

THE GLOBE-REPUBLICAN.

The FORD CO. GLOBE, Established 1877. Consolidated, 1889.
The FORD CO. REPUBLICAN, " 1885.

DODGE CITY, KANSAS, FRIDAY, JANUARY 26, 1894.

EIGHTEENTH YEAR. VOL. XVII, NO 15.

Small Profits and Quick Sales, and One Price to all, is the Motto of our Business. . . . .

THE

Cut and Slash Sale

MEN'S AND BOYS' Clothing!

Cost price not considered.

RUINOUS REDUCTIONS.

MEN'S OVERCOATS.

Value $4.50 overcoats for.....	$2.75.
Value 5.00 overcoats for.....	3.00.
Value 6.00 overcoats for.....	3.90.
Value 7.00 overcoats for.....	4.75.
Value 8.00 overcoats for.....	5.75.
Value 10.00 overcoats for.....	6.75.
Value 12.00 overcoats for.....	8.50.
Value 15.00 overcoats for.....	10.50.
Value 20.00 overcoats for.....	14.50.

Men's Sack and Cutaway Suits.

Value $5.00 suits for.....	$3.00
Value 6.50 suits for.....	4.00
Value 8.00 suits for.....	5.75
Value 8.50 suits for.....	5.90
Value 9.00 suits for.....	6.00
Value 10.00 suit for.....	6.75
Value 11.00 suit for.....	8.00
Value 12.00 suit for.....	8.50
Value 14.00 suits for.....	9.50
Value 15.00 suits for.....	10.00
Value 18.00 suits for.....	12.50
Value 20.00 suits for.....	13.50

BOYS' SUITS.

LONG PANTS AND KNEE PANTS.

In round and square cut, single and double breasted at same proportion of reduction.

STRANGE & SUMMERSBY

H. JUNEAU

DEALER IN

Lumber, Hardware, Doors, Sash,

Mouldings and Windows.

LIME, CEMENT, PLASTER OF PARIS

Paint, Glass, Building Paper, Barb Wire

RED CEDAR SHINGLES

AND RED CEDAR LUMBER.

Red Cedar Shingles are warranted not to check, warp or rot.

YARD SOUTH A. T. & S. F. DEPOT

P. O. Box 564.

DODGE CITY, KANSAS.

VICTORY FOR CUPID.

Novel But Successful Plan for Bringing a Stern Parent to Time.

Yesterday afternoon the Globe-Republican scribe attended the wedding of a young couple whose experience verifies the old adage that "the course of true love never runs smoothly."

The contracting parties are Guy D. Ferrier, only son of the late Dr. J. Ferrier, of Spearville, and Miss Eva M. Henkel, eldest daughter of Paul Henkel, Esq., who has charge of the Postal telegraph office in Dodge City.

The incidents and circumstances which led up to this wedding would furnish material for a delightful novel, but we have not space for more than a very brief sketch.

The happy groom is a young man of rare musical talent and a member of Beeson's celebrated orchestra. The fair young bride is also an accomplished musician, a member of St. Cornelius church choir. Though only seventeen years of age, she is one of the brightest and most talented young ladies of the city.

The families of both bride and groom are very highly esteemed in this community, but young Ferrier has been sowing his wild oats since the death of his father, and when he sought to pay his regards to the young lady, something over two years ago, her father objected most emphatically. The daughter, then in her fifteenth year, fell in love with the young man, and being a spirited girl, opposition only increased her romantic attachment. So, there were interviews whenever opportunity afforded in spite of opposition on every hand. Mr. Ferrier's mother was no more favorable to a match than Mr. Henkel, but this made no difference, and the two lovers solemnly pledged themselves to each other some two years ago.

The paternal blessing was an essential element to enable the lovers to consummate their desires in lawful wedlock, as they couldn't get a license without it, but Paul Henkel shook his leonine locks and wouldn't bless worth a cent.

