ON THE PARIS BOULEVARDS.

An Extraordinary and Cosmopolitan Procession.

The crowds that sit before the Paris cafes on pleasant evenings are solicited to buy a great variety of novelties by sidewalk peddlers. Acrobats appear at short intervals and do their tricks on carpets laid on the sidewalks quite as they did in the days of Quasimodo.

Newboys (who are always croupy men, and never boys) thrust before the idle sojourners at the outdoor tables poles to which folded copies of the evening papers are fastened, showing the name headings, while they utter raucous chant, "La Pa-trie!" "La Presse!"

Now and then an outlander passes in his native garb—an Algerian, a Turk, a Hindu, a Mexican, a Buffalo Bill Indian, a prince from Dahomey—but nobody utters a note of sur-prise. The genuine boulevardier betrays no admission of wonder. He is as stolid as an American aborig-inal.

Sensational women glide by with a panther tread, each advertising some personal charm by unique shape of dress or choice of ornament. Their faces are buried in paint, like im-pressionist pictures. Numerous are children offering some popular deli-cacy for sale in baskets. It is what we call hazelnuts, only green and in the burl.

The boulevardiers shuck them and eat them unripe. There is a low pitched melange of voices, but you detect no one indi-vidual speech except as now and then a smiling pair of men stride by, or a staid couple and the ever familiar twang vibrates with the utterance of Kansas City or Chicago.

First Aid to the Injured.

Fainting is a loss of consciousness due to the diminution of blood supply to the brain. It occurs most frequently in weak, sensitive women, but may also occur to men as well. It usually occurs in crowds, or in crowded halls, theaters and churches, where the at-mosphere is close and the air foul. Fainting usually lasts only a few minutes and the person recovers im-mediately when taken out into the fresh air; however, there are cases where it lasts much longer, some-times for an hour or more. The first aid treatment for fainting is usually very simple. Take the person out into the fresh air, lay them flat on their back, with the head lower than the feet. This can be done by grasping the feet and holding the body so that the head hangs down, or take an ordinary straight back chair, turn it over so that the back forms an angle with the floor and place the person on the back of the chair, with the head hanging down. This position with the head hanging down favors the flow of the blood back to the brain. All tight clothing about the neck and waist should be loosened. Smelling salts or aromatic spirits of ammonia applied to the nostrils, cold water sprinkled on the face, chest and hands, helps to bring the person to—Dr. H. H. Hartung, in National Magazine.

Trade in Reptiles.

The trade in snake skins does not at first thought suggest itself as one requiring large capital or very com-plex organization, at least in this country. But in the far East things are different. The Java Reptile Skin Company has been incorporated in the island of that name, with a cap-ital of $40,000. Branches will be es-tablished in a number of places throughout the island, where live snakes will be purchased from native hunters. Great stress is placed upon buying the reptiles alive, since the skin is much more valuable if the snake is skinned while it is yet liv-ing. Live snakes 12 to 18 feet in length bring good prices, while dead snakes are a drug on the market. The woman who wears with pride a handsome snake-skin coat case will probably not give a thought to the fact that the material was stripped from a living snake. Ever since the episode in Eden some few thousands of years ago snakes have apparently had no right to having their feelings considered.

"OUT-OF-SORTS."

A Printer's Trade Term, The Origin Of Which Is Not Generally Known. In a printing office they sometimes, in setting up a large amount of type, use up all their supply of a certain letter. Extra letters are known as "sorts", and when a printer is "out of sorts" it means that he is not in a very amiable mood; the expression is often used by those who have no idea of its origin. Uncle Josh has lately received a copy of a rural paper pub-lished in Kansas, in which the fol-lowing statement appears: "The editor begs to state that owing to the extra pressure of business this week, the office has run short of his lxxtr 'e', and consequently it has become necessary to use the lxxtr 'x' instead. We sincerely hope our readers will forgive this slight dif-fect, which we promise shall never happen in the future."

TRACES HISTORY LAMP PROGRESS

WRITER TELLS OF SLOW AD-VANCE AWAY FROM DARK AGES.

Little Development Noted Until Dis-covery of Kerosene.

One can easily imagine that man had tenanted the earth for but a very short time when he found it necessary to possess some means of providing himself with artificial light. Indeed, his discovery of the wonderful ele-ment, fire, which doubtless occurred at a very early period of his existence could not fail to lead up thereto, for it would obviously be then but the easiest and most natural of all things that he should snatch a lighted brand from the flames which he had kindled to furnish him with a substitute, however feeble, for the glorious light of the sun when heaven's great lu-minary had sunk to rest.

