

THE STROUSS-HIRSHBERG CO.

Presents a List of Suggestions

Which if considered by you, will serve to make this the merriest Christmas of your life.

While the list of Gift Things we publish today is very extensive as well as comprehensive, it by no means includes all the beautiful things you will find here for Christmas giving.

The lines carried by this store are so varied and enormous that a complete list would probably require two or three full sheets of this paper.

You will find, if you carefully consider these mentioned lines, that this store can furnish you with most anything for most anybody.

And you have the assurance of perfect satisfaction when you buy your gift things here, for everyone knows and appreciates the excellence and value of articles that come from the great Strouss-Hirshberg store.

Plenty of experienced salespeople to wait upon you—the best store service in the city.

Bad Days for John Barleycorn. (Hazen's Weekly.) Poor old John Barleycorn! He has fallen on evil days. His friends are few and half-hearted, and some of those who have been his friends in the past, have turned their backs on him. The burden of his humanity is so enormous that humanity, for dear life's sake, rebels. Employers denounce him as a public nuisance; economists exorcise him; doctors damn him outright or with faint praise; experience fears him, science snubs him, and reform throws him at his very shadow. Poor old John! He is really a little over-crowded just now, and should have credit for some things that seal refuse to take notice of. Exasperated he will not be, and if he could be, the world would still fall far short of being paradise. He is not the only snake in the orchard; no, not by a very great deal. But he has outrageously overdone his job. His per- sult licensed him to cheer, and he has abused it beyond extenuation. Let him fight his own battle. —Make some friend happy a whole year by sending him or her this Dispatch for a Christmas present. The recipient would be reminded every week of your kindness and thoughtfulness. Stop taking instantly. Close this column. Don't forget. At any time store.