Though but fifteen years old, Eva was so bright and entertaining that she held a high place in social circles. She was beautiful, amiable, versatile and accomplished beyond what is usual for one of her years. She had a wonderful gift for acting in charades, tableaux and home entertainments, which added to a fine voice for singing, made her a bright star in anything of the kind in which she participated. Being by nature and accomplishments so well fitted to adorn the highest society circles of the land, it is not surprising that Mr. Henkel should require more than ordinary perfection from the young man who might aspire for her hand in matrimony. Hence, though young Ferrier's family was equal to the best, a tendency to satiate his agrarian taste with wild oats, raised an insurmountable barrier against the young man finding favor in the eyes of the old man.

At the court house they were compelled to part, which they did reluctantly, after mingling their tears and caresses in a most affecting manner. Mr. Tarbox extended his hospitality to young Ferrier, while the young lady was taken to her home. Her father was made aware of the situation and how much the young people yearned for matrimony, but for a time refused all overtures in that direction. On Thursday, however, the intercession of Guy's mother caused him to relent and give a written consent that the probate judge might issue a license. A Globe-Republican scribe was present at the time the young man received the coveted document. He was the happiest man in town, and invited ye scribe and a few friends who chanced to be present to attend his wedding instantly. Espying Judge Burson, he pressed that official into service and led the way to Mrs. Moon's cottage where his lady love was waiting. He rapturously folded her in his arms and covered her lovely face with kisses. He joyfully announced to her that victory was won at last, and that they must not lose a moment in having the knot tied, lest Paul Henkel might, like Pharoah, again harden his heart against them.

Harvey Evans was there as right hand man for the bride-groom and would willingly have accompanied him to make some toilet changes, but the impatient bride-groom would not have it that way. Nor would he even wait until the bride's parents could be invited. Chaperoned by Mrs. Moon, the couple withdrew from the parlor while Judge Burson beamed himself up for the trying ordeal. The guests had only a moment to wait before the to fortify the castle and prepared for a regular siege. He laid in an arsenal, consisting of hatchet, hammer, and a large butcher knife, then locked every outside door and nailed up those whose locks were deemed insufficient. The plan was to create the impression that matters had progressed to that stage when a marriage ceremony would be merely the formal ratification of an accomplished fact. When the young lady was first missed from home, and what search was made by her father, we know not, but about 11 o'clock at night Sheriff Beeson and Marshal Rhodes laid siege to the fortifications. They made overtures to the garrison, but not a sound or word came from within. Then the doors were tried one by one in vain. Each was staunchly fastened. A council of war was held, and it was resolved to take the place by storm. The officers used their feet for battering rams. For a time the stout doors resisted all attempts, but at last Marshal Rhodes got his No. 11 brogans wound up to the work and one of the mortise lock doors began to creak and weaken. By herculean effort both officers crushed in the massive door, breaking the substantial steel lock in two and splitting out a section from the side where the lock was mortised in. They entered, but all was still. Not a sound as yet indicated that the house was occupied, though noise enough had been made to awaken any but the dead. All the lower part was searched in vain for the truant pair. Then the invaders ascended the stairs, and began to look through the rooms, beginning at the north-east part. Nothing was discovered until they came to the last room in the south-west corner. The door of this was securely fastened. Here for the first time a response was made to the clamor of the officers. Guy Ferrier called out to know who was there. Mr. Beeson responded. Then Guy inquired to know if he was alone. The sheriff replied in the affirmative, but the beleaguered lover heard low conversation between the two officers outside, and notified them that he knew there was more than one, but that they should beware, as he was loaded for bear. The city marshal then declared himself for war, and began kicking like a battering ram at the door. Mr. Ferrier supposed at first that Paul Henkel was in the attacking party, and it was his plan to keep the old gent at bay until a treaty of peace could be negotiated with a wedding clause, but when he learned who were there, he notified them that they might come in. This door was not only locked but nailed fast as well, but Guy soon removed the nails and opened up for his guests to enter. The weapons of warfare before mentioned were there, conveniently arrayed for action, but the pair of lovers capitulated unconditionally and were escorted to the court house. On the way to the court house they told the officers their purpose was to wring consent to their marriage from Mr. Henkel.

