The Evil Eye in Nicaragua.

It is a prevailing belief among the inhabitants of most of the Central American republics, especially the Indians and "Low Spaniards" of Nicaragua, that after a person has been exposed to the sun or is from any cause agitated or fatigued a glance from the eye of such a person will cause sickness or death in the one upon whom it falls.

The notion seems to be that the poisonous animal heat escapes through the eyes, and that its effect is especially blighting to young infants and children who may be exposed to its baleful influence.

The Spaniards as well as the native Indians of the countries mentioned speak of the "evil eye" as "ojo caliente," or "heated eye," and they hold it in such dread that small children are always sent away and babies covered with a cloth when any one approaches who is known to be extremely tired or overheated.

Besides the above, they also believe that intoxicated persons have the power of the "evil eye" abnormally developed. They are taught from childhood that a person possessed with an "evil eye" or "ojo caliente," can "with a look or break bones with a wish."

Nearly all the children of those countries wear charms made of alligators' teeth and corals as a protection.—St. Louis Republic.

Mr. Abner Jennings was never known to say a harsh thing to or about any one. His form of speech was invariably mild, and exaggerated statements were viewed by him as almost as reprehensible as lies. Once, in the spring of the year, when the Binerville roads were in a fearful condition of mud and mire, the team of a "traveling merchant" was stalled a short distance from Mr. Jennings' house. The old man at once brought out his oxen and went to the peddler's assistance.

The team could not be instantly released even with the aid of the yokes of oxen, and the peddler, who was a man of high temper and little self control, proceeded to vent his rage in language which first amazed and then disgusted the amiable Mr. Jennings. He bore it as long as he thought was necessary and proper and then unloosed his oxen and went calmly home.

"I went to try to help him," he explained to his wife as he walked into the kitchen on his return, "but he talked so poorly that I came off and left him."

A Woman Without a Fad. 'I am a woman without a fad. I do not go in for any particular line of thought, philosophy, political economy or law. My strongest leaning is toward mathematics, but my reading is broad and covers subjects of general interest.'

Mrs. Helmut is certainly an man's equal—a woman of high mental attainments, culture and refinement, and one who has a comprehensive and well balanced mind. She is an accomplished musician, a fine linguist, and the artistic temperament is highly developed in her.

She is a woman of strong purpose and determination, who has the courage of her convictions. Once assured of the proper course of action she will follow it at any cost. She is the actual woman, with an endless amount of energy. She is inclined to be stout, has silver gray hair and a face beaming with kindness.

Ready Responder. Professor Smilla, who for 24 years has had charge of the government department of photography, is blessed with one of those uncanny Scotch traits that would make a fortune in the comic journal line.

Speaking of the strange fondness of some men for hearing themselves out, Mr. Smilla says: "I once knew a man—a good man he was, too, only he would lecture. He'd give up anything to lecture. He'd forfeit a large salary for a year at any time for the sake of delivering half a dozen uncertain lectures."

Could Not Kill the Rope. Mr. W. H. Hudson, writing of animal life on the great South American pampas, where there are many kinds of snakes, both venomous and non-venomous, says that their enemies are legion. But perhaps the most notable of snake killers is the large lizard known as the iguana.

The tourist on his tour is among us, and included in the number are many ruined and cultivated Americans of the sort one is glad to have here as perpetual exhibitors of the civilization of the northern republic. But as on the "continent" there are tourists and tourists, so here one encounters some rare and entertaining "specimens."

In an interior city a week ago I met at a little hotel an American traveling for his health who spends his time endeavoring to economize his cash. He passed two hours one night devising how he might walk to the station at 4 a. m. and so save 10 cents car fare. He was a great big oaf and had digested "Poor Richard's Almanac." A penny saved was a penny earned. That his hotel did not furnish him with matches worried this poor Richard. Three cents out of a dollar that he had given a waiter to get him a box of matches completely infuriated him, and his nerves became entangled like telephone wires in the line gale.

Several of the South sea islands have a species of mulberry tree from which cloth is made. The bark is stripped off and macerated in water, the inner fibers are taken and manufactured into a very soft, pliable cloth; much resembling thick, coarse, oiled paper. It is used for clothing.

The Rothchild Indenture. The accession of Lord Rosebery to the premiership of the British empire increases the prestige of the famous banking house of Rothchild. Lord Rosebery has been identified with the latter ever since his marriage with Miss Hannah Rothchild. He bequeathed to him his vast fortune when she died, but it remains in the hands of the Rothchild firm. Not a dinner party child is present, and his political power and social prestige are increased a hundredfold by the knowledge that he has at his back the inexhaustible resources of the Rothchild family, who control the finances of nearly every continental country. At Paris they have one of their colleagues and adherents, M. Raynal, who is minister of the interior and possessed of the most extensive executive power in France. In Italy it is one of their own agents, Signor Sonnino, who is minister of the treasury. At Vienna and as Pesth their word is law at the ministry of finance. At Brussels King Leopold does nothing without consulting M. Lambert, the son-in-law and representative of Baron Alphonse Rothchild, while in Portugal and Spain the treasury is bankrupt, and there is no Jew at the head of affairs.—San Francisco Argonaut.

Their Asylum. At a council meeting in the town of Sunderland a well known alderman astonished the meeting by saying, "Gentlemen, we have been sending our lunatics to Sedgfield asylum for a long time now, and it has cost us a great sum of money, but I am glad to make the statement that we have now built an asylum for ourselves."—Durham (England) Chronicle.
