not sell them to people who were given an opportunity to inspect the goods before purchasing.

It is only on very rare occasions that patrons of a mail order house ever get the worth of their money when they buy from the pictures in the catalogue, while, on the other hand, the local retailer, if he understands his business, buys his stock direct from the manufacturers and jobbers who have a reputation at stake and who supply goods of quality to their direct representatives, the retail merchants, throughout the country.

Prize Their Reputations. The responsible high grade manufacturer and wholesaler will not under any condition or circumstance sell their goods to the catalogue retailer at any price. Many instances are known where catalogue houses secured by trickery a quantity of staple goods of standard make and advertised them as "specials" at ridiculously low prices. The manufacturers, in order to protect their reputations and interests, necessarily had orders sent in for the entire stock or quantity of the articles through persons in their employ. They did not propose to have their articles, which were standard, advertised by the side of inferior articles of light weight and of decidedly cheap construction.

A Vast Difference. There are numberless articles which the catalogue house advertises as the best on the market, among which are paints, and it often agrees to furnish an impossible guarantee with this class of goods. However, it is very noticeable that it never attempts to ship its paints into states that require a printed copy of the analysis of the contents of the package.

The answer to this, of course, is that the goods are not as represented in the catalogue. The up to date local merchant, of course, is conversant with these facts and can explain them to his customers if given an opportunity, and he can also, if he understands his business thoroughly, explain the vast difference between the goods sold by the catalogue house and those sold by him.

Articles Challenge Explanations. The cheap, flashy, flimsy article can never stand alongside of the honest, reliable article without challenging an explanation. The business man who cannot meet this demand upon him, is not up to date, and his education regarding the line of goods he carries should be touched up.

If the home town consumers are alive and awake to their own interest they can begin to educate the local merchants by demanding from them the information concerning the difference in the quality of their goods and the goods of the catalogue retailer. If they are unable to explain they will also be unable to render efficient service to their customers.

It is time merchants of this kind wake up to the situation.

TALKS ON THRIFT

(American Bankers Association)

"I believe that there have been few periods when the general practice of thrift by the American people would result in so much benefit to the country as at the present time. The conditions brought about by the war in Europe ought to awaken the public to the importance of thrift and the cost of extravagance."—Governor Strong, of Alaska.

The steps taken by the warring nations of Europe to preserve the food supply for their people is a big object lesson in the possibilities of more thrifty living in this respect, even in the lands that are at peace.

It is said that the Kaiser and Kaiserin in are cutting down the expenses of the imperial household and teaching the German people a lesson in frugality. The standard of meals at court appears to be no higher than that of many private families in Berlin. Both at the front and at the palace in Berlin the Kaiser lives with Spartan simplicity. A favorite dish is thick soup, containing chopped meat. The Kaiserin visits the kitchen every day, giving orders and superintending the cooking. "One cannot live sumptuously while our brave soldiers are making the greatest sacrifices," she is reported to have said.

While across the water many men, women and children are on the verge of starvation, and in our own country there are many needy ones, the statement is made that the average American family wastes enough food in one week to keep a Belgian or Pole alive and in good health for two weeks.

What will open the eyes of many of our housekeepers to their extravagance? Shall this lesson of the great war go unlearned? Do not these housekeepers know that waste is their badge of incompetency? The really scientific cook wastes nothing. Stale bread, cake, left-overs of meats, potatoes and other vegetables, cold cereals, macaroni, etc., can all be made to reappear in forms quite as appetizing as their original ones. So say successful housekeepers at any rate. Husbands have not been heard from on this point.

"In the interests of good taste household economy, scholarship and social relations," says the Spokane Spokesman Review, "Mothers will do well to push for a reform of the extravagance in school-girls' dresses." What became of that movement to help the South by wearing more cotton dresses?

Banks often take some of their own medicine and try to save money. A country bank about a year ago, installed a waste paper baling machine, having found that baled paper demanded a much better price than loose paper. Now over half the janitor's wages comes from this source.

The Scientific American says: "The fact that the loss from a leaking water faucet is small should not lead us to neglect small leaks, because by disregarding them we tend to become slovenly in all things. Furthermore, small leaks do not remain small. The constant leakage of small faucets wears small passages through the seats and makes tightness impossible. The next thing then is a new faucet with the accompanying plumbers' bill, which is notoriously small."

According to the United States Department of Agriculture the waste produced in the process of canning salmon is estimated to be from 25 to 50 per cent of the original weight of the fish and over $2,000,000 is the value of its waste annually on the Pacific coast. The department suggests that canneries might advantageously dispose of their waste by manufacturing it into fertilizer or fish meal for poultry or cattle feeding.

A report comes from Puget Sound that some of the big canneries are investigating the proposition, and one or two of them have already signified their intention of erecting plants to overcome this waste and to their profits.

The more of this kind of waste-elimination we practice in the United States from now on, the better it will be for all of us.

T. D. MCGREGOR.
