COMING AND GOING

Carl Clay of Greenford was in Canfield Wednesday. C. J. Keller of Green township was in the village Thursday. Albert Bradley is visiting relatives in Youngstown and Niles. Mrs. W. A. Cronk is very ill at her home on South Broad street. E. E. McCartney of Youngstown was in the village last Saturday night. G. N. Boughton spent Monday and Tuesday in Ravenna and Cleveland. Isalah Paula of Green township was in the village Wednesday afternoon. Clyde Pau of North Lima was here Tuesday looking after automobile prospects. E. E. Forney, rural mail carrier out of Calla, was in the village last Friday morning. Thomas McFeely of Hickory gave the Dispatch office a business call Tuesday afternoon. Mark Cox of Youngstown visited here Wednesday with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Cox. Jerry and Frank Ressler and Chas. Fenstermaker of Ellsworth were Canfield visitors Wednesday. John Rowan, who was confined to his home for weeks by sickness, was able to be down town Tuesday. F. W. Fowler of Cleveland spent Sunday here with his mother, Mrs. Martha Fowler, and other relatives. Mrs. Andrew Kroeck and daughter of Lovellville are here visiting the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Toot. R. E. Frederick of Boardman township was a Canfield visitor Tuesday and favored the Dispatch office with a call. Mrs. G. M. Schurrerberger and little daughter of Austintown are here visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. B. Parshal. Myron Wirt of North Lima was in the village Thursday. He is engaged in the sale of farm machinery and all kinds of seeds. Almon Eastman, aged civil war veteran who has been ill for weeks, shows little improvement and is confined to his bed much of the time. Mr and Mrs Harry Cronk of Cleveland were called here this week by the serious illness of the former's mother, Mrs. W. A. Cronk. J. W. Baird, clerk of the Canfield board of education, was in Youngstown last Friday having his books audited by the state inspector. Dr. J. H. Schurrerberger and Frank Buchwalter of Austintown township, accompanied by their sons, were in the village Wednesday afternoon. Clarence Williamson will leave Friday for Quincy, Ill., where he will make his home. His son Alfred will accompany him, but he will remain only a day or two. Mrs. W. W. Wirt of Boardman spent Tuesday in the village. She reported her mother, Mrs. Monroe Kirk, who is spending the winter with her, as enjoying quite good health. Allen A. Fickinger, assistant cashier of the Farmers' National Bank of Canfield, on Tuesday enlisted in the navy as an apprentice seaman and will go to Cleveland Friday to take his final examination. A. M. Templin of Palmer, Neb., is visiting relatives and old friends in this neighborhood. Mr. Templin took Horace Greeley's advice and went west years ago and has done well in farming, live stock and other lines. Paul Messery of Beaver township was in Canfield last Saturday afternoon. Mr. Messery is making an effort to have the Youngstown-Canfield auto mail route extended to Calla from Canfield as mail service over the Erie is very unsatisfactory. Our old friend and patron, Rudolph Basinger, of Beaver township, gave us a call Wednesday afternoon in company with his brother, Mayor Basinger, and son Seth. Mr. Basinger is one of the original subscribers of the Dispatch, having taken the paper more than forty years. He also sends the paper to several relatives. His loyalty to the Dispatch is much appreciated. Steven Zetta, who was among the first young men in this section to go into military training at Camp Sheridan, and some months since was transferred to Camp Sheridan, is enjoying a furlough, visiting his former employer, C. H. Miller, at Toot's Corners and other friends. Mr. Zetta has been having trouble with one of his legs and fears he may be discharged from service. He hopes that this will not prove to be the case as he is anxious to go overseas and fight for his country.

Mistaken Kindness

"There is not," stated the bride, with the air of one at least totally disillusioned, "the slightest use in trying to do nice things for men, or to surprise them and expect them to appreciate it! My goodness, but I have been deceived in my idea of a husband!"

"But you'll recover," the long-married matron assured her, without the flick of an eyelash at the bride's news. "We all do!"

The bride shook her head. "Not with my dreadful experience!" she protested nastily searching for her scrap of a handkerchief. "Why, if Stanley had come home and found me murdered he wouldn't have acted half so bad or thought of stirring up such a commotion! He was so mad that he actually forgot my existence! At least, that is the only way I can excuse the things he said! If he said them and remembered that I was there while he was doing it I shall have to take forgiving him into serious consideration."

"Fudge!" interrupted the long-married lady, cheerfully. "You've either got to forgive your husband, always, or get a divorce, so why waste time thinking about it?"

"My husband has never but once langed out of the front door when we quarreled. That was the first time. He was so angry at me that he said he wanted only to rush away and never come back! After he had walked five miles it dawned on him that there was no place to go but back—that when you banged out of the front door of your home eventually you had to sneak back in, which is humiliating, giving the party waiting at home a triumphant feeling that ground one's proud spirit. What did your Stanley do?"

"I never saw anything like the way Stanley worships that collection of pipes!" said the bride. "It were set in diamonds and rubies he couldn't fess more! He had told me about them so many times that I was perfectly well acquainted with them! There was the French brier, which had accompanied him thru college, and the meerscham his best chum had given him, and the carved one he bought in Europe, and the one he got as a bowling prize, and all the others he had purchased for some reason or other. Just night before last he was looking them over and he said they certainly were in a bad way and needed a thoro cleaning—and just then the Whitsons came to call and he had to put them by. But I remembered what he said. I resolved when I was married to study my husband's wishes and please him in all things—so I decided that when Stanley came home for dinner he should be greeted by a brand clean array of pipes! They were all caked up inside, so first I took a sharp knife and dug all that out—"

"Oh!" groaned the long-married lady in horror.

