BILL NYE ON PROHIBITION.

From the New York World.

Kansas, as we all know, is making a specialty of prohibition these days. From Bleeding Kansas, starving Kansas and grasshopper Kansas she has grown to be better known lately as thirsty Kansas; but as a matter of fact she is doing better with the matter than the outside world is led to believe. The great curse of rum, under the various aliases, is without doubt the public drinking and treating, for in that way a public trust becomes a public bust. The theory in Kansas is that a man who entertains the pleasing exhilaration of rum may secure it in quantities, take it home and insert it into his circulation, wrap a slumber robe around himself and remain so with impunity; but that the saloon where the men go to sit in the sawdust and nurse their wrongs, and get their courage up to where they are not afraid to attack their wives when they get home, is an unnecessary institution. If Topeka may be taken as an illustration of the success of this theory it is no longer an experiment. This is not the statement of Prohibitionists, for I was not thrown among Prohibitionists very much while in Kansas, but it is the opinion of liberal and broad-minded men, that people who want to use wine or other liquors should use them at home in a civilized manner, while those who do not yearn for a stimulant may continue to squeeze along without it.

Bleeding Kansas has become booming and beautiful Kansas. Crime has fallen off, and the bloom and perfume of prosperity mark her progress where once the way was lined with the ruins of shattered commandments and the air reverberated ever and again as the song of the six-shooter was heard in the land or the hush of midday was broken by the low quash of the indictment.

A generation of young men is springing up there who believe in the great success of the movement. Hundreds of men live and thrive in Topeka alone, who are ever ready to go before any tribunal at a moment's warning and have their breaths examined. Saloons are no longer political factors in Kansas. Politics there buds and blossoms in the pure and health-giving ozone of the caucuses and the unadulterated atmosphere of the ennobling primary. Elections are quiet and orderly, and I feel warranted in saying that in Kansas today, politics, aside from the election cigar, are pure.

REDUCING THE REVENUE.

There is a homely old English proverb which declares that there are "more ways of killing a dog than that of choking him to death on butter." Similarly one may say there are more ways of disposing of a surplus than the free trade method advocated by Mr. Cleveland in his message, though he and his satellites would like to make the people of a country believe there is no other. There is a desperate effort on the part of the Democratic press to aid this, by what might be called a "conspiracy of silence" as to any of the other perfectly feasible and far more advisable methods of preventing the accumulation of the surplus.

Our federal revenue comes from two great sources—the tariff and the internal revenue system of taxation. For the fiscal year ending June 30 last, we received (in round numbers) $116,000,000 from internal revenue taxation, and $217,000,000 from custom dues. To strike off at once the internal revenue taxes would be to make as great a reduction as any one could desire in the revenue. This internal system is the last vestige of strictly "war taxes" and it is strange to any one who is old enough to recall the bitter anathemas flung at it by the Democrats from its inception up to 1873 or thereabouts, to see that party making a stand to preserve the system. The argument is this, that whiskey and tobacco ought to be taxed. The tobacco-growing states, however, are an unit in favor of throwing off the tobacco tax. For ourselves, we have not the slightest objection to the taxation of both, and especially of whiskey and all other intoxicating liquors. The more they are taxed, the better it suits us.

But to repeal the internal revenue taxation puts it in the power of the people of the state to tax them, and thus lighten the general burden of taxation. The principle of the government, that the federal administration ought to be supported by the tariff duties, while all direct taxation should be returned to our national policy. The exigencies of war compelled a resort to direct taxation; but the exigency being over, there is no sound reason for its retention. But we have no idea that Congress can or will take so broad a view of the matter. The whiskey tax will probably stand. It is certain that the Democrats will not vote for a measure which would throw out a small army of office-holders by abolishing the need for them. No Democrats will ever vote to abolish an office, so long as there is a chance for a Democrat to hold it and draw sustenance from the public crib. But if the tobacco tax were repealed, that would take off $28,000,000 of revenue, and the total amount of reduction deemed necessary, even by the majority of the free trade advocates themselves, could be reached by abolishing the one import duty which has failed to do its duty as a protective measure. That one item is the sugar duty. We produce only one-tenth as much as we use. The remaining nine-tenths we import, and on it the annual revenue is $58,000,000. The repeal of this and the tobacco tax would make a reduction, at one sweep, of $86,000,000 per year. We present the above facts simply to show how easy it is to reduce the revenue without touching the tariff. It is not clearly decided that the wisest thing to do is to diminish the revenue at all. Wise-headed men are looking ahead, and speculating upon the payment of the quarter of a billion dollars that should be met as soon as possible after the 4th become due, in September, 1891. They are looking to some proper method of using the surplus until that time shall come. But Cleveland and his faction have but one idea—to reduce the revenue by destroying the protective features of the tariff. Let us look at the President's plan a little, and see if it is not a long step toward entire free trade.

