

HOME HAPPENINGS

Several new students entered the Normal college this week. E. E. Hull and force of men are building a silo for Frank Crockett.

The first touch of cold weather has made business brisk for coal dealers. On account of holiday Aaron Wiesner's clothing store will be closed next Thursday.

Leaves of forest trees are beginning to take on varied and beautiful tints, evidence that winter cometh on apace. There is a near milk famine in the village, many people being unable to secure the needed supply of lacteal fluid.

In remitting money by mail it is always safest to incur the small cost of buying a money order or registering the letter or package. The annual convention of Canfield Township Sunday Schools will be held in the Presbyterian church Sunday afternoon and evening, October 5.

Aaron Wiesner has installed new style cluster gas lights in his clothing store and he now boasts one of the best lighted stores in this section. Many silos in this locality are being filled this week. Recent frosts have made it necessary for farmers to rush this work and cut their corn.

Under the will of the late P. W. Callahan his entire estate is left to his wife, Mrs. Lucy Callahan, who has been appointed executrix of the estate. Keep in mind the fact that Canfield is to have a first-class lecture course the coming season and that the support of every citizen will be needed to make it a financial success.

There will be a special communication of Argus Masonic lodge this (Friday) evening when the M. M. degree will be conferred upon one candidate. A large attendance is expected. Since the hunting season opened very few of the fox squirrels have been seen in the park. It is just possible that some of them took to the woods near town and have been killed.

There will be good crops of hickory nuts, chestnuts, walnuts and butternuts. At the rate reports are disseminating, this will not be true in this locality in the not distant future. There is a large attendance at the Canfield public schools, some of the rooms being rather overcrowded. About 25 new pupils entered the primary department at the opening of the term last week.

The natural gas main on High street has been completed and the line is now being extended out the Salem road. In the course of a few weeks mains will be laid on substantially all streets in the village. On Tuesday Mrs. J. W. Harroff left a basket of Canfield yellow peaches, surely as fine fruit as ever grew in Ohio or any other state. They not only looked good but were of the finest flavor. No peach grower has anything on Mrs. Harroff.

Combating the Chigger. The chigger is a red, six-legged mite so small that it can scarcely be seen with the naked eye. In certain localities all over the corn belt it is abundant from the middle of June until late in August. It seems to be especially common in wood land and on berry bushes. It is naturally vegetarian, and when it causes pain to chickens and children, it is not because it is searching for blood. In fact, entomologists tell us that the chiggers which burrow into the skin, causing red welts, because of the poison which they excrete, by so doing destroy themselves. No very effective method of combating the pest has yet been devised. Washing in hot water and then applying kerosene to the affected parts will do some good. Another good wash is one part of pure crystals of carbolic acid in fifty or one hundred parts of water.—Wallace's Farmer.

NOTHING TO SCARE HIM

HUNTER ROSE SUPERIOR TO FEARS OF COMRADES. Question Put by Inquisitive Boarder, Though Seemed Rather to Imply a Doubt as to the Veracity of the Story He Told.

"I just got back from a big game hunt yesterday," said the young sportsman. "There were six of us in the party and we had a lot of fun." "Did you bring back any trophies?" asked a fellow boarder.

"Well, no, but we had plenty of sport. Two of us who had never killed mountain lion and bear learned exactly how to do it from the four sportsmen on the train going up. The way I do, said one of the old hands, 'is to shoot the bear under the fourth rib, and I always like to get my mountain lion with a bullet just over the left eye.'"

"I don't," said another big-game expert. "I shoot them in the neck." "I like hand-to-hand encounters," said a third expert. "Especially when it comes to bear. Let Mr. Bear start hugging me and he gets my hunting knife right in the heart!"

"The first night after we got to camping one of the old hunters came in and told how he had killed a bear with his hunting knife after a desperate struggle, but the bear had fallen into a chasm where the hunter couldn't get him.

"Another came in and said he had killed the biggest mountain lion he ever saw, but the lion had jumped over a cliff. "A third expert came in and said that he had seen a bear carrying off the other two members of the party by the trousers. He said it was lucky for me that I had stayed in camp that day.

"While we were talking a big storm broke. There was a flash of lightning and a clap of thunder. It scared the hero whose bear had fallen into a chasm and he said: "Boys, I told a lie. I haven't killed a bear or even seen one!"

"Then there came a terrible clap of thunder and the hunter who had brought such sad tidings of our absent friends said: "I told a lie, too. No bear carried off the other boys. They said it looked like rain and so they went into town." "The next clap of thunder did away with the other fellow's lion. When the next flash of lightning came there stood a bear about ten feet high, right in the door of our tent!

"One of the hunters who had achieved such triumphs at various times jumped up and dived into the milk can and closed the top down tight after him. The others bolted under the edge of the tent and escaped. "Oh, I killed the bear," said the sportsman. "As soon as I saw how badly scared the other fellows were I drew my hunting knife and killed the bear. It was funny, though, how frightened those other fellows were!" "Aren't you afraid of thunder and lightning?" asked the inquisitive boarder.
