

Official Paper of the City.
We commenced, yesterday, the publication of the city ordinances and advertisements, which was awarded to us on an exhibit of the circulation of the Press. This will increase the interest of our paper to laboring-men and contractors, as well as to all who are interested in the city improvements and regulations.

Nearly Disabilities in Ohio.
J. H. Riley, of Columbus, has published a pamphlet review, by John H. James, of the decision of the Supreme Court of Ohio, of the question whether colored persons may vote in Ohio, as "white male citizens," and whether election officers are liable for mistakes in refusing a person's vote.

The difference between the Republican and Democratic parties in regard to people of color, is merely one of degree, or of policy, not of principle. Both agree that the black man is subject to legal disabilities and inferiority of condition, which may be imposed by the white race. The difference is only between complete subjection to the superior race, with such care and protection as naturally exist in that relation, or partial subjection, and a legal exclusion which creates and increases caste divisions. This is all there is of the question which is now agitating the whole country. Pat in that shape, there are few who will say that it furnishes any material for a division of parties; yet there is nothing else of it, for Republicans profess great indignation at the charge of an intention to give the black man equal rights.

In this State we have a suffrage question which places all parties in rather an absurd light. It is whether persons with a preponderance of white blood shall be deemed white men, and therefore voters. The general tone of the Democratic party toward colored men is not supposed to have made them very favorable to Democracy, consequently Democracy is quite unanimous that all who have any admixture of African blood shall be considered negroes. This is not negro equality, but it is making the slightest visible or suspected fraction of negro blood superior to all the other blood in the veins of a white man. It is pretty strong negro superiority.

Our Courts have uniformly held that the preponderance of blood decided the race of the person. In Virginia the same law prevails, and so, we presume, in most of the South; showing that the duty to "mitigate and finally eradicate the evil of slavery," which but a little while ago was one of the "ancient and time-honored principles"—as the Courier expresses it—of the Democratic party, in Ohio, tends rather more than slavery, to increase the disabilities of the blacks.

The Republicans generally hold that a preponderance of white blood makes a man a voter, although some, who call themselves conservatives, insist that the disfranchisement shall extend to all who have any tinge of African extraction. This is the distinguishing characteristic of what are called conservative Republicans in Ohio. The regular or radical Republicans talk of respecting the decision of the Court, in the regular Dred Scott manner, and insist that a man, the smallest fraction more white than black, shall vote; but they plant themselves immovably on this nice shade, and repel with indignation the charge that they wish to go the slightest shade darker, even to allow the half-bred to vote.

The whole question is involved in such nice shades of admixture, and involves so much suspicion and scandal in cases where the tinge becomes doubtful, that one of these days the mind will be compelled to fly for relief to the system which disposes of the question finally by recognizing no rights at all in the black man, and which settles the admixture question by making the child follow the condition of the mother. This doubtless will shock our Republican friends, but so long as they assume to prescribe how many of the rights of man shall be granted to the colored people, and how many withheld, they had better withhold any denunciations of their Southern brethren for withholding such rights as they regard to be for the best for both races.

Whisky Inspectors.
We should naturally suppose that the talk in some of the city papers about applying to the Courts to prevent the Whisky Inspectors assuming the duties of their appointment, would make itself ridiculous, but it is a complaint, if there is any complaint, is that these appointments were not parcelled out exactly between Republicans and Americans, and the suspicion of the unsoundness of the latter seems to have arisen since, and on account of their appointments.

We suppose that there is no necessity for such offices, and we think that the experiment of leaving business inspection entirely to business-men has worked satisfactorily in New York; but while they exist they are subject to political contingencies. There was no question of the authority of the Board to make these appointments before they were made, and for a Court to interfere now would be very much like the judicial performance of the monkey, in the case of cats and the cheese, nibbling and smelling at the matter in issue, to adjust the party balance of the inspectors.

It has been pretended that the whisky merchants are not satisfied. If so, the merchants do not own these appointments. All they can make, is that competent men be appointed, that they be honestly questioned by the competency of the appointees. They are men of at least common sense, and that is all that is required. Inspection is merely a mechanical test, and as for our editorial cotemporary, who has received an appointment, we will say that a young man who has satisfactorily filled a position on a daily paper in this city, ought to have material in him for at least four Whisky Inspectors.

