

On the Death of Little Elsie M'Neal.
By HER PASTOR, REV. D. R. KNOWLTON, M. D.
In the rose-leaved October
Passed her angelic form away—
Perished with the autumn flower,
All of her that could decay.
We shall miss her oft, and often
Miss that smile and childish glow;
Miss that form that was so young,
Missions of eternity.
But we'll meet her in the future,
When life's dreary days have flown,
Nebly the crystal dome of heaven,
"Mid the angels round his throne.
Oh! say her "rest the branches
Of the never fading pine—
Symbol of our hearts' great sorrow,
Living through all age and time.
Place her in a quiet corner,
In the city of the dead,
Where the birds can sing at even,
Cadminted above her head.
Paling nature's own Argentin,
That earth's love is loved to hear,
When her friends in peace may wander,
To shed in sympathy a tear.

"LOVEST THOU ME?"
I suppose there is no event in the whole life of Christ to which, in hours of doubt or fear, men turn with more anxious thirst to know the close facts of it, or with more intense and passionate dwelling upon every syllable of its recorded narrative, than Christ showing himself to his disciples at the lake of Galilee. There is something pre-eminently open, natural, full-fronting our disbelief in this manifestation. The others, recorded after the resurrection, were sudden, phantasmal, occurring to men in profound sorrow and wearied agitation of heart; not, it might seem, safe judges of what they saw. But the agitation was not theirs. They had gone back to their daily work, thinking still their business lay netwards, unsmothered from the literal rope and drag.
"Simon Peter saith unto them, 'I go a fishing.'"
"They say unto him, 'We also go with thee.'"
True words enough, and having far echo beyond the Galilean hill. That night they caught nothing; but when the morning came, in the clear light of it, behold a figure stood on the shore. They were not thinking of anything but their fruitless hauls. It asked them simply if they had caught anything. They said, No. And it tells them to cast yet again. And John shades his eyes from the morning sun with his hand, to see who it is; and though the glinting of the sea, too, dazzles him he makes out who it is, at last; and poor Simon, not to be outrun this time, tightens his fisher's coat about him, and dashes in, over the nets. One would have liked to see him swim those hundred yards, and stagger to his knees on the beach.
Well, the others get to the beach, too, in time, in such slow way as men in general do get, in this world, to its true shore, much impeded by that wonderful "dragging the net with fishes;" but they get there seven of them in all;—first the demier, and then the slowest believer, and then the quickest believer, and then the two throne-seekers, and the two more, we know not who.
They sit down on the shore, face to face with him, and eat their broiled fish as he bids. And then, to Peter, all dripping still, shivering and amazed, staring at Christ, in the sun on the other side of the coal fire—thinking a little, perhaps, of witness to be made by another coal fire, when it was colder, and having had no word once changed with him by his Master since that look of his—
"to, so amazed, comes the question, 'Simon, lovest thou me?' Try to feel that a little, and think of it till it is true to you.—Ruskin.

THE WATCHERS.
The joy felt in heaven for the rescue of a single human soul is something higher than we have any conception of. A faint idea was conveyed to us by a friend in Scotland, who had witnessed a deeply interesting scene in one of his bays.
On a dark and wild night, a small fishing boat was expected back; there was no lighthouse to guide its course; the wind howled, the storm raged, and the surf dashed madly over the bar of the harbor. Gathered round the bay, on every available spot of ground from whence a glimpse of the boat might be obtained, were the inhabitants of the hamlet. At first they seemed powerless, but, quickly, beacon fires were kindled on both sides of the harbor, which was very narrow at its entrance. Fresh fuel was placed on these occasionally; those who fed the fires never flagged, those who watched never seemed weary. An intense and almost breathless suspense held the assembled multitude, as, out at sea, might be seen at times a little black spot, now seen for a moment, now again hidden from view in the hollows of the waves. The boat approached nearer and nearer the dangerous coast; there was little, very little chance of its escape. Expectation was strained to the utmost when the boat appeared at the crest of the wave almost in the harbor. One moment would decide the doom of the brave men who were toiling for life in the midst of the danger, and in the presence of those they loved. It was agony. At last the waves seemed to rise to an immense height, and the boat which was but a plaything in their giant grasp, was hurled safely into the harbor.
A woman, whose nerves had been strained to the utmost, was standing beside my friend. Now that all was saved, she uttered the cry, "He is saved! he is saved!" and fainted away. It was a wife's cry. We are but at best as the watchers of that bay; we may indeed light the fires, and give some intimation to those who are in danger of perishing where there is safety for them, even in the love of Jesus the Savior. When, through our instrumentality, a soul is saved, the joy to us ought to be great, but it is far greater in heaven.

