WAR PRESIDENTS

The first conflict between the United States, as a nation, and a foreign power, known as the War of 1812, during Madison's first term, was with Great Britain.
The war with Mexico marked the administration of Polk. The conflict resulted in the acquisition of Texas, New Mexico and California.

The Lincoln administration, which closed with the assassination of the president and succession by Johnson, was taken up almost entirely by the problems of the Civil War, April 14, 1861, to the surrender of the Confederate forces, under Lee, in 1865.

The McKinley administration was marked with Spanish-American conflict, which resulted in the freedom of Cuba and the ceding of Porto Rico, the Philippine archipelago and the Island of Guam to the United States by Woodrow Wilson's tenure of office included the most critical years of the United States in its relations with foreign powers.

The first Wilson administration saw the invasion of Mexico by a force under General Pershing to protect United States interests which had been ignored by the Huerta, Mexican administration, and because of bandit raids north of the border. Wilson's policy of moral suasion and watchful waiting avoided real warfare. The situation cleared when Huerta retired.

OHIO'S WHEAT CROPS HARDLY LARGE ENOUGH TO FEED POPULATION

Liberal fertilizing, the selection of good seed, early and thorough preparation of the seedbed will be required to produce a good crop of wheat in 1922, states Charles Thorne, chief in soil fertility at the Ohio experiment station.

The crop of 1920 gave a final outcome of 12.7 bushels per acre on two and one-fourth million acres as compared with nearly 20 bushels per acre on three million acres for 1919. The yields for 1921, too, have not been satisfactory in many sections of Ohio.

Deducting the amount of seed to grow the 1920 and 1921 crops, scarcely enough wheat was grown in Ohio to feed its population for these years.

In fertilizing wheat the Ohio experiment station has found that 8 tons of barnyard manure taken fresh from the stable and reinforced with acid phosphate (40 pounds to the ton of manure) has given a 23-year average yield of more than 28 bushels of wheat per acre, the wheat being grown after corn. The reinforced manure was applied to clover sod, to be plowed down for corn.

In another test covering 17 years in which phosphated manure is spread on clover sod for corn, the rotation being corn, oats, wheat and clover, wheat has averaged 34 bushels per acre.

The wheat also receives a dressing of 300 pounds of acid phosphate, 50 pounds of muriate of potash and 15 to 75 pounds of nitrate of soda per acre annually.

Yields of the consistently fertilized and limed plots at the Ohio experiment station this year will run to 35 bushels to the acre—being almost triple the average acre yield for 1920.

NEW CHEMICAL KILLS PEACH TREE BORERS

Good news comes to peach growers of the state that the peach tree borer may be controlled through the use of a new chemical, known as paradichlorobenzene.

The peach tree borer has been a serious pest for years and until the effects of the new chemical was discovered worming with a knife was the only remedy.

"WHY WORRY?"

A man in Indiana who gained some reputation as a lecturer on the subject "Why Worry?" has taken his own life as a result (it is said) of financial difficulties.

It is neither "worrying" nor "not worrying" which pushes stragglers over the edge; it is the lack of that sense of proportion which is necessary to any symmetrical and viable existence whatever.

The need for talking thought for the present and approaching duties of life is not abolished by recognition of the fact that to borrow trouble and to give way to gloomy apprehension tend to paralyze normal intelligence and interfere with that constructive activity which is a tonic both to mind and body.

Mischief has come ere now of pinning one's plan of life to tags and catchwords, especially when they are so futile—in general application as the phrase "Why Worry?" Most persons have plenty of reason to "worry," if by "worry" is meant the exercise of prudence and a moderate effort to look out for rough places ahead.

It is true that one cannot see far ahead nowadays; there are too many turnings in the road; but this should rather impel to alertness of mind.—Warren Tribune

THE BAN ON WEEDS

The weeds are a blessing in disguise. They cause the farmer to hoe his corn. In stirring the soil he'll meet the surprise.

That bountiful crops his fields will adorn.

The weeds, they are such a hateful pest To little boy blue in the onion patch; He pulls and he tugs his level best; His strength for them is hardly a match.

Along the roadside and waste lands they creep, Scattering foul seed everywhere. But yet who'd suspect that they play bo-peep, When suddenly they from vacant lots stare.

To weed out the weeds—an endless job, To make the landscape spick and span, Is but to, escape a painful heartthrob, When all observe the wholesome ban.

To be sure it may be required by law, To destroy the foul, obnoxious weeds, But no one, indeed, could pick out a flaw, Should pride impel you to stamp out the weeds.

—Ezra A. Houk, West Austintown

Same Old Story But a Good One Mrs. Mahala Burns, Savannah, Mo., relates an experience of the like of which has happened in almost every neighborhood in this country, and has been told and related by thousands of others, as follows: "I used a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic and Diarrhoea Remedy about nine years ago and it cured me of flux (dysentery). I had another attack of the same complaint three or four years ago and a few doses of this remedy cured me. I have recommended it to dozens of people since I first used it and shall continue to do so for I know it is a quick and positive cure for bowel troubles."—Adv.

FARMERS AND FEEDERS, ATTENTION!

We are not alarmists or anything of that sort, but with war clouds hanging over central and northern Europe, another bumper crop staring us in the face, and with an active and higher cattle market; and a higher fat cattle market, feeder cattle are selling lower than they have for years. Would it not be advisable to take on a few choice quality feeder steers, the kind we are going to offer to you in the next 30 days. Will be glad to have you confer with us.