But here he may be said to have stood still, for he does not appear to have gone beyond the torch stage of his history for centuries afterward, and there are many savage races at the present day who even yet have advanced no further. Indeed, the progress made by man in respect of artificial light until the early part of this century was extraordinarily slow. Lamps, it is true, were in general use among the Jews, Greeks and Ro-mans, and the other great nations of antiquity, and consisted for the most part of a simple vessel which held oil, grease or wax, from the sur-face of which projected a wick.

The light obtained was of the fee-blest description, the flame had no protection whatever from the wind, and the smell which arose could only have been rendered endurable from the fact that "use is second nature."

The Greeks and Romans lavished much artistic excellence upon their lamps, making them with one wick, two wicks, or thirty or forty wicks. But they did not improve their con-struction one step, and to all prac-tical intents and purposes they were no better than the saucer of tallow with its floating cotton which may yet be found flaring and guttering and smoking in some of the out-of-the-way corners of our own far-west-ern land.

The seven branched candlestick placed in the sanctuary by Moses and those afterward prepared for the temple by Solomon were crystal glasses filled with oil and fixed upon the branches of the candlestick, while in private houses the lamps were generally placed on high stands which rested upon the ground.

A very common form of light among the Jews—and which we are told by antiquaries is more often than not intended by the word "lamp" in our Bibles—consisted of a sort of advanced torch made of iron or potter's earth, around which was wrapped old linen which required to be moistened from time to time from the vessel of oil carried by the person using it.

This was the light used by Gideon and his 300 men. It was also the "lamp" of the wise and foolish vir-gins and will explain the reference to oil in the parable.

After the lamp came the candle, whose modest ray we are inclined to regard with a considerable amount of kindness and esteem. But for the candle the dark ages of the world would have been dark in a still more literal sense than they already were, and to this humble servant civilized mankind was indebted for the very best illuminant it possessed, certain-ly until the latter end of the eighteenth century and probably right up to the time of the invention of gas.

The Romans possessed an inferior sort of candle which was made of strings of papyrus or rush dipped in pitch and surrounded with wax. But candles in perfection were not made until a much later period, and Alfred the Great of England has the credit of being the inventor of the horn shield for the flame, and consequently of the "lant-horn."

One proof of their value is the fact that previous to the invention of the Argand burner, in 1784, lamps had entirely fallen out of use, a glance at the prints of that period being suf-ficient to convince one that candles reigned supreme not only in the houses of the people, but in the churches and in all other places of public assembly.

In such places there was an official whose sole duty it was to pass around armed with a pair of snuffers and an extinguisher on the end of a long stick, attending to the requirements of such of his staring rods of tallow or wax as needed his attention.

Candle making at that time also formed a part of the education of every housewife, and the candle box was to be found in every household.

In 1784, as we have stated, came M Argand with his improved lamp. This was the first attack upon the dominion of the candle which could cause that luminary any alarm. Later on appeared an inventor with his coal gas, when the poor candle received a deadly thrust, and in later years paraffin and petroleum put in their appearance and drove it, utterly routed, from the field.

A Great, Special Purchase from the Makers of "Printzess" Wearing Apparel Enables Us to Offer 300 NEW, HIGH-GRADE SUITS Worth $30.00, $32.50 and $35.00 at $24.75

A Saving of $5.25 to $10.25 on every suit in this sale. "Printzess" quality and style appeal to women who appreciate personality Think of buying $30 to $35 Suits in the newest styles of the season—models as illustrated, and many others—at only $24.75—an opportunity that the most particular woman will be eager to share.

This sale of Printzess Suits is the culmination of another McKelvey master stroke in merchandising and is another fulfillment of the extra-ordinary type promises of McKelvey's Wearing Apparel Store to the women of Youngstown. This purchase involved 300 Suits of the smart, distinc-tive type that has made the word "Printzess" in connection with style, of tremendous significance to women everywhere.

The shrewdness of the "Printzess" makers in taking advantage of the low prices on materials that existed early in the season is the one fac-tor that has made possible this wonderful sale. We do not believe much need be said about the style and quality of "Printzess" Suits—every reader of Smart Fashion Publications is well informed regarding the individuality, distinctiveness and exclusiv-ness of "Printzess" Apparel—the suits in this sale are certain to appeal to every woman who has a thorough knowledge of correct fashions—the trademark label "Printzess" is a guarantee of quality, smartness and satisfactory wear.

