

HOME HAPPENINGS

This is Arbor Day. Plant at least one tree. The Dispatch today enters upon its forty-first year. A telephone was placed in I. E. Christman's residence on Thursday. J. F. Waters has been appointed assessor in Canfield village by County Auditor Westlake. A stated communication of Argus Masonic lodge will be held this (Friday) evening. A King drag was used Wednesday on the dirt roads about town and they are now in excellent condition. Rev. Benjamin Swan of Utica, N. Y., will preach in the Presbyterian church next Sunday morning and evening. Rev. J. C. Conrad of Pittsburgh occupied the pulpit in the Presbyterian church last Sunday morning and evening. Several Canfield boys have enlisted in the service of their country, enlisting in companies being organized in Youngstown. A large number of people enjoyed the excellent Easter supper served last Saturday evening by the ladies of the M. E. Church. While Dwight Kimmel was in Youngstown Monday afternoon some one stole an extra tire and rim from the back of his automobile. A large crowd enjoyed the bird lecture and entertainment given in college chapel Monday night by Edward Avis of Enfield, Conn. An evangelistic meeting of the W. C. T. U. will be held this (Friday) evening at 7:45 at the home of Mrs. Grace Burger on Court street. A pleasing drama, "After the Game," will be presented by the Normal school class in college chapel Wednesday evening, April 18. Don't miss it. Ray Harroff, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Harroff, formerly of Canfield, carried off first honors in the Salem high school this year, his average grade being 95.5. Rev. T. L. Kiernan and family, who leave shortly for their new home in East Palestine, were tendered a farewell reception at the Presbyterian church Tuesday night. Several flags in front of Broad street business houses were torn down Wednesday night by unknown enemy of the stars and stripes. An effort is being made to discover his identity. In compliance with the proclamation issued by Governor Cox meetings were held in the several churches of the village Wednesday night when prayer was offered for divine guidance during the present war. A man thought to have been out foraging was discovered by Thomas Yeager when he visited his barn Tuesday night. When the nocturnal visitor observed Mr. Yeager approaching he ran to an automobile which had been left at the side of the road and made his getaway. The pupils of the Union school are planning a special celebration for Arbor Day this (Friday) afternoon. The program will begin at 1 o'clock and will consist of exercises, songs, planting of trees, ball game and refreshments. All parents and others interested in the school are requested to attend. The public is informed that it is unlawful to enclose a written communication in a parcel post package, without paying first class postage on the whole package. A written letter properly stamped may be attached to a parcel post package without affecting the cost of the package. Please remember this and avoid trouble. The meeting and banquet of the Canfield Cow Testing Association held Wednesday evening at the Methodist church was largely attended, dairymen being present from nearly every part of the county. One of the features of the program was an address by Judge W. S. Anderson of Youngstown in which he offered suggestions on how to keep boys on farms. Mrs. Florence Brady of Parkers Landing, Pa., died Wednesday of pneumonia, aged 58 years. Deceased was a daughter of James and Rachel Sears and was born in Ellsworth township. She is survived by her husband, J. S. Brady, a daughter, Mrs. W. F. Rittman, of Salem, a son, Jas. Campbell, who resides north of Salem, and her father who lives in San Diego, Cal. The remains were taken to Salem where funeral services will be held. Catherine Samuel Pollock, a young man who came to Canfield last summer expecting to open a confectionary store, but whose plans were interfered with when he was called with his Pennsylvania company of the National Guard to duty on the Mexican border, was killed two weeks ago in an elevator accident. He had been employed to operate the elevator and on the day of the accident had stepped off on one of the upper floors for a minute when the car started upward. In an effort to re-enter the car and secure control of it he was caught between the elevator and the floor above and so terribly crushed that death resulted in about an hour. Deceased was 26 years old. After his return from the Mexican border he came back to Canfield and remained a short time. When he left here a little more than a month ago he said he was going to visit relatives and friends in and near Pittsburgh a few weeks and upon his return would engage in business. He evidently changed his mind. Last Saturday his mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Pollock, and sister Mary came here and packed up his personal effects and on Tuesday they shipped to his old home in Rossiter, Pa.

HOT WATER AS A REST CURE

Four Hours in Bath Good as Eight in Bed. Sleeping in a bathtub full of water kept at blood temperature is claimed by some physicians to give the required amount of rest in half the time that sleeping in bed requires. In other words, four hours' sleep in a bathtub filled with water at the proper temperature—and always maintained at that temperature—will result in the exact amount of restfulness that eight hours in bed will give. The explanation is that warm water completely relaxes the nerves, which ordinary sleep does not necessarily do. The most difficult part of the treatment is in maintaining the water at a constant temperature. For the purpose of accomplishing this result, a middle-western manufacturer has recently brought out on the market a thermostatic water control apparatus. In practice, the patient climbs into a bathtub filled with water, his head protruding thru a hole in a rubber blanket which is strapped around the edges of the tub. Water constantly flows in at one end of the tub, and out at the other.

Manifold Uses of Electricity.

