They are generally fitted with feather mattresses, and feather quilts. Very often they are arranged in a niche in the wall like a closet, and have two doors, which the average European, after getting into the bed, closes, thereby rendering it about as airy and well ventilated as a coffin. After the signing of the armistice he British authorities established a postal airplane service to Cologne, and in connection with this service sys tematic use was made of wireless tele phony, says the Halifax Morning Chronicle. Wireless telephone stations were placed on the ground at distances of fifty miles from each other, and with the use of quite small sets were able to transmit messages to aircraft up to thirty miles away. They could also receive from the air to about fifty miles. Frequently these distances were exceeded and an airplane was in communication at one and the same time with three stations. Institutions.

How do the old-fashioned people account for the fact that this second decade of the twentleth century, now near its close (the decade, not the century) has produced more "old-fashloned winters" than any like recorded period in the past? "The climate is growing milder," some people say. It appears more likely it is growing steadily colder. The oldest inhabitant cannot remember a more Vermontish sort of a winter in Boston than the one which has happily come to an end, remarks the Transcript of that city. One would, indeed, rather expect it to be so. Our moribund earth is constantly radiating its heat into the shivery spaces between the planets. The sun is pumping away into regions far beyond the planets, with a positively inconceivable recklessness of wastefulness, its stores of heat and energy. We are trying to warm up the milky way and are only chilling ourselves in doing it. The process has been going on for a million years and more. Perhaps it is beginning to tell on the weather at Boston. Year by year the old-fashloned winters will be getting more new fashioned-until at last Gulana and Amazonia will be sending their Arctic expeditions to Massachusetts bay, as we are now sending MacMillan to

Whereupon I paint a mental picture, all russet and amber and little laughing faces, and call it "Autumn Leaves," for not all our happlest pictures get placed on canvas .-

Christian Science Monitor, Buenos Aires' Rapid Grewth

Buenos Aires is one of the fastest growing cities of the world. The census of 1914 showed 1,575,800 inhabi tants, and the population is now es timated to be more than 2,000,000, since immigrants are arriving at the rate of more than 10,000 a week. Until recently the city has retained me of the characteristics of the small Latin-American city.
