HAGERSTOWN, June 22.—An express who arrived from Cumberland, says there is no truth in the report that the Cumberland Home Guards, stationed at New Creek Bridge, were all killed or wounded.

On Wednesday, after the burning of the railroad bridge by the Rebels, the mountaineers collected to the number of 800 to 700, armed with shotguns and hunting rifles.

Dispatches from Washington.

WASHINGTON, June 21. To-day about 5,000 troops of Gen. McDowell's division, marching from Baltimore, were moved forward from Baltimore Cross Roads to the neighborhood of Fall's Church, about three miles distant from either Fairfax Court House or Vienna.

Gen. Johnston, of the cavalry, has returned from a reconnaissance since he was thrown from the saddle by a charge of 2500 Rebels at that point. If, as is probable, the latter should be reinforced to-night, a battle between these forces will be almost inevitable to-morrow.

A collision occurred this morning between a picket guard of the 24 Connecticut Regiment and a Rebel picket near Fall's Church. The Connecticut picket was ordered to occupy the position occupied by the Rebel picket. It is reported that the picket guard of the Connecticut was killed and four wounded. The loss of the other side is supposed to be greater.

This report needs confirmation, although it is from a reliable source. I trust that the Government will be glad to hear of the valor of the Connecticut men, and that the Government of the State will be glad to hear of the valor of the Connecticut men.

Col. Ritchie, of Gen. Andrew's staff, telegraphed to the Governor to-night, at the request of the Government, to start seven of the ten Regiments accepted yesterday by to-morrow. It is said that the Government is now drilling for some time and are thoroughly equipped and ready to start.

It is now evident that the main blow against the Rebels will be struck from the Federal Capital. The army of Washington now consists of fully 45,000 effective men, comprising two infantry and one cavalry Regiment of Regulars, 21 Regiments from the City and State of New York, five from Pennsylvania, four from Maine, three from Connecticut, three from Michigan, two from Ohio, two from Massachusetts, one from Rhode Island, and six batteries of light artillery.

Ten thousand more men will be added to this immense body of men, and the District militia will be sufficient for the events at the Capital; so that a grand army of 45,000 as spirited troops as can be found anywhere, can be moved against the Rebels.

With the aid of Gen. Patterson's division, they will be more than sufficient to break the lines of the Rebels, and drive them in the direction of Richmond.

Surprise has been expressed in some quarters at the failure of the Rebels to prevent the erection of batteries at various points on the right bank of the Potomac. The impending advance of the Union army toward Richmond, however, will either compel the Rebels to remove their batteries to some safe place, or to abandon the Union forces. Gen. Scott is simply impudently taking at a great sacrifice of life what will be had in due time without bloodshed.

Gen. McClellan has been instructed to sweep the last vestige of the Rebels from the mountains and Southwest Virginia. His army will be strongly reinforced for immediate operations South of the Annapolis river.

The heavy sea coast guns now nearly all mounted on the batteries on the Virginia side, and regular gunnery is daily drilled at them for several hours.

An opinion is entertained here that the main body of the Rebel army has not returned to the neighborhood of Harper's Ferry, but only a small force, and are only waiting for the return of all of Gen. Johnston's forces, to prevent the sending forward of any part of Gen. Patterson's troops to strengthen the Federal columns here. The Rebels are not in a position to make any serious attack on the Union army.

Gen. Patterson's division, by creating the impression of the return of all of Gen. Johnston's forces, to prevent the sending forward of any part of Gen. Patterson's troops to strengthen the Federal columns here. The Rebels are not in a position to make any serious attack on the Union army.
