

Mrs. Polk the Traitor. The Cincinnati Gazette in a Nashville letter has the following: The following interesting scrap of news is told by an eye-witness to the scene: One day last week, General Buell and all the Brigadiers of the Department, who were present, went in a body to call upon Mrs. James K. Polk and her niece, daughter of the Ex-Gov. General Leavitt. Mrs. Polk seemed determined that no doubt should be entertained as to her sentiments in regard to our unhappy difficulties. The gentlemen present, as they were severally addressed, simply bowed in silence, until General Mitchell, who was standing somewhat away from the party, was singled out. To him Mrs. P. remarked, "General, I trust this war will speedily terminate by the acknowledgment of Southern independence." The remark was the signal for a lull in the conversation, and all eyes were turned upon the General, and his reply. He stood with his lips firmly compressed and his eyes looking full into those of Mrs. Polk as long as she spoke. He then said: "Madame, the man whose name you bear was once the President of the United States; he was an honest man and true patriot; he administered the laws of this Government with equal justice to all. We know no independence of one section of our country which does not belong to all others, and judging by the past, if the mere lips of the honored dead, who lies so near us, could speak, they would express the hope that this war might never cease if that cessation was purchased by the dissolution of the Union of States over which he once presided." It is needless to say the effect was electrical, made, as the remark was, in calm, dignified tone and with that earnestness for which the General is noted, no offense could be taken. Southern independence was not mentioned again during the interview.

Grave of Gen. Jackson. It will gratify many to learn that the stars and stripes again float over the tomb of the Old Hero, who so emphatically declared that "The Union must and shall be preserved." An army correspondent of the Indianapolis Journal writes from Camp Andrew Jackson, March 13th, as follows: Yesterday Gen. Nelson made a reconnaissance in force towards Lebanon. He took with him the 2d Cavalry, three batteries of artillery and five regiments of infantry. Our regiment led the advance guard. We were obliged to leave two batteries about four miles from camp, in consequence of the bridges being too rickety to risk their going over in safety. We went as far out as the "Herrington," the former residence of Andrew Jackson. As we approached the sacred spot the band of the 36th Indiana played a national air—Gen. Nelson halted the column, and the stars and stripes were planted over the tomb of Jackson, and Harris' battery fired a salute of sixteen guns. To comment on the ceremonies of the occasion would be useless, as all who know the history of the hero as New Orleans can readily imagine the feelings of the troops while standing before the tomb of Jackson. General Nelson and staff were invited into the mansion and remained some time.

Fernandina Florida. A letter, in spelling of the occupation by our forces of the Island of Fernandina Fla., says: The inhabitants of Fernandina mostly fled into the interior. There are but few negroes here, and these are of a far more intelligent kind than those we met at Hilton Head and that vicinity. Those remaining here say that their masters have sent all the "boys and girls of clear blood to de country on de main." There are some very fine plantations on the Island scattered about. One of the officers, who has made several tours, informs me that there are some beautiful dwellings, with magnificent gardens, and other flowers being in full bloom, but not a person to be seen anywhere around. In some places the residences are nearly deserted, and in others the furniture packed up but not removed, while in others not a thing is moved out of its place.

Loyal Irish Battalion. The telegraph announces that the bloody battle near Winchester, an Irish battalion in the rebel army of one hundred and fifty men refused to fire upon the Union troops, and though a rebel regiment drove this gallant little band forward to the fight, it could not compel them to discharge a gun at the Federal forces commanded by their noble countryman, General Shields. Honor to the rebel impressed but still loyal Irish! How their hearts must have leapt at the sight of the old flag of Freedom. And what hearty hand-shaking would have taken place, and wild hurrahs would have rung out amid the battle's roar could the loyal Irish Battalion have chance to "fall in," with the ever true-blue Union Irishmen Guards of Cleveland!

Southern Hospitals. Mr. Reeves, a member of the Cincinnati Branch of the Sanitary Commission, returned from a tour of inspection to Nashville on the 23d. He reports the hospitals at and about Nashville, and on the Ohio river, in pretty fair condition, though scarcely adequate to the demand. There is an abundant supply of beds and bedding those articles having been poured in by the Sanitary Commission in every quarter. But there is a sad lack of proper food. The invalids are everywhere suffering on this account, and many deaths are the result. Butter, concentrated chicken, desiccated vegetables, and other articles suitable for invalids, Mr. Reeves says are needed at all the hospitals.

Mistakes. The editors of The Star in the West furnishes the following modest attempt at correcting certain rather widespread mistakes. It is a mistake to suppose that the subscription price of a paper is clear gain to the publisher. It is a mistake to suppose he gets his white paper for nothing. It is a mistake to suppose it is printed without cost. It is a mistake to suppose he can live bodily, by faith. It is a mistake to suppose that it is easy to please everybody. It is a mistake to suppose that a paper is worth buying which contains only what one knows and believes already. It is a mistake to suppose that money due for the paper would be as good to us in a year as it would now. It is a mistake to suppose that we would not be thankful for what is due to us, and for new subscribers.