At the court house they were compelled to part, which they did reluctantly, after mingling their tears and caresses in a most affecting manner. Mr. Tarbox extended his hospitality to young Ferrier, while the young lady was taken to her home. Her father was made aware of the situation and how much the young people yearned for matrimony, but for a time refused all overtures in that direction. On Thursday, however, the intercession of Guy's mother caused him to relent and give a written consent that the probate judge might issue a license. A Globe-Republican scribe was present at the time the young man received the coveted document. He was the happiest man in town, and invited ye scribe and a few friends who chanced to be present to attend his wedding instantly. Espying Judge Burson, he pressed that official into service and led the way to Mrs. Moon's cottage where his lady love was waiting. He rapturously folded her in his arms and covered her lovely face with kisses. He joyfully announced to her that victory was won at last, and that they must not lose a moment in having the knot tied, lest Paul Henkel might, like Pharoah, again harden his heart against them.

Harvey Evans was there as right hand man for the bride-groom and would willingly have accompanied him to make some toilet changes, but the impatient bride-groom would not have it that way. Nor would he even wait until the bride's parents could be invited. Chaperoned by Mrs. Moon, the couple withdrew from the parlor while Judge Burson beamed himself up for the trying ordeal. The guests had only a moment to wait before the to fortify the castle and prepared for a regular siege. He laid in an arsenal, consisting of hatchet, hammer, and a large butcher knife, then locked every outside door and nailed up those whose locks were deemed insufficient. The plan was to create the impression that matters had progressed to that stage when a marriage ceremony would be merely the formal ratification of an accomplished fact. When the young lady was first missed from home, and what search was made by her father, we know not, but about 11 o'clock at night Sheriff Beeson and Marshal Rhodes laid siege to the fortifications. They made overtures to the garrison, but not a sound or word came from within. Then the doors were tried one by one in vain. Each was staunchly fastened. A council of war was held, and it was resolved to take the place by storm. The officers used their feet for battering rams. For a time the stout doors resisted all attempts, but at last Marshal Rhodes got his No. 11 brogans wound up to the work and one of the mortise lock doors began to creak and weaken. By herculean effort both officers crushed in the massive door, breaking the substantial steel lock in two and splitting out a section from the side where the lock was mortised in. They entered, but all was still. Not a sound as yet indicated that the house was occupied, though noise enough had been made to awaken any but the dead. All the lower part was searched in vain for the truant pair. Then the invaders ascended the stairs, and began to look through the rooms, beginning at the north-east part. Nothing was discovered until they came to the last room in the south-west corner. The door of this was securely fastened. Here for the first time a response was made to the clamor of the officers. Guy Ferrier called out to know who was there. Mr. Beeson responded. Then Guy inquired to know if he was alone. The sheriff replied in the affirmative, but the beleaguered lover heard low conversation between the two officers outside, and notified them that he knew there was more than one, but that they should beware, as he was loaded for bear. The city marshal then declared himself for war, and began kicking like a battering ram at the door. Mr. Ferrier supposed at first that Paul Henkel was in the attacking party, and it was his plan to keep the old gent at bay until a treaty of peace could be negotiated with a wedding clause, but when he learned who were there, he notified them that they might come in. This door was not only locked but nailed fast as well, but Guy soon removed the nails and opened up for his guests to enter. The weapons of warfare before mentioned were there, conveniently arrayed for action, but the pair of lovers capitulated unconditionally and were escorted to the court house. On the way to the court house they told the officers their purpose was to wring consent to their marriage from Mr. Henkel.

