An issue is presented which goes desper than even the decisi in of the date on the McKinley bill or the bullion buying silver bill. Strange things happen here. On the leth, W. W. Belknap, who resigned as Secretary of War in Grant's cabinet, in order to keep from being impeached in connection with the seiling of Iudian post-traderships by his wife, was burried with military honors in Arington cemetery, the War department was closed in his honer and the building heavily draped with mourning. This thing of closing a government department on account of the death of some man who years before was at its head is a senseless custom at hest, and what a mockery in this case.

I know the even well but on second the public should not full once find out my shilliles. I know the even work of running oppositions to 'Ironelad.' but on second thought have concluded that, 'discretion is the better part of valor.'
