FRIDAY, OCTOBER 4, 1912
It would be an honest and peculiar election where men performed at the polls all they promised to do.

A promise to vote in a given way costs nothing, and it has no endorser. A promise to pay is not so easily ignored or forgotten.

One of the queer things of this day is that while one man can be found to work for $2 a day, four can be found to sit on the fence and watch him for nothing.

The initiative and referendum in Ohio became effective Tuesday. One of the first, if not the very first, petitions circulated will be for good roads throughout the state.

Gov. Woodrow Wilson, democratic candidate for president, will speak in Canton next week Friday and may be prevailed upon to speak in Youngstown before he leaves this quarter of the state.

It is said twenty thousand fourth class postmaster signed the petition asking to be placed in the classified service. And why not, when to be under civil service means a life job and certain pay.

Former Congressman James Kennedy of Youngstown is probably not lamenting that he is not a candidate for reelection in this year of grace in which standpatters are not feeling as politically fine as a fiddle.

Attorney General Hogan holds that the office of justice of the peace was not abolished by the vote Sept. 3 on the constitutional amendments. He rules that the favorable vote merely gives the legislature the power to abolish the office if it so desires, which is not likely.

Under a new law which became effective Tuesday newspapers are required to file with the postoffice department a statement showing the names of editors, managers and stockholders and to mark all paid reading matter with the word "Advertisement" so that the reading public may not be misled.

Gov. Wilson Has Made Good. Woodrow Wilson became president of Princeton university when that institution was slipping under the control of rich patrons and favored students.

He stopped this movement, restored the bracing democracy which is the better half of student life, and gave the university back to the people.

Woodrow Wilson was made governor of New Jersey when that state was a byword of reactionism and trust control.

In two years without rant or bluster he has secured more real progress for New Jersey than most states make in ten years.

Woodrow Wilson became candidate for president when the air was thick with denunciations and counter denunciations, when everything indicated that the nation was booked for a campaign of billingsgate and mud-slinging.

With one straightforward utterance he raised this campaign from the muck into which Roosevelt had plunged it, and put it on the highest plane of political discussion that the country has seen for years.

Woodrow Wilson has rendered signal service in every position he has been tried. He has been on the side of the people all the time.

YOUNGSTOWN

Already there is postoffice talk—postoffice change in the event of the election of Mr. Wilson, which at this writing seems one of the probabilities. M. in this city is a fat one it is not at all strange democratic gentlemen look longingly toward the southwest corner of Front and Market. And ex-postmaster Geo. B. There was some walling with gnashing of teeth here Monday when word came from Columbus that Secretary of State Graves had officially ruled that the names of candidates cannot go on more than one ticket, the ruling being against the contention of the Bull Moose men and upholding the position taken by democratic Chairman George B. Purple and Gold. Yellow of apple, purple of grape, Gold of the hills that cloud-shadows drape, Who said October at heart was sober? All of her shadows are sun-dappled crepe. Fire of the morning, blaze of the noon, Fading at sunset to mauve and maroon. Gray of the dusk, but kindled full soon, Out of day's ashes, gold of the moon, Splendor of gold and of purple unroll'd, Glory of color, dream'd and untold! Who said October at heart was sober? All of her purple is shot through with gold! —October Lippincott's.
