FRIDAY, JANUARY 2, 1914
The Ohio legislature will convene in special session in Columbus January 19th. It is expected that Gov. Cox will bring many matters of great importance to the people of the state before the law-making body.

There is going to be a mighty scramble among republicans for the nomination for congress in this new 19th district. There appears to be congressional timber enough in Mahoning county alone to supply half the state to say nothing of the small army of candidates in Trumbull and Ashland counties, now linked with Mahoning. Let the republicans and Moozers fight it out and then watch a democrat beat 'em to it.

It is a matter of regret that Representative John J. Whitacre of Canton has determined not to be a candidate for congress in his new district. Men needed in the national legislature, and his retirement from public life will be a distinct loss to the people of the entire country. His reasons for stepping aside are stated in words that cannot be mistaken. They are printed elsewhere in this paper.

WHITACRE TO QUIT, WOULD BE HONEST

Says Washington is No Place For Wide-Awake, Frank, Open Men.

Canton, O., Dec. 29.—Representative John J. Whitacre, Democratic congressman from the eighteenth Ohio district, announced that he would not be a candidate for re-election, attacked Gov. Cox and assailed congress almost in one breath here this afternoon.

The criticism of Cox was provoked by the entrance into the congressional race of State Representative M. A. Warnes of Millersburg, who was one of the governor's right-hand men in the last session of the legislature.

"Cox is behind Warnes in an effort to defeat me," declared Whitacre. "He seems to think he should have the power to name senators and congressmen as well as fill no end of state jobs. The governor and Warnes and the whole crowd can go their own sweet way. I'll not try to stop them. I like a good fight as well as anyone, but I'm tired of the whole political game."

"No man who wants to be intellectually honest has any business in congress. All I've done since I've been down in Washington has been to sit around and try to look wise and that's what any man has to do who isn't willing to battle his convictions for political expediency."

"For instance, I got a letter today from a fraternal order asking me to vote for the immigration bill now pending. I am against the bill and voted against it once, but if I wanted to play the game as it is played in Washington, I would write a letter to the lodge telling my correspondent that I would carefully consider the matter, then I would keep on bluffing until it came to a show-down. After I had cast my vote against the bill I would hurry around and explain that certain matters arising at the last minute made my act necessary and hand out a lot of stuff like that."

"I can't stand that kind of business. I thought there might be a chance for an honest, wide-awake, frank and open business man in congress, but I was quickly disillusioned."

"My business demands my time. I can put it in to better advantage looking after it than after that of the people of the eighteenth district under existing conditions."

The retirement of Whitacre is expected to result in a scramble for the seat in congress from this district, the boundaries of which have been changed since Whitacre was elected for his second term. Besides Warnes, former State Senator Hurst of New Philadelphia is likely to run on the Democratic ticket at the primaries, while it is almost certain Roscoe McCulloch, Canton lawyer and Republican, whom Whitacre defeated last election, will be up again. Whitacre was the first Wilson congressman from Ohio, breaking away from Harmon to lead the New Jersey man's cause. He is known here as "the fighting congressman."

THE CURRENCY LAW.

The currency bill has become the currency law. Now, for the first time since the civil war, the United States has a financial system which permits the expansion and contraction of currency to meet the needs of business.
The benefits of the new measure will be enormous, though they can not all be set forth at once. One point on which the law's severest critics agree with its best friends is that it will make impossible another such disturbance as the Roosevelt panic of 1907. If it did no more than this, the law would be a splendid piece of legislation; but this is really only the beginning of its service to American industry.

No law of any sort can prevent hard times caused by the waste or destruction of capital through wars, foolish taxes, extravagance, or convulsions of nature. But the new law will do much to check hard times caused by needless restriction of money. As fast as the country's banks can be reorganized under this system, money now lying idle will be liberated for use.

Part of this will come from New York whence much of the nation's wealth now heaped up to aid Wall street stock gambling will flow back to the country to be used in actual development. A more easily measured benefit will come from another source.
The new law, having provided other and more effective safeguards against panics, lowers the amount of reserves now kept in bank vaults. If all national banks come into the new system, the amount of money thus set free has been estimated by an eminent Chicago financier at $474,000,000. This is about equal to the entire amount of clearing-house certificates issued to tide over the panic of 1907.

The new law is not perfect. It can be made perfect only by experience, and the co-operation of many minds, animated by a common patriotic purpose. But even as it stands today, it is the greatest advance in financial legislation that has been attempted in this country for half a century.

President Wilson is keeping faith with the people in letter and in spirit, and the co-operation of many minds has given of the quality of his public service—and it is not at all likely to be the last.—Chicago Journal.

THE DROPPING ATROPINE
A most deadly poison, "commonly called drops," into your eyes when they are examined—is absolutely unnecessary, and very dangerous. You should never consent to having it done. Likewise, the wearing of tinted or colored lenses. In twenty-three years daily examining eyes, and in the examination of over one hundred thousand eyes, I have never found it necessary to use Atropine, or prescribe colored lenses. If you are a thinker consider this, then come in and ask questions, and give me the opportunity of proving my statements.
