Poultry Club Organized.
A club of the above character was organized in the voting rooms at the town hall last Saturday afternoon, called the Wellington Poultry Club. Warren Gott was elected president, Clarence Warren, secretary; F. M. Perkins, treasurer.

The object of the club is to combine in advertising thoroughbred poultry, to increase the interest in fancy poultry, and to buy poultry supplies at wholesale. It is the intention of the club to hold a poultry show here next winter.

The next meeting will be May 26, at 2 p. m. at the voting room. All interested in poultry raising are invited to attend. About twenty were present at Saturday's meeting. Constitution and by-laws will be constructed at next meeting.

New Funeral Car.
Messrs. A. G. & G. L. Couch have received a new funeral car, fresh from the factory of the Riddle Coach and Hearse Co., Ravenna, O. It is complete in all its appointments, and a perfect beauty. We have no time to test its riding qualities, but we cheerfully recommend it to others.

A Landmark Gone.
The ancient elm which has stood for generations on Mr. F. B. Manley's lawn, a mile west of town, and whose towering form could be seen for miles, succumbed to the storm yesterday and was laid prostrate, without a limb broken. It was once one hundred feet in height, but of late years had lost some of its stateliness.

Barn Burned.
A barn belonging to H. W. Webster, situated two and one-half miles north of town, with its contents was totally destroyed by fire Sunday noon while the family were away from home. Four head of cattle, besides grain and hay were burned. There was $300 insurance on the barn, but nothing on the contents. Origin of fire unknown.

A NEW SCHOOL

is to be organized in this city, in which dress cutting is to be taught as a fine art. The attention of the representative ladies is called to this movement.

It is designed, with the co-operation of the representative people of the city to organize a school of this nature here.
The distinctive feature of this work is a system which provides for cutting all parts of the costumes, while methods of cutting are usually limited to cutting waist linings. This superior plan of work cuts all styles, including the trimmings and draperies and as the work is easily learned the pupils are enabled in a few weeks to draft exact accurate patterns for all styles of costumes from any magazine or fashion plate.
That the ladies need higher education in this useful work is shown in the fact that very few ladies can cut and make their own costumes. While we live in an advanced age in which the facilities for education abound to such an extent that the arts and accomplishments are enjoyed by the public, yet, in the face of all this enlightenment the masses of the people cannot make a fine costume. This state of affairs cannot exist. There are schools and conservatories in which all other branches of education are taught and now it is proposed that this, the most important feature of practical domestic education, shall keep pace with the other advancements of the times. The attention which fashionable people everywhere are giving to this work is encouraging. For years the masses of the people have been unable to cut and make their costumes and while the public are educating themselves in the arts and sciences, many are neglecting the most important and most useful feature of practical education. The hand and eye should be taught as well as the mind. Girls should be trained so as to be helpful and useful as well as accomplished and entertaining, and the general movement in all parts of the country to teach the girls house-keeping, cooking and costume making indicates that society is to be revolutionized for the better.
Yours respectfully,
DIAMOND GARMENT CUTTER COMPANY,
WELLINGTON, OHIO.