The illustration gives some idea of the smartness of these suits but cannot convey an adequate impression of the richness of the fab-rics and trimming of the excellence of tailoring. When we say that every suit is lined with finest silk peau de cygne, some idea of the quality can be had. We know that you will like the suits, as well as the fact that equal values cannot be had elsewhere.

Suits for street, Suits for semi-dress wear, Suits representing every fashion con-cept of the season--fashioned from the finest quality materials--such as Gabardines, Poplins, Broadcloths, Venetians and Velvets.

Choice of the Very Fashionable Shades--Navy, Green, Brown, Field Mouse, Plum and Black

Not a single suit in this sale if bought in the ordinary way should have been sold for less than $30.00—many of them are regular $32.50 and $35.00 models, and cannot be duplicated at a cent less owing to the advanced cost of fur-trimmings used so profusely in their adornment—we believe that this sale will go down in history as an epoch event. Surely there has never been an equal opportunity presented as early—values that you would expect to obtain only at the end of a season, are now offered by McKelvey's—$30.00, $32.50 and $35.00 Suits in the fashionable models—the suits women are eager to buy—all at $24.75.

Deliveries by Automobile to Canfield Every Tuesday and Thursday. The G. M. McKelvey Company YOUNGSTOWN, OHIO

WATCHING MYSELF GO BY.

I love to study my fellow men, To sit and watch them hurry about, To guess and wonder and guess again And try to figure their motives out; But even better I love to sit And watch and study myself a bit. I love to feel as the wheels go round, Away inside my cranium thick, I think of my soul till, I'll be bound, I almost fancy I hear it tick. I sit and wonder about it all 'Till last spring seems to have been next fall.

I sit and wonder why I am I Instead of being my neighbor, Smith; And whether I am human and, if so, why, And whether this living's a joke or a myth; And whence came all the machinery That whizzes and zips inside of me. I wonder why I was put right here Instead of on Venus or maybe Mars. There were plenty of folks without me, that's clear; So why for one more did they, drop the bars? But, the bars being down for my en-trance in, Then how did it happen I wasn't a twin?

And why did they make it so hard to find My proper place 'neath the sky's big cup? And why was I given this restless mind That hurries along till I can't keep up? Why will it not stop at my mild re-quest— Just stop for a minute and give me a rest?

And so I sit and wonder and think Of the way my thought like a stream goes by, And wonder if I'm on frenzy's brink Or whether all men are the same as I. But most of all I wonder—do you?— What makes me wonder the way I do! Judge.

Preacher Was Laid Up. Rev. C. M. Knighton, Havana, Fla., writes: "For three months I suffered intense pain in the kidneys and back which at times laid me up entirely. I used 1 1/2 bottles of Foley Kidney Pills and all the pain disap-peared. I feel as if 20 years had been added to my life." Relieves rheu-matic, backache, sore muscles, stiff joints. F. A. A PARABLE OF PEACE.

Three boys there were, Jim, Jack and Joe, Who lived, not very long ago, Quite near a band of roughnecks who No other law than fighting knew. Now, Jim was peaceful as could be, The art of self-protection he Declared but tempting fate, did Jim— Alas! the roughnecks soon got him. Jack loved a fight, he said: "I'll show Those toughs they way they have to go!" So he attacked the band, did Jack— Well, up to date he's not come back. Joe, too, loved peace, but said the way To peace through preparation lay, To peacefully be learned to fight— Thus far in peace he's fared all right. —New York Sun.

A Good One. "I don't see so much in these wit-ticisms aimed at the mother-in-law." "Think she is unduly joshed, eh?" "I do. Mine lives with us and when my wife storms at me the old lady takes my part quite frequently." —Pittsburg Post.

A WAY OUT

A Resident of Canfield Shows the Way. There's one effective way to relieve kidney backache. Liniment and plasters may relieve it; But they seldom reach the cause. Backache is cause to suspect the kidneys. Doan's Kidney Pills are for disor-dered kidneys. Canfield people back them up. Read a case of it. J. B. Hartman, Canfield, says: "My back was lame and the kidney secre-tions burned in passage. One day when complaining of the trouble, a friend said he knew something that would fix me up right away, and that was Doan's Kidney Pills. I had tried other remedies without benefit but I got a box and after I had taken three-quarters of it, I felt better. After I had finished two boxes, I was perma-nently cured." Price 50c at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Hartman had Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.—Adv.