Democratic Enthusiasm.
Both of our Democratic cotemporaries regret the personal collisions and violence at the primary meetings. We can hardly see the propriety of this. To us it seems a sign of a healthy Democratic sentiment, and of a returning vigor that augurs well for success at the elections. In the palmy days of the Democracy there were the presages of victory. Do our Democratic cotemporaries desire defeat, that they wish to suppress this wholesome Democratic sentiment? The Republicans are obliged to resort to Wide-Awake organizations, Roman-candles, and various artificial stimulants, to excite their enthusiasm, but they use Roman-candles, and the enthusiasm in him, and only requires an outlet, and if it comes out through his mauleys, it is only a healthy eruption.

Timely Passions.
Among the wonderful virtues of Washington, which have been extolled since the death of that great and good man, a most admirable one was the recollections of Richard Montgomery, who was the father of his Country was subject to violent passions, but he had a way of controlling them, so that while he was internally in a terrible rage, his outward demeanor would be as placid as the surface of a steam boiler at a pressure of 150 pounds to the inch. Thus, after he had received intelligence of the defeat of St. Clair, he did the honors of the dinner-table, and maintained his usual affability, through the whole evening, until ten o'clock, when the company had all gone. Then he burst into a terrible rage; he invoked the curse of Heaven; his frame shook, and he tossed his hands wildly. But the tempest soon passed, and he resumed his usual calm voice and impassive demeanor.

This excellent example should be treasured up by the rising generation. Let them, like the Father of his Country, not prevent passion, but treasure it up, like the accumulating pressure in a boiler, until a suitable time and place, and then let it rip! In this way, Washington was able to produce great effects, whereas, if his emotions had been allowed vent, their power would have been frittered away as fast as generated. It will be remembered that at the battle of Long Island he bombarded the British with a terrible broadside of profanity, which if it had been brought earlier into the field, and aided by different generalship, might have given a different turn to the providence of that battle. Some of his biographers try to smooth over that war-habit of the General, which was to him, like the sword of Fitz James, "both spear and shield," but it gave great comfort to Theodore Parker to recognize one human trait in the Father of his Country, and we may be assured from his wonderful habit of suppression until the proper time for a burst, that his swearing at the battle of Long Island was no more than was required to do justice to the subject.

The Seed of the Church.
A letter from Glasgow, Scotland, published in the American Baptist, describes the manner in which Dr. Murray, who went out as the representative of the American Tract Society, and Dr. Leyburn, editor of the Presbyterian, and formerly a slave holder, were received at Edinburgh.

"Our friends here are all anti-slavery men of the most violent character. Dr. Murray and Dr. Leyburn were not only denounced from the pulpit of Edinburgh, because they were connected with a slave-holding Church, but threatened with a mob when they attempted to speak at a prayer-meeting at the old theatre. These people who are designated as the 'mob' were not, says The Paragon, a company of 'low base villains, such as dogged the footsteps of Paul in Grecian cities, but of praying, godly men, who protested that the prayer-meeting at the old theatre should not be desecrated by the presence, and speeches of two American Doctors of Divinity."

Verily, if Abraham should appear among these "praying, godly men," with his two or three thousand slaves, or Paul, who enacted a divine fugitive-slave Law in the case of Onesimus, they would doubtless be torn in pieces, and it is not easy to imagine what they would do to Joseph, who bought up all the starving Egyptians for Pharaoh.

The Corruption of the War Department.
The Degroot award of Secretary Floyd was to a contractor who had failed to fulfill his contract, of the sum of $119,000 for the profits which the Secretary decides that he might have made had he fulfilled it. A contractor who was under bonds to fulfill a contract with the Government, broke down, and instead of suing him to recover damages for the failure, the Secretary awards him this enormous amount, not for losses in carrying out the contract, but for profits that he might have made if he had fulfilled it. Secretary Floyd has distinguished his administration by impregnating the War Department with the taint of corruption. The Fort Saelling and Willitt's Point swindles, and the Degroot robbery are merely specimens of the corruption which has made the War Department a den of thieves.