Hardly as old as a grown man, the electrical industry—including railroads, telephones and telegraphs—has already invested $3,125,000,000 in the business of America. Its utility companies alone pay Uncle Sam $200,000,000 every year for taxes—seven out of every ten use it in some form every day. It is unmistakably the most vital factor to-day in America's prosperity. Its resources are boundless. The Secretary of the Interior Lane expresses it, there is enough hydro-electric energy running to waste to equal the daily labor of 1,800,000,000 men or 30 times our adult population. This strange power, only recently harnessed, that has actually revolutionized life and promises moral and reformation in the future—what is it? Mysterious, yet dependable; powerful enough to drive ponderous machinery, yet gentle enough to warm the baby's bottle; almost omnipotent, yet the best trained of servants; omnipresent, yet invisible—what a paradox is this inanimate yet living thing we call electricity for lack of a better name! Many people living to-day remember those practical electric days when electricity was used only for a few telegraph lines, and knowledge of its action and of its laws was exceedingly primitive. Today Berlin radios New Jersey. Every part of the earth and ocean is now within the wireless telegraph range. The next logical step was the wireless 'phone. It is there already. Washington recently talked to Paris and a few days later to Honolulu—5,000 miles away. Voices were distinctly heard over this vast span of air. These illustrations are typical of electrical progress in every phase of life to-day. One statistician now figures 608 practical uses of electricity; another finds 70 uses of electricity on an automobile. In the home, upon the farm, in the factory—everywhere, the world is fast becoming electrified. Of the 20,500,000 homes in the United States one-fourth are already lighted by electricity. At the present rate of transfers from steam to electric drive, we are told that three-fourth of all America's industry will be electrified inside of five years!—From Leslie's.

Small favors are thankfully received and often unthankfully remembered.

LIGHTNING BUGS

Herman is not a bad boy. In fact if he is not nettled he is quite a good little fellow, but like many other little boys he is sometimes a little thoughtless as to pain. That doesn't mean his own pain. He thinks enough of that. It means the pain of other persons or of animals. He sometimes whacks his brother Henry, who is two years older than he, over the arm or the leg with a stick and then wonders that Henry begins to cry. If Henry should hit him like that, he would cry too, and would not wonder, either. The other day it was warm, and the two boys were allowed to stay up till after dark. They thought it ever so nice to sit on the porch steps and see the twinkling little stars come out, at first one by one, then in batches of six, ten, or twelve, and at last by the hundred. What interested them still more was the number of fireflies or lightning bugs that were playing hide and seek in the air and would sometimes come on the porch and crawl up and down the pillars. Herman watched the little insects closely and after a while he caught one and let it crawl on his hand. This gave him much pleasure, but it tickled him and he put the bug on his dress. Suddenly an idea struck him. He ran into the house as fast as his little legs would carry him, opened the desk he had received for Christmas, and took out a small bottle in which he kept water that he called bay rum. This he poured out and hurried back to the porch. Father and mother had gone for a short stroll with Henry, and so Herman was quite by himself for Linda, his baby sister, was in bed. What do you think he did now? He caught a great many of the lightning bugs and put them into the bottle, and when this was about half-full he put the stopper on and placed the bottle on his desk. The sparkling of the little bugs looked pretty in the dark rooms, but think of the poor insects with little air to breathe and no room at all to fly about. You must know that flying about is to a lightning bug the same as playing is to a little boy or girl. After a while Herman got tired looking at his bugs and ran outdoors to play with his wheelbarrow. While he was doing this Henry came in and when he saw the bottle with the curious little lights in it, which kept coming and going, he took up the bottle and pulled out the stopper to smell what was in there. The bugs were just waiting for that! Quickly they crawled out and flew about Henry's nose. Henry became frightened, put down the bottle, and ran out of the room. In the hall he met Herman, who was going to have another look at his treasure. "Come here, Henry," he cried, "and see my lightning bugs. I have a whole lot in a bottle." "Were they lightning bugs?" Henry asked, astonished. "I didn't know what they were, and I opened the bottle, and they all flew out." Herman wept bitterly when he heard that his treasure was gone, but Henry told him that it was cruel to pen the poor insects up like that. Herman, however, could not see the cruelty and went to bed disconsolate. That night, when everybody was asleep, there was a great gathering of lightning bugs on the front porch. The bugs that had been in the bottle had told their story to everybody, and all were angry with little Herman. Every one said that he deserved to be punished, and several propositions were made as to how to punish him. One proposed they all should fly to his bed and crawl all over him all night long and thus tickle him to death, but most thought this too hard on the little fellow. Another proposed to open his desk and eat up all his picture books, and still another proposed to burn up his wheelbarrow. This last they finally decided to do, and they all flew to the wheelbarrow, which Herman had left on the croquet ground, and began holding their lights close to the wood. After a little while smoke began to rise at several points, soon fiery tongues shot up in the still air and at last the whole wheelbarrow was in a merry blaze. The lightning bugs danced around the flames with joyous laughter, and when finally the whole wheelbarrow had been consumed by the fire they said: "That will make the little fellow see that he cannot punish a cruelty without being punished for it." Then they wrote on a card: "Punishment for having been cruel to lightning bugs, who are creatures of God just as well as you." This card they laid on the pile of ashes, where Herman found it the next morning.

Plans to Save Time.

"Mother, may I stay up five minutes longer?" asked Tommie. "Now, what good would five minutes longer do you?" said mother, "and it would only result in breaking the rule about your bedtime." "Well, mother, I could save time by planning what I shall do tomorrow," but mother was not to be convinced.

Lead Soldiers.

"So you are playing with your soldiers, Willie?" said the caller. "Yes, ma'am." "They seem very heavy soldiers." "Yes, ma'am. They're on their way home from the war and they've got a lot of lead in 'em."
