FREE PUBLICITY—RECIPROCITY

One of the most perplexing problems of the country newspaper is free publicity, and the exact point where in the publisher can draw the line and make it paying advertising. So much has been written about "the freedom of the press" that many people seem to have taken it literally and lose no opportunity to test it out. Free publicity is, as every editor knows, nothing more or less than the donation of space, often on the front page, by request, in which some praiseworthy undertaking is extolled—pure advertising in story form.

Newspaper editors are glad to write up stories and give publicity to any worthy endeavor without compensation, and without expectation of thanks. It is a very mean man, utterly devoid of community betterment spirit, who will not take an interest in the charitable and social organizations of his town and lend the aid of his newspaper to the furtherance of their endeavors. No editor will refuse to publish advance stories concerning a high school play or athletic event, religious benefits, lecture course numbers, club entertainments, ball games, etc. He does this freely and gladly, realizing the different organizations are for the betterment or interest of the community. By these advance stories, the newspaper is very frequently responsible for the financial success of the entire undertaking.

The editor expects neither thanks, nor recompense for such publicity, but he does expect reciprocity, and rightfully so. Most of the entertainments and so forth, which are freely advertised, have tickets or programs or bills to be printed, and he feels that in all fairness, he should be given the work. Sometimes, however, this printing goes to some job shop which has in no way done anything toward the success of the entertainment, or what not, having the printing done.

Just by way of illustration, permit us to bring to your attention one of the many occurrences of this kind coming to the editor's notice almost every day. A certain social organization put on an entertainment for the benefit of some cause or other, it makes no difference what, and the one in charge came around to the papers and said: "Give us a good write-up on this, it's for the benefit of so-and-so and we want a large crowd out. Write it out yourself, but make it a good one." The better part of half a day was spent writing the article, and it was given a half or maybe a full column on the front page, space that it would have been impossible to buy. The day after the story came out, the person who had requested the publicity came in and wanted to know what it would cost to have some tickets printed; was given a price and said he would be back later. He did return, but to inform us that he could get the tickets printed at a job shop for fifty cents less than our price. The whole job didn't amount to much over $3.00, but it is the principle of the thing that rankled. If the job had been done by another newspaper, it would have been different—we would not have had that hurt feeling which comes to one when he knows that he has not been fairly treated.

The above experience is not the only one that has come to our notice, nor are we the only newspaper to have such a thing happen—it is almost a daily occurrence in every newspaper plant in the country. If free publicity were filled with reciprocity, the harvest would probably be more valuable. Think it over, the shoe might be a perfect fit.

As you clean house please save your outgrown garments—clothing, stockings, cloth flour sacks, sugar and salt sacks, pick-up remnants and pieces of calico, tennis, woolen pieces, or unbleached muslin; cut out parts of worn out tennis or underwear to line quilts or make into smaller garments; save these, for little babies in Europe are being wrapped in newspaper and many children perish with the cold. Next winter will be as bad as this. Mrs. T. H. Case will have charge of the sewing and planning, and it is hoped the ladies' organizations already at work in town will co-operate with the Red Cross and in this way save calling many extra sewing meetings and donation of material or money to purchase such materials, tho we are asked to use material on hand as far as possible. Red Cross Chairman, Helen L. Smith.

THE MEDINA GRANITE & MARBLE CO. SOUTH COURT ST. MEDINA, OHIO

You catch the enthusiasm of Pine Tree users, as I have

I used to think I was enthusiastic over the Pine Tree. But when I got around among farmers who use them, my enthusiasm doubled.

I want to show you how all mechanical parts are machined out of solid brass—no die castings in the Pine Tree. I want you to compare the wonderfully simple positive action Pine Tree Pulser with the kind of pulsators you have seen on other milkers. Also the unbreakable Pine Tree test cup, so easy to clean and assemble—the automatic claw—the trap valve no water or dirt can penetrate.

I want the farmers of this county to know this wonderful machine as I know it—and as the men who use it, know it. I can't see you all personally. That is why I advertise.

I can't possibly tell the whole story here—so I say again—

Don't Buy Any Milker Till You See the Pine Tree

After I show you the machine I want you to talk to the farmers who use it—and hear about how the Pine Tree helped make the Wisconsin State Jr. 4-year-old Holstein Record. Mr. W. F. Bratz tells how he made 954 pounds butter milking Prospect Johanna Poch 4 times daily for 365 straight days without a single interruption or delay. Just phone me that you are interested. I want to show you these things personally.
