FRIDAY, MAY 12, 1911

The legislature by joint resolution has decided to adjourn May 26.

That Cleveland bank clerk who got away with nearly $115,000 of the bank's money during the past eight years proved that he knew how to get the coin and long delay being found out. But the day of reckoning came and he will soon be on his way to the penitentiary to serve a long term.

A bill has been introduced in the legislature to make the pay of lawmakers $2,000 a year in the hope of getting men of higher character to serve. There is no getting away from the fact that in the past some members of the legislature have been paid much more than they were worth.

It is said that quite a number of persons are now to be found who are sufficiently skilled to write the Lord's prayer within a circle of one-half inch in diameter. It is in the minds of some that the number is greater than those who daily and reverently repeat the same and remember it in all their mental and moral endeavors.

Gov. Harmon is to be congratulated upon his appointment of Attorney E. H. Moore of this city as state superintendent of insurance. Mr. Moore succeeds Judge C. C. Lemert, who resigned to become the head of a Cincinnati insurance company. At present the office pays an annual salary of $4,000 but it is to be increased to $6,000. Mr. Moore will fill the unexpired term at the old salary and will then be reappointed for three years at increased pay.

Congressman J. J. Whitacre of this district has the courage of his convictions and talks back to his critics with a plainness and candor that is refreshing. It is his notion that the money expended by the government in the erection of costly federal buildings in cities could be spent for the benefit of all instead of the favored few by turning the funds over to counties for the purpose of building good roads. And outside the cities will be found many people who agree with the congressman.

Gladwin & Co., contractors, have brought a unique damage suit in common pleas court against the Eastern Ohio Gas Co., in which they claim damages in the sum of $2800 for the destruction of a road roller on the Youngstown and Petersburg road last summer. The plaintiffs were macadamizing this roadway in Springfield township and claim that the main pipe line of the Eastern Ohio company was but eight inches below the surface. They realized the danger, they claim, and worked as carefully as they could, though they tried to have the gas company lower its mains. On November 20 the road roller struck an exposed section of the pipe and broke it. The escaping gas caught fire from the road roller and because of the intense flame it was impossible to move the roller. The gas officials were notified, it is claimed, but did not shut off the gas as requested for an entire day. By that time the roller had been totally destroyed.

SOME FACTS ABOUT OREGON.

A Former Resident of Greenford Writes About Climate Conditions.

Woodburn, Ore., May 6, 1911. Editor Dispatch:—Most people probably know that Oregon is twice as large as Ohio, but probably few in the east know that the climate differs so much in any one state in the union as here; for instance there may be a blizzard raging in the eastern part of the state three or four feet of snow and mercury 29 to 30 below zero and the people in the western part of the state never would know anything of it if they did not read the newspapers.

The rainfall also differs about as much as the temperature. There are some places in southeastern Oregon where the rainfall is three to four inches per year and there is also a place on the coast where the rainfall is more than one hundred inches per year. Here in the Willamette valley, about forty miles south of Portland, we have about four feet of rainfall, or a little more than Ohio. We don't have much freezing weather here and very little snow.

Of course, as many people know, if they stop to think, this great variation of temperature and rainfall is caused by the mountain ranges that traverse the state from north to south, and also the Japanese current that flows near the coast.

A little later I will try and tell what the chances are out here for a poor man or man of moderate means; also give prices of land and what the chances are to make money.