AN APPLE IN A PHIAL.
On the mantle-piece of my grandmother's best parlor, among other marvels, was an apple in a phial. It quite filled up the body of the bottle, and my childish wonderment constantly was, "How could it have got there?" By stealth I climbed a chair to see if the bottom would unscree, or if there had been a join in the glass throughout the length of the phial. I was satisfied by careful observation that neither of these theories could be supported, and the apple remained to me an enigma and a mystery. One day, walking in the garden, I saw it all. There on a tree, was a phial tied, and within a tiny apple which was growing within the crystal. The apple was put into the bottle while it was little, and it grew there.
Just so must we catch the little men and women who swarm our streets—we call them boys and girls—and introduce them within the influence of the church; for alas! it is hard indeed to reach them when they have ripened in carelessness and sin.—Spurgeon.

UNPEAKABLY GLORIOUS.
Glorious was the scene when Enoch was translated; or when Elijah's chariot of fire and horses of fire appeared in the whirlwind and took him to his glory; yet more glorious was the scene when surrounded by his disciples, the risen Savior slowly and majestically ascended by his own glory, before them, while blessing them, and a cloud received him out of their sight. How unpeakably glorious, then, will be that full result of his resurrection and ascension, when, crowding from every country, in glorious resurrection bodies, shining as the sun at one and the same moment, the myriads and myriads of his saints, of every age, are all gathered into his presence, where is fullness of joy, and are ever with the Lord.—Bickersteth.

THE STARS.
Little folk notions about them. "They are peep holes to let the glory through."
"They are nice lamps that have been good and gone to heaven."
"They are angels' fingers pointing to us."
"Mamma, here is the moon come, and brought a lot of little babies with her."
"When God makes the new moon, doesn't he cut up the old moon to make stars of?"
"Angels eyes looking down at us."
"Nails in the floor of heaven."
"If the wrong side of heaven is so beautiful, what must the right side be?"
"That star you see up there is bigger than this world," said a little girl to her four-year-old cousin. "No, it ain't, or it could keep the rain off," exclaimed the young philosopher.

SAVED BY HOPE.
The servants of Jesus are like the rowers in a boat. They sit with their backs to the bow, and can not see what lies ahead. But the helmsman at the stern is on the look-out, and he steers the boat whithersoever he will. So in our godly undertakings we sit with our backs to the future. It is all unknown, untried and impenetrable. We know not what the morrow may bring forth. That is our business to pull at the oar of prayer and earnest labor. There is a divine Helmsman who sees the future, and who holds the rudder in his hand. We have only to commit our way to him, and to pull at the oar of duty. This is faith. This is faith. This is the way that Paul pulled his boat toward Rome—not knowing or caring what stripes and imprisonments, or what triumphs of the Gospel were awaiting him there. What a blessed thing it is that we can not foresee the future! We might be so paralyzed by the perils, or the difficulties, or the sufferings before us, that we would drop the oars in despair. That a mercy it is that a mother does not know all that shall befall the child of her bosom! What a mercy that we ministers do not know what failures we have got to encounter during the year of labor on which we are just entering! Every true Christian toiler is continually "saved by hope." He pulls at the oar and trusts.—Rev. T. L. Culyer.

HYPOCRISY—OF NO SERVICE.
Coals of fire can not be concealed beneath the most sumptuous apparel, they will betray themselves with smoke and flame; nor can darling sins be long hidden beneath the most ostentatious profession, they will sooner or later discover themselves, and burn sad holes in the man's reputation. Sin needs quenching in the Savior's blood, not concealing under the garb of religion.

Ladies' Boots.
F. SEAL,
Has just received a new invention, in the way of an improvement in Ladies' Boots. The boot is made high in the leg, with elastic sides. The improvement consists in arranging the elastic and lining, that the elastic will clasp the ankle; and the lining, while protecting the elastic from the sweat of the foot, will also yield to its contraction and expansion. Its great beauty is this: that it is easy to put on, fits snugly when on, and protects the foot and limb from cold. It will certainly be a favorite with the ladies. Samples can be seen at his shop.
Mr. Seal has the sole right for this town and township. Shop over Bird's Clothing Store.