At the court house they were compelled to part, which they did reluctantly, after mingling their tears and caresses in a most affecting manner. Mr. Tarbox extended his hospitality to young Ferrier, while the young lady was taken to her home. Her father was made aware of the situation and how much the young people yearned for matrimony, but for a time refused all overtures in that direction. On Thursday, however, the intercession of Guy's mother caused him to relent and give a written consent that the probate judge might issue a license. A Globe-Republican scribe was present at the time the young man received the coveted document. He was the happiest man in town, and invited ye scribe and a few friends who chanced to be present to attend his wedding instantly. Espying Judge Burson, he pressed that official into service and led the way to Mrs. Moon's cottage where his lady love was waiting. He rapturously folded her in his arms and covered her lovely face with kisses. He joyfully announced to her that victory was won at last, and that they must not lose a moment in having the knot tied, lest Paul Henkel might, like Pharoah, again harden his heart against them.

Harvey Evans was there as right hand man for the bride-groom and would willingly have accompanied him to make some toilet changes, but the impatient bride-groom would not have it that way. Nor would he even wait until the bride's parents could be invited. Chaperoned by Mrs. Moon, the couple withdrew from the parlor while Judge Burson beamed himself up for the trying ordeal. The guests had only a moment to wait before the to fortify the castle and prepared for a regular siege. He laid in an arsenal, consisting of hatchet, hammer, and a large butcher knife, then locked every outside door and nailed up those whose locks were deemed insufficient. The plan was to create the impression that matters had progressed to that stage when a marriage ceremony would be merely the formal ratification of an accomplished fact. When the young lady was first missed from home, and what search was made by her father, we know not, but about 11 o'clock at night Sheriff Beeson and Marshal Rhodes laid siege to the fortifications. They made overtures to the garrison, but not a sound or word came from within. Then the doors were tried one by one in vain. Each was staunchly fastened. A council of war was held, and it was resolved to take the place by storm. The officers used their feet for battering rams. For a time the stout doors resisted all attempts, but at last Marshal Rhodes got his No. 11 brogans wound up to the work and one of the mortise lock doors began to creak and weaken. By herculean effort both officers crushed in the massive door, breaking the substantial steel lock in two and splitting out a section from the side where the lock was mortised in. They entered, but all was still. Not a sound as yet indicated that the house was occupied, though noise enough had been made to awaken any but the dead. All the lower part was searched in vain for the truant pair. Then the invaders ascended the stairs, and began to look through the rooms, beginning at the north-east part. Nothing was discovered until they came to the last room in the south-west corner. The door of this was securely fastened. Here for the first time a response was made to the clamor of the officers. Guy Ferrier called out to know who was there. Mr. Beeson responded. Then Guy inquired to know if he was alone. The sheriff replied in the affirmative, but the beleaguered lover heard low conversation between the two officers outside, and notified them that he knew there was more than one, but that they should beware, as he was loaded for bear. The city marshal then declared himself for war, and began kicking like a battering ram at the door. Mr. Ferrier supposed at first that Paul Henkel was in the attacking party, and it was his plan to keep the old gent at bay until a treaty of peace could be negotiated with a wedding clause, but when he learned who were there, he notified them that they might come in. This door was not only locked but nailed fast as well, but Guy soon removed the nails and opened up for his guests to enter. The weapons of warfare before mentioned were there, conveniently arrayed for action, but the pair of lovers capitulated unconditionally and were escorted to the court house. On the way to the court house they told the officers their purpose was to wring consent to their marriage from Mr. Henkel.

At the court house they were compelled to part, which they did reluctantly, after mingling their tears and caresses in a most affecting manner. Mr. Tarbox extended his hospitality to young Ferrier, while the young lady was taken to her home. Her father was made aware of the situation and how much the young people yearned for matrimony, but for a time refused all overtures in that direction. On Thursday, however, the intercession of Guy's mother caused him to relent and give a written consent that the probate judge might issue a license. A Globe-Republican scribe was present at the time the young man received the coveted document. He was the happiest man in town, and invited ye scribe and a few friends who chanced to be present to attend his wedding instantly. Espying Judge Burson, he pressed that official into service and led the way to Mrs. Moon's cottage where his lady love was waiting. He rapturously folded her in his arms and covered her lovely face with kisses. He joyfully announced to her that victory was won at last, and that they must not lose a moment in having the knot tied, lest Paul Henkel might, like Pharoah, again harden his heart against them.

dal party returned. The groom looked radiantly triumphant, while the bride's pale, spirituelle countenance manifested serene content, though still bearing traces of anxiety caused by the exciting scenes through which she had so recently passed.

