TREE-STRIPPED CHINA.

Bad Effect on the Climate and a Decrease in the Population Follow.

That the stripping of trees from a country has a bad effect on the climate is indicated by the following account by a traveler in the interior of China: "Kansu is the poorest of all the provinces of China and the most inaccessible by reason of its defective communications. Devastated by Mahometan insurrection in the years from 1861 to 1878, it has never recovered from the ravages to which it was then subjected. The ruins everywhere of what were once thriving towns and villages impress the traveler with a sense of the horrors of insurrection in China. Insurrection means extermination of the vanquished—no quarter to old or young, to man or woman. Loss of life during the great insurrection amounted to millions, and even in the short insurrection of 1896 the destruction of life was appalling.

"The province now needs re-peopleing, but in the absence of communications the work is difficult. It is a treeless province. There has been universal destruction of timber. Even the fine avenue of willows and poplars planted by Tao Tsung-t'ang between the two capitals is fast disappearing. Deforestation is profoundly affecting the climate.

"When rain falls it falls with such violence that it scars the face of the country, which is everywhere covered with soft loess (clay) of varying thickness, with no vegetation to bind the soil together."

Editor and Man Eater.

Carlson is a daring chasseur as was proven when he invited two such highly explosive substances as Babcock the editor and Green the lumberman, to ride in the back seat and light their cigars too if they so desired.

It was taking long chances sure enough, but Carlson turned on the power and as he swung out into the main road opened wide the throttle, tightened down the power clutch, and giving full speed to this marvelous machine, it snorted down the road like an angry dragon, its entrails full of exploding gasoline, its heart on fire and its lungs, hissing and smoking with the venom of a hundred serpents.

The automobile germ is big enough to fly along with a flock of geese, has a beak like a six-tined pitchfork—when it stings you never get over it.—Bronson (Minn.) Budget.

Beyond the Reach of Law.

Dr. Pigou, the dean of Bristol, has for long had the reputation of being one of the brightest humorists in the church.

One of his stories turns upon the deceased wife's sister. It appears that a vicar of Dr. Pigou's acquaintance, had, in ignorance, solemnized such a marriage, and he interviewed the old verger whose business it was to look after such things.

"Yes, yes," exclaimed the old man, "I knowed the parties. I knowed them."

"Then, why in the world didn't you tell me?" exclaimed the vicar.

"Well, vicar, it was this way, you see," replied the old fellow. "One of 'em parties was $2 and 'tother was $6. Says I to myself, 'I can't last long; 'bether the laws and let 'em two wed.'"

Why She Brought It Up.

"Do you remember," she asked, "that you said once that unless I promised to be yours the sun would cease to shine?"

"I don't remember it now, but I suppose I may have said something of the kind."

"And have you forgotten that you assured me that unless I permitted you to claim me as your own the moon would fall from her place in the heavens?"

"Oh, well, what if I did say so? Why do you want to bring that up now?"

"I merely wished to assure you that I'm sorry I didn't shut my eyes and let her fall."

Experience Proves

Whoever paints any other paint than Devco wastes money. He needn't wait to see how it wears, to find out. He buys more gallons—no matter what price—it takes more money; the painter takes more, too.

Fewer Gallons or No Pay

Paint half of your house with any other paint; paint half with Devco. The other-half will take the most gallons; if not, we will make no charge for Devco.

Wears Longer or No Pay

Here's another offer. Paint half of your house with lead-and-oid; the other half with Devco lead-and-zinc. In three years the lead-and-oid half will need repainting, while the Devco half will be about like new. If not, we will give you the paint for the whole house.

Hay Prices Are Down.

The Lisbon Patriot says: For the first time in many years there is a surplus of hay in the country around Lisbon, and according to reports the same conditions exist all over the country. On many farms are tons and tons of hay which was baled and stored away after harvest last year which is now seeking a market. The current price quoted is $12 a ton, but even at that there is no demand and it is claimed that many would be willing to sell below that figure in order to unload.

The fact that so many farmers have silos and feed ensilage is given as one reason why the hay is accumulating. Back of this, however, is the fact that the crop the country over last year was unusually good and the winter was so mild that stock ran out on pasture well on toward the holidays. The introduction of automobiles, auto trucks, electric cars, etc., together with the substitution of silage on the dairy farms, are the principal features responsible for the surplus. A year ago hay was selling for about $20 a ton and was scarce.

Grains of all kinds except wheat are lower, as are also feed prices. The wool market is a problem just now. Buyers are trying to secure this year's crop on the basis of free wool but the growers are not willing to sell. Factories are buying only for present needs.

A trip over some of the principal farming sections of this country shows that the farmers are plowing extensively and are planning heavy farming this summer.

Pensions for Dependent Mothers. The bill passed by the Ohio legislature providing for pensions for dependent widows and abandoned wives with young children needs only the governor's signature to include Ohio in the growing number of states which have adopted this enlightened form of home-saving legislation. Similar measures are now on the statute books of Illinois, Pennsylvania, Utah, Missouri and New Jersey, and a mother's pension bill under consideration at Albany. One of the merits of the Ohio law is its liberal terms, provision of $15 a month being made for a dependent mother with one child under 14. An Ohio mother with five young children may draw $48 monthly from the state, as against $30 in New Jersey.

The initiation of this admirable relief legislation is credited to Illinois. It should be adopted by all states as a collective method devised of preserving the families of the destitute from disintegration. It ought not to be necessary for mothers to have to render their children to the state to care for in institutions. After all, a mother is the best orphan asylum. And her home, however humble it may be, is the best refuge for juvenile dependents.—New York World.

Extension Schools Next Winter. Following the adjournment of the legislature a few days ago, comes the announcement that provision has been made for holding one week Agricultural Extension Schools throughout the state next winter. The number of these five day meetings is limited to one in each county. Members of the faculty of the Agricultural college at Columbus will be the speakers. The Extension Schools are not intended to take the place of farmers' institutes but rather to add to what is taught in the former. Learning from Monday till Friday they give opportunity for a more complete discussion of the underlying principles of better farming than can be had in a two day meeting. Last winter the college of agriculture held Extension Schools in nearly fifty counties of the state. These were well attended and proved very beneficial. A considerable number of applications for schools to be held next winter is already on file. To secure a
