

SPENCER NEWS

The tragic death of little Harold Brown has shocked his many friends and the entire community of Spencer. But the most shocking thing about the accident is that his death was caused by a woman, a mother, and that she drove away without trying to find out how badly she had injured the little child. Heartless is hardly the word to express such action.

Harold was returning home from school on one of the school wagons, and as the wagon drew up at his home he climbed down and started across the road to his home. The school wagon had drawn off to the side of the road to allow an auto to pass. The machine struck the little lad, crushing his skull. He lived long enough to be taken to the Elyria hospital and placed upon the operating table, but when the doctors tried to operate he died, a victim to carelessness. When will we learn to be careful? Of course, it was an accident, but what we cannot understand is, why any one with any common sense at all, would not slow up when they were about to pass a school wagon which, they knew held a number of children. The accident happened outside of the corporation and as we have no speed laws, nothing can be done. The signs at the entrance to our little village say, "Drive Slow."

The parents of little Harold certainly have the heart felt sympathy of the entire country and we hope that his death may be a lesson to careless drivers of automobiles. Our little town is the home of many little children who are loved as was

Harold, and something should be done to stop speed crazy motorists from endangering life and limbs of pedestrians.

Frank's name was mentioned but they all agreed he had to be disinfected first, so the senate adjourned to meet tomorrow evening and try it again.