The young couple were arranged in matrimonial order before the judge, who pronounced an impressive marriage ceremony, in a voice tremulous with emotion. Then the groom's mother and other lady friends folded the fair young bride to their bosoms, and wept over her. She herself was affected to tears, while the groom seemed to fully appreciate the grave responsibility he had assumed and spoke of the tender care with which he would cherish the delicate lady committed to his keeping.

The happy couple took apartments at the Great Western hotel, and since that time have been occupied in bickling farewell to their many friends in this city.

This forenoon they visited the school where Miss Henkel has been attending and from which she would have graduated next term. There is only one thing that gives the young people any anxiety, and that is the fact that there were just thirteen persons present at the wedding, but Mr. Ferrier says he will take extra care on this account that even the fates shall not harm his young wife.

Though so many obstacles were interposed between her and what she regarded her life's happiness by her father, she still has a very kindly feeling toward him, and requested us not to censure him in giving an account of this romantic affair.

The bridal pair expect to leave this afternoon, accompanied by Mrs. Wright, for Perry, Oklahoma, where Guy will join with his step-father, Mr. Wright, in the drug business.

We hope the young man will steadily adhere to his good resolutions, and settle down into as prosperous a business man as his father was before him, and that the pair will never have cause to regret this marriage which was consummated with as much difficulty.

LATER.—We just learn from Mr. Ferrier that the hatchet, hammer and butcher knife were not intended as weapons of warfare, but had been used in nailing up doors and taking up carpets. Furthermore, that the pair had every reason to think the lady's father would have hunted them up immediately after school was out instead of leaving them to shiver in that cold house till 11 o'clock at night.

They Begin to Cry for our Artesian Farm Lands.

J. M. Kirkpatrick,
Dodge City, Kansas.

Dear Sir:—
The Globe-Republican some week or ten days since said that it was discovered that by sinking nine wells in Ford and adjoining counties that artesian water would flow out plenty for irrigation. Now if you know this to be a fact please write me at once and give particulars, and say what land can be bought for in that part of the county, etc., giving price for a section of land, quality and location, etc.

Yours Respt.
W. A. Nutt.

The above is certainly true and if anyone has land to sell within a short distance of those wells we will put them in communication with Mr. Nutt.

This is one of the fruits of having a good live news paper in Ford county, and having our advantages written-up in a manner to attract the attention of outsiders.

DIED.—Mrs. Elizabeth Murphy, in the 83d year of her age, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Breca, twelve miles north of Dodge City. Elizabeth Burkhaet was born Dec. 11, 1811, near Abingdon, Old Virginia. When she was eighteen years of age she emigrated with her parents to Kentucky, was married to John Murphy when she was 21 years of age. She was the mother of nine children, only four of whom survive her—one son and three daughters. She died trusting in her redeemer, she carried everything to God in prayer, taught her children to pray, visited the sick, never went empty handed, and was kind to the poor. She had been in feeble health for many years, and was waiting for the summons to call her over the river. She was beloved by all who knew her.

Blaine's Handy Manual.

There has just been published in Chicago a most valuable book with the above title, compiled by Prof. Wm. H. Blaine, of Lancaster University. Its 500 pages are full of useful information, and we fully advise all our readers to send for a copy of it. It is a compendium of things worth knowing, things difficult to remember, and tables of reference of value to everybody, that it has never before been our good fortune to possess in such compact shape. Our wonder is how it can be published at so low a price as is asked for it. It is handsomely bound in flexible cloth covers, and will be sent to any address, postpaid, on receipt of 25c in postage stamps, by the publishers, G. W. Ogilvie & Co., 276 & 278 Franklin St., Chicago, Ill.

