WHICH PRAYERS?

"More things are wrought by prayer than this world dreams of." But when there is an uncompromising clash of interests in the supplication, how is the world to know which supplicant has the right to expect an answer? The anti-suffragists are indignant that the Chaplain of the House of Representatives should have prayed for the success of suffrage, and they beseege the Chaplain of the Senate to invoke Divine aid on their behalf, to offset the supplications in the lower chamber. Germany and Austria believe that victory will crown their arms because they have invoked the assistance of the Almighty; England, Belgium and Russia have made an equally urgent claim upon supernatural resources. During the Civil War as many sincere prayers arose from the South as from the North and each side besought the favor of heaven. Perhaps the nearest approach to a solution of the problem involved is found in the saying of Lincoln, that he was "more anxious to be sure of being on God's side than that God should be on his side."—Philadelphia Ledger.

THE WILD WOMAN

A wealthy man on a transatlantic steamer agrees to take care of a young girl when her mother dies in the steerage. He knows nothing of her ancestry, and his friends think his act foolish, if not dangerous. How the thing turns out is told in a stirring love story entitled, "The Wild Woman." This fascinating story is complete in next Sunday's issue of The Pittsburgh Dispatch. It is the third of a series of complete stories that The Dispatch publishes every Sunday. You don't have to wait several weeks to finish reading them by installments, but they are all printed in one issue. Read them every Sunday in The Pittsburgh Dispatch.

NORTH BENTON

A home talent entertainment will be given in the North Benton Presbyterian church Friday evening to which the public is invited.

Any article that is endorsed at home is more worthy of confidence. Than one you know nothing about. Endorsed by unknown people. C. H. Edsall, engineer, Canfield, says: "I had pains in my back and the kidney secretions were unnatural. After using Doan's Kidney Pills, my kidney secretions became natural." Price 50c, at all dealers. TEMLIN VISITS ISLE OF PINES

Isle of Pines, Feb. 7, 1915. Editor Dispatch:—We spent two days in Havana and surrounding country. Havana is an interesting city of 360,000 population. Everything you see is different from our American cities; much more like the cities we visited in Southern Europe. Throughout the business sections the second story of all buildings extends out over the sidewalk, supported by heavy round or square columns 12 to 15 feet apart. All stores are open in front as the weather is always warm and the projecting upper stories protect them from storms. Few buildings are more than two stories in height and in the resident sections they are mostly one story high. Buildings are mostly constructed of a soft rock of coral formation and plastered outside, many being of splendid architecture.

The inhabitants, or Cubans, are rather small of stature, varying from light brown to white. They are evidently of mixed Spanish and Indian blood, the high cheek bones indicating the latter race. There are not as many blacks or negroes as I expected to see. I should say not to exceed 10 to 15 per cent. They seem to mingle together, where as in Florida there are separate cars and waiting rooms for the blacks.

Hotel accommodations are not equal to those in Florida. The best rate we could secure in a respectable hotel was $3 per day. And the accommodations did not compare with $2 and $2.50 house in Florida.

They say there are 8,000 saloons in Havana. They occupy the most prominent corners. In fact almost all the corners. They are wide open; no screens before doors and windows. Apparently everybody drinks, but I do not remember seeing anybody drunk or under visible influence of liquor.

We took a 40-mile ride into the country in a sight-seeing car carrying 24 passengers; a very interesting and enjoyable trip except once when the car stuck in the mud and we were all obliged to disembark and wade through mud to solid ground.

Nowhere in the country do you see the evidence of order and thrift that you find everywhere in the farming districts of America. The land is usually in large estates. You see the noble, majestic, "Royal Palm" trees everywhere, with their smooth white trunks 30 to 60 feet high and about a foot in diameter, and often larger at the top than at the ground with a bunch of graceful palm leaves at the top, each leaf 12 to 15 feet in length, gracefully curved, and waving in the wind. Certainly the most graceful trees I ever saw. They are sometimes called "Duster Palms" as they are not unlike a huge feather duster 40 to 60 feet high with the handle stuck into the ground. We saw a number of avenue or lanes with a row of these tall "Dusters" on either side.

