HENRY REED & CO., RUITORS AND PROPRIETORS.

Results of the First Session of the Thirty

Congress has adjourned, with rather more than the usual disorder and hasty legislation at the close. The confusion is not yet sufficiently cleared up to reveal all that it has done and left undone, but enough is apparent to show that the session has been a failure. The same ruinous financial course that has condemned Mr. Buchapan's administration, has been continued under a Republican plurality. The course of the opposition would seem to have been so plain that he that ran might read; either to limit appropriations the income, or to insist that additional means should precede additional appropriations. The first would have been preferable. The expenditures o this government can be reduced to its present revenue. The natural position of the opposition in any government is against increas ing the expenditures, and in favor of cutting down appropriations in every possible way. But the opposition in Congress helped to add about twenty millions to the requirements of the Secretary, without waiting to see whether their revenue measure would be passed Their tariff-bill broke down from its pro tective enormities; at the last moment they were compelled to submit to a twenty-million loan-bill, which only transfers the same amount of treasury-notes into permanent debt, and leaves the government unprovided with means to meet the extra appro priations, unless the Administration can find some loop-hole by which it can reissue the treasury-notes. The result is the same, a debt of twenty or thirty millions for the year, whether it is carried along in deficiencies or in treasury-notes. It could hardly have been worse with a clear Democratic majority in the House. The failure is worse than the previous Democratic financiering of of the same kind, because it indicates that Republican ascendency will bring no relief, and because it grows out of the recklessness of expenditure which is the consequence of protective theories. No expenditure can be regarded extravagant when taxation is held to be a blessing; and the rapid accumulation of public debt only makes ultimate high duties inevitable, and high duties are protection to American industry: in the language of the Chicago Platform, they "secure to the working man liberal wages, to agriculture remunerative prices, to mechanics and manufacturers an adequate reward for their skill, labor and enterprise, and to the nation commercial pros perity and independence." What a pleasing picture! and all within our reach, by only ncreasing the expenditures and adding the amount to the taxes! He who advocates economy in government expenditures, is the worst enemy of his country! He wants to deprive the working man of his wages, and the country of its prosperity! None of the great measures of the session have been carried. The Homestead Bill was compromised to meet the opposition of the Senate, and changed so as to give a pre-emption to heads of families on every alternate section of the public lands, at twenty-five cents an acre, and then was vetoed by Mr. Buchanau. The attitude of the Democratic party in Congress and the veto show that however much Ohio Democratic Conventions may resolve in favor of a Homestead Law, it is not a Democratic measure, and can never pass except against almost a united South. It is plain enough that every additional inducement offered to settlers in the Territories decreases the chances of the South in competing for their possession. Laboring emigrants and small firms are hostile to slavery ; and as the South seem, erroneously, we think, to regard extension as necessary to the preservation of slavery, opposition to a Homestead law is to them nothing but the instinct of self-preservation.

Kansas was refused admission into the Union for no other reason than because she presented herself with a Constitution prohibiting slavery. It is said that madness is a forerunner of destruction. There could not have been much hope for the future of the Democratic party, when it deliberately determined to keep this fatal issue before the the people through another canvass, and to place itself in the position of refusing admission to a State which has now a greater population than two States of the Union, for no other reason than because it has exercised the right which all Democratic platforms concede, of regulating its own domestic institutions.

Inefficient as the Republican plurality in the House has been, the Democratic party in both Houses have shown nothing but recklessness as to the condition of the country, seeming to regard themselves as relieved from responsibility, and the ruinous state of public affairs as only increasing the burdens be transferred to a Republican Administration. The Republicans have been injudicious enough to aid them in this work of benevolence, and between the two stools the country has been allowed to come to the ground.

Fitzontrick's Resignation. It is announced in the Enquirer that Fitzpatrick having declined the nomination for Vice-President on the Douglas ticket, Herschel V. Johnson, of Georgia, was "unanimously nominated" in his place. This was done at Washington on Monday. How he could be unanimously nominated at Washington, at a time when most of the delegates to the Convention had probably reached the bosom of their families, is explained by the qualifying statement that it was done at the nanimous instance of Southern Delegates. As the number of the Southern Delegates was not multitudinous at the close of the Baltimore Convention, they might easily be unanimous. It seems that it was not thought necessary to consult the Northern Delegates, although they formed a considerable portion of those who were "in at the death." However, it will not do to be particular in these days of splits. If half a Convention can do a thing, why not any appreciable fraction? It is but little matter bow the thing was done, if it were well done. Dougas and Fitspatrick constituted a national ticket, one of them representing squatter overeignty and the other the slave code, and both standing on the Cincinnati Platform, What could be better calculated to quiet sectional strife, than to combine both in one

rhis was the sentiment of the Baltimore
Convention; but, unfortunately, Mr. Fitspatrick declined the honor thrust upon him, and the national character of the ticket has been destroyed, by putting another aquatter

Convention:
Convent

Sugarirer says he is so, and that is proof a little stronger than holy writ. It seems to us that the intent of the Convention has been subverted, and, instead of a national ticket, comprising both sides of the question, a sectional, one-sided issue has been substituted.

WE regret to see, so early in the campaign, such a melancholy expression on Mr. Douglas's countenance, as is given in the portraits carried in processions in this city. Such a picture of despair is depressing. We have seen nothing so expressive of missry since the Cosmopolitan Art Union Magazine, a pub-lication intended to elevate the national taste for high art, published its picture of the American Eagle watching over the spirit of Washington, Such a bilious countenance was never seen on an eagle, outside of high art. Something should be done for those portraits. We would suggest also that "Hail Columbia" is a very melancholy tune for political processions. A band-wagon, draped with Douglas portraits, like that which attempted to raise spirits yesterday for the ratification, and playing "Hail Columbia," appears more like going to bury Douglas, than to praise him. The present condition of Democracy is sad enough without such scenes. We would suggest that "our national anthem," which we borrowed from the Dutch, be assigned exclusively for dirges and executions, and something cheerful, like "The Low Back Car," or "Jonny has gone for a Soldier," be substituted for patriotic and political occasions.
