For several months the Sentinel has been publishing weekly a short article headed "Talks on Thrift," arguments why everyone should aim to put something away for the inevitable rainy day. These arguments are incontrovertible. The man who saves something every year is on the road to prosperity. It may not be possible to save much. If not, save little. Do not think that a dollar or a dime is too small a sum to lay by. Everybody knows how little expenditures get away with large sums. But few seem to know that the rule is one that works both ways. If a dime spent here and a dollar spent there soon makes a large hole in a man's income, so do dimes and dollars laid away soon become a visible and a respectable accumulation. In this country any man can make himself independent or keep himself under the harrow for life, according as he saves or spends his small change.

It is currently reported in Columbus that the dries in Ohio will attempt to get control of both the Republican and Democratic state central committees, force the nomination of dry candidates for governor in both the big political parties next year and have a state-wide prohibition plank inserted in both the Democratic and Republican state platforms. This tremendous ambition is said to be a result of this year's success in cutting last year's wet majority.

For the sake of "party solidarity" Gov. Willis has "sacrificed" his ambitions for the presidency by withdrawing from the race for the Republican nomination in favor of Senator Burton. Of course the sacrifice is a tremendous one since the presidency was the governor's for the mere asking. It is rarely indeed that the high office is thrust upon one and rejected as in the case of Gov. Willis. Surely, a second Caesar.

Senator Pomerene declares that the election of last week has proved a hard blow to Frank B. Willis and says that "the Republicans are welcome to all the satisfaction they can get out of the Ohio election so far as it relates to either state or national issues."

Talking is one of the strongest indications of life. Let our readers be governed accordingly and notice the firms who talk through our columns. They are alive and full of business and it will profit you to trade with them every time.

The one joke of the year is "General" Coxe's recent statement that he has left the Socialist party because it is "too visionary."

MANDAMUS WRIT GRANTED
The Appeal Court listened to motions last week Thursday in Cleveland asking for writs of mandamus against the Board of Education of Wadsworth township to reestablish the schools in Wadsworth township, which were suspended some time ago. The writ was asked separately by Jacob H. Leatherman, Henry Rock and Fred Lehman, through their attorneys, Hagelbarger & Doolittle of Akron. Friday, County Clerk Flickinger received notice that the mandamus writ had been granted and directing that the Wadsworth township Board of Education appear before the Appeal Court on Nov. 13 and show cause why it has not reestablished the schools.

WOOSTER MUST GET BUSY
Unless Wooster secures right of way in Wayne township and Wooster and does proportionately what the other towns and townships are doing, by Dec. 1, it is probable the proposed Cleveland & Ohio Central Electric line will not be built.

Other towns have raised large sums, Sharon Center, for one, giving $4,500 for the survey, and Wooster has paid in only $1100, with all of its progress and enterprise.

"If it hasn't the money to give, all right," says an official of the company, "but the expense of surveying and right of way will have to be provided for by Dec. 1, if the road is to be built. It will take the construction company four months, or until the frost is out in the spring, to assemble all of its equipment to start to work in three places."

STATE REPORT ON LODI FARM

ventilation arrangements. This condition would appear very easy to remedy. Some families are also very large and crowding exists. A large number of workmen also live on the premises at various points and are usually bunked by themselves. Their quarters are sufficient protection from the weather for the seasons in which they work, but are also very poorly lighted and ventilated, while crowding exists.

In matters of dress, the employees furnish their own clothes, usually overalls, jumpers and broad brimmed hats. The youths of both sexes go barefooted to a considerable extent. The girls all wear jumpers, or overalls, within which it is said they tuck their skirts. A number of them also wear short-sleeved dresses and protect the arms with old stockings. The girls are more apt to wear shoes than the boys.

As far as could be ascertained, the general attitude of the employers toward minors was good, as well as the interest in the welfare of employees. It was impossible, of course, by this form of investigation, to ascertain what relationships might exist between the individual overseers and the groups who worked under them. All workers were supposed to keep up to the groups with which they were working. It was said that young children were not sought, because they could not concentrate on the work, played too much and sometimes would not distinguish well between weeds and vegetables. While the employers compelled no children to work, they were not responsible for parental coercion and exactions. They offer employment, are in need of the services, and pay in proportion to what they consider the different workers' merit. There is no physical supervision, sickly or weakly children are just as liable to be employed as the healthy. One argument for this is, that instances are known where such children have improved in health.

As the groups are inspected, a total of 14 out of 110 employed appeared physically weak, or anemic, or stunted in growth. It cannot be said, however, that this is an undue proportion of such children in any group of this number selected in any vicinity. On the other hand, it cannot be said that these particular children were being benefited by the work. The day of inspection being a cool and invigorating one, there were no plain evidences of fatigue.

There is another feature which should be considered, that of the presence of the contagious eye disease, trachoma, or granulated eyelids. Among the last 58 children inspected, I found 6 afflicted with conjunctivitis, one or two of whom I felt convinced were suffering from trachoma. It is to be noted in this connection that one group of foreigners, consisting of about 15 to 20 boys, and a considerable number of men, in some instances, I believe, with their families have come from Youngstown, Ohio, where there has been great prevalence of this disease among this class of workers. It would require an eye specialist to identify the character of the eye inflammations which I observed. Some of them I have no doubt, were of temporary character, due to the getting of dirt and dust into the eye. The situation, however, shows the urgent need of medical supervision in the employing of minors, if for no other reason than to prevent the spread of communicable diseases.

BIG FAMILIES IN STYLE

Large families have not gone out of style in Ohio. Last year, of the 98,710 births in the state, one was the nineteenth child in a family; one the eighteenth; four the seventeenth; eight the sixteenth; thirty-one the fifteenth; sixty-six the fourteenth; 137 the thirteenth; 242 the tenth.

These figures are shown by the statistics compiled in the bureau of vital statistics. Figures also show Summit county for three years has held the lead for the high birth rate. Last year it shows 31.5 per cent.

The lowest birthrate from any county was from Lake, where last year the rate dropped to 11.7. Union, Holmes and Marion are contenders with Lake for the lowest birth rate.

In the past year there were 2,158 twins born in the state. Triplets were twice as numerous as the preceding year and forty-three of those born triplets survived. White births were 97,218. Negro births numbered 1,295.

The Cheerful Glow of a Fire-place —without the smoke and soot and dirt; the heating power of a furnace—without the high cost of installation and maintenance; the convenience of a gas heater—without the usual inefficiency; there in a nutshell you have a description of the

ORIGINAL
Estate Triple Effect

This remarkable heater combines the good features of all old heating methods, and settles forever the question of what fuel for your home.

Incandescent fuel in the fire-box throws a glow from the fire equal to that produced by any fire-place or hard coal base-burner; the radiating and reflecting surfaces are larger and more effective than you will find in any other gas heater; and the patented hot-air chamber and discharge flues produce a continuous circulation of hot air that heats all the rooms of a house—upstairs and downstairs—more effectively than a furnace, and at approximately one-half the fuel cost.

There are a whole flock of imitators—but remember: No Stove Can be a TRIPLE EFFECT Unless It's an ESTATE. The ORIGINAL and only genuine is on sale at this store.
