PENFIELD.

Miss Alice West, from Iowa, has been visiting her cousin, Mrs. L. Foster, during the past week; also Mrs. Gibbons, with her son and daughter, from Pittsfield, have been enjoying the hospitality of the same family.

Mrs. Dayton, who has been visiting friends in Oberlin and Elyria for the past two weeks, is at home again.

Miss Frankie Foster has just returned from LaGrange, where she has been enjoying the hospitality of her grandparents.

Mrs. Frank Moore, nee Miss Ettie Hull, wife of Rev. F. Moore, is the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. Hull, of this place.

The dance at the Maccabee hall was largely attended by a nice well-behaved crowd. The evening was pleasant, and all seemed to enjoy themselves to the top of their bent.

Quite an exciting runaway occurred on the farm of A. Ferriman, a mile east of the center, in which the principal participant was Miss Iva McElroy, daughter of John McElroy. It seems that in exchanging work, Mr. McElroy was assisting Mr. Ferriman, and being in haste to get the hay under cover, Mr. McElroy permitted Iva to take charge of the horse-rake, as she had frequently done before. But it seems the horse was not in the most amiable frame of mind and after a time he grew weary of the steady pace maintained and getting a firm hold of the lines with his tail, he set off at a 2:40 pace, careless of the ditches, holes and hollows. The amazed spectators were horrified, fearing to see the little girl thrown from her perch and rolled to death by the sharp points of the rake tines, and both set out "hot foot" in pursuit of the fleeing animal. Once in his headlong career, he started full tilt for the mowing machine, doubtless wondering if sliced horseflesh would be a change in the program, but she managed to steer him off the outer-bar, and the headlong race proceeded. She clung bravely to the seat until a heavier jolt than usual caused one of the wheels to fly off, when the concussion of the falling side, threw her off her seat; but with courage undiminished she landed on the framework, and held on tenaciously, until in switching flies the horse managed to free the lines, whereupon our little heroine drew her fiery "Bucephalus" down to a walk, then to a standstill. It was a most miraculous escape from death, and there is no doubt but what she would have been killed or crippled had she been thrown in front of the rake. But by keeping her wits about she was enabled to take advantage of the first opportunity to regain control over the excited animal. We congratulate her most sincerely on her narrow escape, and the "nerve" that enabled her to do so.

Another runaway occurred on Monday last, the 17th inst. J. H. Damon's horses again got the better of their driver and overturned the grocery wagon, doing considerable damage. The driver was in no wise to blame as one of the horses is too restive for the work. The damage would have been proportionally greater, but for the fact that as they started the driver got hold of the line sufficiently to turn them from their course, else they had scattered the goods and wagon over a vast expanse of territory. It will probably cost Mr. Damon a tidy sum to fix the wagon again ready to resume business. The little daughter of M. E. Craddock was quite seriously bitten by a vicious dog on Sunday last. It happened at the home of J. C. Smith where the child's parents were visiting. And while the elder people were conversing, the little one slipped out on the porch and proceeded to interview the dog, who was a fierce, surly brute, hating children and allowing no familiarity from them. The little one must have made some friendly advances for some subtle instinct or premonition of danger must have come to the mother and hastening out, she found the child perfectly helpless, a prey to the vicious instincts of the cruel brute. He had thrown the child down and bitten her face severely and when found, he was holding her down with the mouth, his cruel fangs set in the tender palate, and seeming to try to do his utmost toward killing the child. We are informed that there is small doubt but he would have succeeded, had not help arrived so opportunely. The child was rescued from her perilous position and on the following morning he dog was shot, as a recurrence is impossible. We hope the little girl may

Diamond Garment Cutting School.

What the People Think of It Who are Using It.

They gladly recommend it for us. The work has been in progress four weeks and almost thirty scholars are now taking instruction. The rooms are open from 8:30 to 5:30 each day. Visitors are always welcome at the room to investigate our work. The pupils recommend our work as follows:

"Wellington, O., July 18, 1899.

The D. G. C. Co.:—There is no question about it. No question indeed. I was one of the first pupils in the Diamond Garment Cutting School. The course is very interesting, and I find the system and instruction just as represented.

Mrs. E. Coats."

"Wellington, O., July 17, 1899.

I was one of the first pupils in the Diamond Garment Cutting School. The course of study is very interesting. I think every pupil of the school will be greatly benefited by it.

Florence Long."

"Wellington, O., July 17, 1899.

I am a pupil in the Diamond Garment Cutting School and have almost finished instructions. I am now making a costume and am succeeding nicely. I am more than pleased with the progress I am making and am sure that any one can learn to do successful work after taking the course of instruction.

Lottie L. Cave."

"Wellington, O., July 17, 1899.

To whom it may concern: I was one of the first pupils in the Diamond Garment Cutting School since it started here. I find the system and instruction very easy and interesting. I am well pleased with it, and think it a great benefit to all who take it.

Mrs. Will Greetham."

"Wellington, O., July 18, 1899.

The D. G. C. Co.:—I have attended the Diamond Garment Cutting School for three weeks and have found it very beneficial to me.

If you wish to be competent in sewing, just come and learn this system.

Miss Hattie Knapp."

"Wellington, O., July 17, 1899.

I had learned one method of dress cutting previous to learning the Diamond garment cutter; it was a tailor system. Since learning the Diamond, I have discarded the other and will use nothing but the Diamond garment cutter hereafter in my dressmaking as it is the only system which gives perfect satisfaction on every form and I heartily recommend it to everyone who wishes to save time, trouble and cloth.

New Photographic Rooms.

C. S. Bateham, the well known photographer of Norwalk, has leased the rooms formerly occupied by Sawtelle, over Bowly & Hall's grocery, and will conduct a branch studio there. This will give the people of Wellington and vicinity an opportunity to secure first class photos once more, as Mr. Bateham's work is unexcelled in fine qualities. The fact that nine prizes have been awarded him at state and national photographers' associations during the past four years, is proof positive of the superiority of his work. He has had the rooms newly refitted and furnished and will keep them open every day for the present so that all may have an opportunity to call and see samples of the work and try for themselves what good portraits he can furnish.

Announcement.

To accommodate those who are partial to the use of atomizers in applying liquids into the nasal passages for catarrhal troubles, the proprietors prepare Cream Balm in liquid form, which will be known as Ely's Liquid Cream Balm. Price including the spraying tubes is 75 cts. Druggists or by mail. The liquid form embodies the medicinal properties of the solid preparation. Cream Balm is quickly absorbed by the membrane and does not dry up the secretions but changes them to a natural and healthful character. Ely Bros, 56 Warren St., N. Y.