"Then" pursued the bride despatchedly, "I put them in a pan full of hot water and cleansing powder—and boiled them! Yes, I did—don't faint! One boils out kettles and muffin tins in cleansing powder, so why not a lot of sticky old pipes? They certainly needed it, judging by their perfume! To be sure, I was a little startled when I removed them from their bath. They seemed coming apart in places and were a queer dull color—but I glued 'em together the best I could and, anyhow, nobody cares what color a pipe is."

"I showed them to Stanley proudly when he came home—and from the hop in the air he gave I thought he was going right up thru the ceiling into the Whitson's new rock crystal aquarium and that we would have fried goldfish in plenty for dinner. He yelled, 'Woman! what have you done? Just as tho he were a Shakespearean actor getting thousands of dollars a night—and then I can't exactly remember the lines that came—'"

"Every once in a while he would cease storming to interject explanations of just what I had accomplished. It seems that he had spent the best years of his life in getting accumulated those cakes I had cut out of the pipe bowls. If there is a cake in the bowl of your pipe life flows along our grand sweet song, and if there isn't you might as well be dead. I learned that."

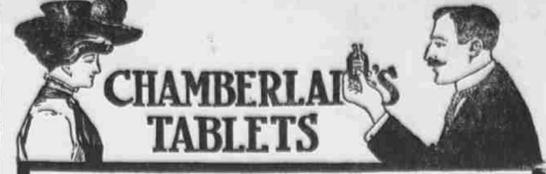

"In another breathing space he informed me that those pipes never again would taste sweet and that their beautiful coloring was totally ruined beyond repair, and, oh, Heaven, why was he born to see this day? I felt just as tho I had an orchestra seat at a two-dollar tag tragedy, and I was terribly impressed with Stanley's dramatic powers—the I must say I think he rather overdid it. And he never uttered one word of thanks for all my work! Don't you think he was perfectly awful?"

"My child," said the long-married lady severely, "I fear you do not appreciate what a jewel of kindness you have in your life companion. What you really deserved for your deed was bread and water for ninety days and hard work on the stone pile. My goodness!"

The king can do no wrong — If the other fellow holds all the aces. All sorts of things come to him who waits even with watchfulness. If a man falls in love, only the woman in the case can rescue him. To some of us, the ukulele is an instrument of auricular punishment. A friend is one who knows all about you and likes you just the same. She who fishes for a husband seldom catches one who is worth while. Nowadays when a gal wants to rub her knee she has to take off her shoe. A man who marries a pug nose girl, is always sure of something turning up. An automobile is not a necessary accompaniment to the leading of a fast life. Many a man is out of work for the simple reason that there is no work in him. Tax payers do not have to settle for the payments made of good intentions. People like to hear themselves talk because they usually talk about themselves. Success is not achieved by luck. Everything depends on the way you go after it. Some men achieve greatness and others brag because it comes natural to them. Don't be dissatisfied with your lot. Hang on to it and wait for a real estate boom. "Haste makes waste" is an old motto, but a lazy one. You've got to hurry to keep up. Warships—Vessels that should never be built with money taken from the sinking fund. Get your sleep at regular hours every night and you will be much the better next day. Don't put on too many airs as you float down life's stream; your little boat may capsize. Take an interest in other people. Then you will have friends who will be interested in you. Experiences teaches that people seldom hit a man when he is down. They usually jump on him. Call a man a diplomat instead of a liar and he will be pleased; yet it may amount to the same thing. There are only two classes of women in the world—those who are married and those who are willing to be. Some people think three of four times before speaking once, and then never say anything worth listening to. It is easier to make enemies than friends, but it is easier to get rid of enemies. The workman who turns out a poor job is an improvement on the one who does nothing but stand around and make remarks. Experience is a great teacher, but by the time it hands a man his diploma he is too old to make much use of his knowledge. The world wants leaders, thinkers, doers, men of power and action. If you think you are one, don't be afraid to step out of the crowd and lead. The others will have to follow. Learn to love the great out-of-doors, the mountains, the plains, and the forests. The more you see of Nature the more you will appreciate God's marvelous forethought in planning for everything, large and small.

KNITTING INSTRUCTIONS Omission of part of instructions printed last week make it necessary to reprint same. Knitters of helmets are asked to follow these directions: Knit on No. 5 needles one piece 60 stitches wide and 9 inches long for front; knit one piece 60 stitches wide and 5 inches long for back. Then slip the stitches of these pieces onto No. 11 steel needles and knit two, puri two for 6 inches. Bind off 26 stitches loosely in center of front and knit and puri back and forth 14 rows. Cast on 26 stitches and continue to knit and puri for 4 inches. Knit one round plain, then knit together the third and fourth stitches from each end of the three inches until only 8 stitches are left on each needle. Knit two stitches together one round which leaves 4 stitches on each needle. Now break off your thread through large needle; take stitches off, draw together and fasten securely. Knitters of socks will please wash and press them before returning. SELLING AT HALF PRICE During our special shoe sale, to close out all Rain Coats for women and children the price will be cut in two. CANFIELD SHOE STORE Entertainment Friday Night The next number of the Normal lecture course will be given in college chapel Friday evening, Feb. 15, by Edward O. Sneath, reader and impersonator. Prof. Sneath presents a program that is throughout most pleasing and fun to enjoy an evening to the full do not fail to hear him. General admission, 25c.—adv. Read the Classified Columns.