During the epidemic of la grippe Chamberlain's Cough Remedy took the lead here and was much better liked than other cough medicine—H. M. Bangs, druggist, Chatsworth, Ill. The grip is much the same as a very severe cold and requires precisely the same treatment. This remedy is prompt and effectual, and will prevent any tendency of the disease toward pneumonia. For sale by City Drug Store.

25 in cash will bring 400lbs of Straight flour at BONDURANT & YOUNG.

About a year ago I took a violent attack of la grippe. I coughed day and night for about six weeks: my wife then suggested that I try Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. At first I could see no difference, but kept taking it, and soon found it was what I needed. If I got no relief from one dose I took another, and it was only a few days until I was free from the cough. I think people in general ought to know the value of this remedy, and I take pleasure in acknowledging the benefit I have received from it.—Nashion Mustard, Otway, Ohio. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by City Drug Store.

Bro. Pettilon has resurrected the gory hatchet which was buried during the pendency of the land office appointments—one of which he expected—and sails into Cleveland for all he's worth. Grover had better hide out till his term expires.

BUCKLEN'S ARNICA SALVE.

The Best Salve in the world for Cuts, Bruises, Sores, Ulcers, Salt Rheum, Fever Sores, Tetter, Chapped Hands, Chilblains, Corns, and all Skin Eruptions, and positively cures Piles, or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For sale by City Drug Store.

NEIGHBORS, ATTENTION.

Notice is hereby given that the night of meeting of the M. W. of A. has been changed to the first and third Friday evenings of each month.

I. F. DAWSON, Clerk

E. J. Pined.
She has a harsh and rasping voice,
An eye that's blue and cold,
A temper hot, yet she's my choice,
For she has stores of gold.
—Harper's Bazar

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

Eggs—Granulated Bone Meal for chickens at Bondurant & Young's.

A Sure Cure for Piles.

Itching Piles are driven by moisture like perspiration, and are cured by itching when warm. This is done as well as Blind, Bleeding or Protruding, Piles at once by Dr. Bosanko's Pile Remedy, which acts directly on parts affected, absorbs tumors, always healing and effects a permanent cure. 50 cents. Druggists or Mail Circulars free. Dr. Bosanko, Philadelphia, Pa. Sold by W. F. Pike, Druggist.

Having learned that raising—in Kansas doesn't pay—especially when Lewelling is pay master.—Mrs. Lease has bought a farm in southern California and will engage in raising fruit.

THE FORD GLOBE-REPUBLICAN

Regular meetings held the second and fourth Thursdays of each month, at 7:30 p. m. in Grand Opera House. 517
H. J. P. President,
H. J. P. Secretary.

waiting.
Ada—Nox Priscilla will never marry unless she finds her ideal.
Ada—What sort of a man is her ideal?
Ada—A man who will propose.—Puck.

A Household Treasure.

D. W. Fuller, of Canaan, N. Y., says that he always kept Dr. King's New Discovery in the house and his family always found the best results follow its use. He would not be without it if possible. G. A. Dike, druggist, Calakli, N. Y., says Dr. King's New Discovery is undoubtedly the best Cough remedy that he has used in his family for eight years, and it has never failed to do all that is claimed for it. Why not try a remedy so long tried and tested. Trial bottles free at City Drug Store. Large size 50c. and $1.00.

W. T. COOLIDGE, Abstracter.

Real Estate and Insurance Agent.

Good farms and City Property for sale or trade. Pay taxes for non-residents. Examine lands.

Only set of abstract books in Ford County up to date.

Awarded Highest Honors World's Fair.

DR. PRICE'S
Cream Baking Powder.

The only Pure Cream of Tartar Powder.—No Ammonia; No Alum.
Used in Millions of Homes—40 Years the Standard.