What rule does Cleveland lay down? He would not touch the tariff on "luxuries." Therefore the duties will stand on cigars, wines, liquors, silks, satins, jewelry, works of art, foreign fruits, laces, gloves, buttons, trimmings, precious stones, musical instruments, perfumery, etc., which bring in a total of about $45,000,000 a year. The reduction must be made, Mr. Cleveland says, on the "necessaries"—which is to say, on those things which we manufacture most largely; and thus injure American workmen as much as possible.

How much protection would be left if the tariff on these things were cut down by $68,000,000? Not one iota. The country would be deluged with English "cheap and nasty" goods, our own industries would shut down, and tens of thousands of honest workmen be thrown out of work.

The war of the rebellion cost this country in round numbers $9,000,000,000. Who caused this extremely destructive war? The rebellion's slaveholders. This amount would build every mile of railroad in the United States; every mile of side track; every station; every engine; every car; every round house; every machine and repair shop, and place every railroad in corporate running order as they are to-day. Besides there would be enough left to build a comfortable school house for every fifty children in the United States, and build and place in operation every mile of telegraph in the country. To save this country, its institutions, and to transmit to posterity its blessings, the Union soldier fought and suffered. And after all this there is a class in this country who resort to every dishonorable means of depriving the disabled soldier of a pension. Remember we fought for the salvation of the south as well as for the north. We fought for one country and one flag.

AN EXTRAORDINARY OFFER TO ALL WANTING EMPLOYMENT.

We want two live, energetic agents in every county in the United States and Canada to sell a patent article of great merit on its merits. An article having a large sale paying over 100 per cent profit, having no competition, and one which the agent is protected in the exclusive sale by a deed given for each and every county he may secure from us. With all these advantages, to secure from us "an extraordinary offer" to sell good agents at once, but we have concluded to make it to show, not only our confidence in the merits of our invention, but in the ability of any agent that will handle it with energy. The agents now at work, are making from $25 to $100 a month clear, and this fact makes it feasible to make our offer to all who are out of employment. Any agent that will give our business a thirty days trial, and fail to clear $25 in the time, above all expenses, can return all goods to us and we will refund the money, full and complete. No such employer of agents ever dared to make such offers, nor would we if we did not know that we have agents now making more than double this amount. Our large descriptive circulars explain our offer fully, and these we wish to send to every one out of employment who will send us three cent stamps for postage. Send at once and secure the agents in time for the season, and go to work on the terms named in our extraordinary offer.

Address at once: National Novelty Co., 314 Southfield St., Pittsburgh, Pa.

A QUAKER PRINTER'S PROVERBS.

Never send an article for publication without giving the editor thy name, for the name oft times secures publication to worthless articles.

Thou shouldst not rap at the door of a printing office, for he that answereth the rap sneereth in his sleeve and looseth time.

Never do thou loaf about and knock down the type, or the boys will love thee as they do the shade tree—when thou leavest.

Thou shouldst never read the copy on the printer's case, or the sharp and hooked container thereof or he may knock thee down.

Never inquire of the editor for news, for behold it is his business to give it to thee at the appointed time without asking for it.

It is not right that thou shouldst ask him who is the author of an article, for it is his duty to keep such things unto himself.

When thou dost enter his office, take heed unto thyself that thou dost not look at what may concern thee not, for that is not meet in the sight of good breeding.

Neither examine thou the proof sheets, for it is not ready to meet the eye, thou mayst understand.

Prefer thine own town paper to any, and subscribe for it immediately.

Pay for it in advance and it shall be well for thee and thine.—Ex.

An Accommodating Climate.

"Pretty cold out your way, winters, isn't it? Mercury twenty below, and all that sort of thing?"

"Why, yes," said the Minneapolis man, "it is kind o' cold; but then the fact is, the cold sort o' strikes right in and takes hold, and stays there; and you really aren't conscious of it till it begins to thaw out, and the weather's warm, and you can stand it."—Pack.