We saw large plantations of sugar cane in the distance, with large mills in the midst of each, but did not visit any as owing to excessive rains they were not in operation. We also saw two or three tobacco plantations. I was surprised to see most of the tobacco grown under a covering of cheese cloth, the entire fields being covered over with it, supported on posts and frame work, about seven feet high. It would appear to be an expensive method of protecting the leaves from insects, but this tobacco sells at from $5 to $20 per pound. The principal products of Cuba are tobacco and sugar. They name tobacco first because they produce the best in the world, but they export about $200,000,000 worth of sugar annually and only $25,000,000 of tobacco.

It is not an uncommon sight to pass native Cuban homes with several children playing at you, and all the day they were born. They tell the story of an American lady school teacher who hired to teach a school in the rural district. Imagine her surprise at finding the pupils all in their birthday costume. She told them they must wear clothing. The next morning they appeared at school with only shoes on their feet.

One of the most interesting places we visited was the cemetery just outside the city of Havana. It is quite large and kept in fine condition. Containing a great many beautiful monuments. They have some very strange customs here that I never heard of being practiced elsewhere. There are five classes of funerals held here each ready distinguished. We saw three funerals, each in a different class. The first class, comprising the wealthy class, have a magnificent hearse with 8 to 12 horses attached, all with finest mountings. Second class funerals have less expensive hearse with 4 to 6 horses. Third class funerals never have more than two horses attached, and in fourth class funeral the body is carried to the grave in a rented casket on the shoulders of 4 to 6 men, the casket being returned after the funeral. The fifth class comprise paupers and criminals buried by the city.

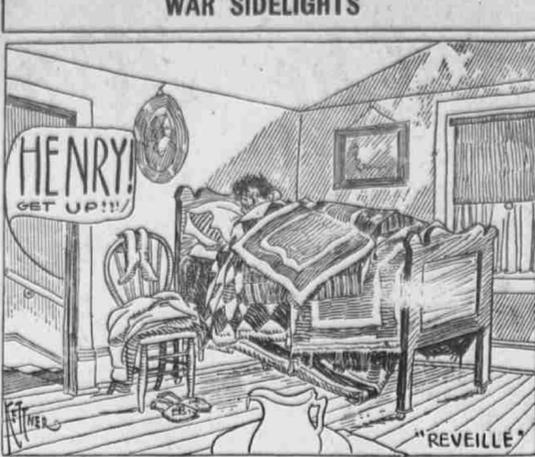

All funerals are before 10 a. m. or after 3 p. m. Women are not permitted to attend any funerals. In 3rd and 4th class funerals the relatives march on foot behind the hearse or casket. At the entrance to the cemetery near the gate is a stand or small platform. All caskets are removed from the hearse and placed on this stand. The priest opens the casket and speaks to the corpse. If it does not reply it is pronounced dead, and the procession proceeds to the grave.

Many bodies are buried in rented graves, a stipulated rental to be paid every five years. As long as the rent is paid the body can rest in peace, but if the relatives do not keep the rent paid the bones are removed. Formerly they were dumped promiscuously on a pile outside the cemetery, but Gen. Wood while governor compelled the erection of a building where they are now kept.

Another strange custom quite generally practiced in first class funerals is to have cemetery lots constructed of marble with a covering having handles over each grave. In the center between these graves is a chamber or tomb of varying size, generally larger than the graves, all below the level of the graves. After all cases of colds and croup, and it never disappoints them. Mrs. E. H. Thomas, Logansport, Ind., writes: "I have found Chamberlain's Cough Remedy to be the best medicine for colds and croup I have ever used, and never tire of recommending it to my neighbors and friends. I have always given it to my children when suffering from croup, and it has never failed to give them prompt relief." For sale

THE BRIER HILL STEEL COMPANY

First Mortgage Six per cent Gold Bonds described in advertisement of The Realty Guarantee & Trust Company, are a very attractive investment. They present to the investor the unusual opportunity of being able to purchase a bond of unquestioned security at a price to yield six per cent.

These bonds are secured by a first mortgage on nearly eighteen million dollars worth of plant and equipment. The Brier Hill Steel Company has a Capital of $15,000,000 and owns the following properties: An Open Hearth Steel Plant, Rolling Mill, and two Blast Furnaces at Youngstown, Ohio; The Thomas Rolling Mill, The Empire Rolling Mill, and The Gary Iron & Steel Company at Niles, Ohio.

The demand for these bonds has been great in this locality on account of the familiarity of people with the Brier Hill Steel Company. The Realty Guarantee & Trust Company has been fortunate in getting a limited number of these bonds to offer to local investors at par and accrued interest, which on account of the Company paying the income tax, makes them a six per cent investment.—Adv.
