PREYED ON THE DEAD

GREWSOME CALLING FOLLOWED BY "RESURRECTIONISTS"

In Great Britain Comparatively a Short Time Ago Surgeons Paid Well for Bodies Brought Them for Dissection.

In the days of the Resurrectionists in Great Britain various means were devised to prevent the nefarious practice of body-snatching.

In a few places mort safes or dead houses were constructed in which the dead bodies were allowed to remain several weeks or until such length of time as they were no longer serviceable for dissecting purposes.

The corpses were conveyed in dog-carts to the Granite City. With a view to escape detection the lifeless figures were clad once more in the garb of the living and placed on the conveyance in a sitting posture.

The story is told, says a writer in the Glasgow News, how on one occasion a party of Resurrectionists, stopped at a wayside inn for refreshments, when all partook of the same at the door of the inn.

Fireworks Wreck Deerfield Buildings

Wrecking practically everything within a radius of 300 yards and damaging every house within a radius of half a mile, a terrific explosion of fireworks in a store house at Deerfield, O., early Wednesday morning threw the sleeping townspeople from their beds and did damage estimated at $20,000.

Despite the tremendous concussion and the spectacular streaks of bursting bombs, high power rockets and the ignition of a huge quantity of red fire, only two persons were hurt and not a single fatality has been reported.

Fully thirty houses and stores and two churches, the Methodist Episcopal and the Disciples, were partially demolished.

The cause of the terrific blowup is not definitely known, although many incline to the theory that rats nibbling on the fuses may have set fire to the fireworks.

Margaret and Elizabeth Wilmot were sleeping in one bed at the rear of the Wilcox home near the scene of the explosion.

Joseph Evans, a storekeeper, was the only other person hurt. He was tossed from bed by the concussion and crawled in the darkness to the place where the stairs should have been.

At the fear of the storehouse two apple trees were torn up by the roots and carried fully fifty feet by the explosion.
